Dear Partners in Education:

It has been a little over three decades since the initial federal legislation –P.L. 94-142— was put in place to ensure that the exceptional educational needs of children and youth with disabilities are identified and services are provided. In our continuing efforts to assist you in meeting both federal and state requirements, the Kansas Department of Education, and specifically the Special Education services team, is please to provide you with this copy of the Special Education Process Handbook.

Each of you should be congratulated for your commitment and dedication of our students. By working together, we have ensured the academic and behavioral success of each and every child. As parents, you can feel confident that your children are being provided the education they deserve and are entitled to.

Being in the 21st century, we will all face challenges as we prepare students for jobs that may not yet exist and provide instruction in courses that have yet to be determined. I hope this handbook is useful to you in meeting these challenges, and that it provides a framework for developing and providing effective services.

Please call upon our staff in Special Education for any assistance you may need or in answering any questions you may have by calling (785) 291-3097 or (800) 203-9462. Once again, thank you for your part in making Kansas' special educational programs a model for the nation.

Sincerely,

Dear Colleagues:

It is my pleasure to present to you the Revised Kansas Special Education Process Handbook based on the components of the 2004 Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act (IDEA 2004). The purpose of this handbook is to provide clear, concise guidance in your work as professional educators in order to ensure students with exceptionalities receive appropriate special education supports and services.

In addition to guidance regarding IDEA 2004 and Kansas Regulations, sample forms and resources are included for your use.

The collaborative effort of those who worked diligently on the revision of this handbook researching, debating and editing over many months is greatly appreciated. I am fortunate to have the opportunity to work with so many dedicated individuals and applaud their efforts to compile such a thoughtful resource for all of us to use.

Thanks to all of you for what you do to support the education of all students in Kansas Schools.

Sincerely,

INTRODUCTION

“As special education administrators we are responsible for creating a vision that will impact all students positively and produce excellent outcomes in achievement and behavior.”

Dr. Mary Kealy, Legislation and Policy Chair, CASE

The reauthorization of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act of 2004 (IDEA 2004) and the updating of the Kansas State Regulations in 2008, continues the commitment of the nation to ensure that all students, including those with disabilities, have access to a free appropriate public education (FAPE), will be included in the general education curriculum and will demonstrate improved educational outcomes.

The Kansas Special Education for Exceptional Children Act expands federal law and regulations to include children who are identified as gifted and provides an opportunity for children enrolled in private schools by their parents to receive FAPE. The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) is required to provide information regarding any rules, regulations and policies not required by IDEA 2004 or Federal Regulations.

The 2008 Kansas Special Education Process Handbook was developed to provide guidance, resources and supports necessary for those professionals who work to improve results for exceptional children. The information provided in the 2008 Kansas Special Education Process Handbook attempts to clarify and define legal requirements of the law and regulations. Each chapter includes a brief overview specifying requirements that are particular to Kansas. In addition, each chapter and the Appendices include valuable resources, sample forms and references. Users of the 2008 Kansas Special Education Process Handbook are encouraged to update any future documents which provide clarification to the law and regulations by KSDE or the Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP).

PARENT RIGHTS IN SPECIAL EDUCATION (PROCEDURAL SAFEGUARDS)

INTRODUCTION

The reauthorization of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act (IDEA), in 2004, retained important procedures which schools must use when evaluating eligibility for special education services, when developing or changing a child's Individualized Education Program (IEP) or when attempting to resolve serious disputes regarding special education issues. These procedures are sometimes referred to as "procedural safeguards" or "parent rights." This chapter will focus on the procedural safeguards related to evaluations and to the development and revision of the IEP. Later chapters will address procedures regarding dispute resolution processes, such as due process hearings, mediation and formal complaints to the state department of education.

The procedural safeguards specified in the IDEA were primarily designed to help schools and parents work together to develop effective educational programs for children with disabilities. In Henry Hudson Central School District v. Rowley, 102 S.Ct. 3034 (1982), the United States Supreme Court said:

"...we think that the importance Congress attached to these procedural safeguards cannot be gainsaid. It seems to us no exaggeration to say that Congress placed every bit as much emphasis upon compliance with procedures giving parents and guardians a large measure of participation at every stage of the administrative process ... as it did upon the measurement of the resulting IEP against a substantive standard. We think that the congressional emphasis upon full participation of concerned parties throughout the development of the IEP, as well as the requirements that state and local plans be submitted to the Commissioner for approval, demonstrate the legislative conviction that adequate compliance with the procedures prescribed would in most cases assure much if not all of what Congress wished in the way of substantive content in an IEP."

This chapter provides information to assist schools in ensuring that parents and students receive their rights as established in IDEA-2004. The following topics will be discussed:

- A. Parent Participation
- B. Definition of Parent
- C. Parent Rights In Special Education Notice
- D. Prior Written Notice
- E. Parent Consent
- F. Parent Consent Requested but Not Provided
- G. Notice of IEP Meeting
- H. Rights for Parents of Gifted Students
- I. Education Advocates
- J. Student Rights at Age 18

A. PARENT PARTICIPATION

To address the requirement to strengthen the role of parents in the special education process, Congress mandated that schools afford parents the opportunity to be members of any decision making team for their child, including eligibility, initial evaluation and reevaluation, and development of an individualized education program (IEP) for the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE). Schools are to ensure that parents have the opportunity to be members of the IEP team that makes decisions on the educational placement of their child. Although logistically this increased involvement of parents may present challenges in arranging convenient meeting times, it should result in decisions that are individualized to meet the unique needs of students and in the development of a closer, more collaborative relationship with parents. Additionally, parents have a responsibility to participate and provide their input into their child's education. School teams recognize the contributions that parents can make to the process and how they can help ensure their child's educational progress (K.A.R. 91-40-25(a); K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.501(b)(c)).

Every child with an exceptionality is entitled to receive a free appropriate public education (FAPE). Parent rights are intended to ensure that children receive FAPE. FAPE is defined as special education and related services that meet the following criteria:

1. are provided at public expense, under public supervision and direction, and without charge;
2. meet the standards of the state board;
3. include an appropriate preschool, elementary, or secondary school education; and
4. are provided in conformity with an individualized education program. (K.A.R. 91-40-1(z))

Parents are to be provided notice of meetings related to eligibility, evaluation, reevaluation, IEP development, provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE) for their child and educational placement decisions, to ensure that they have the opportunity to participate in the meetings (See Section G of this chapter.). The notice requirements are the same as for notice of an IEP meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(b)(1); K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(1)(d); K.A.R. 91-40-24(b)(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.501(b)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(a)(b)(1)).

The school must make reasonable efforts to ensure that the parents understand, and have the opportunity to participate in these meetings, including arranging for an interpreter for parents with deafness, or for parents whose native language is other than English. The parent and the school may agree to use alternative means of meeting participation, such as video conferences or conference calls (K.A.R. 91-40-17(c); K.A.R. 91-40-25(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(e)). These meeting requirements do not apply to informal or unscheduled conversation of school personnel on issues such as teaching methodology, lesson plans, or coordination of service provision. A meeting also does not include preparatory activities that public agency personnel engage in to develop a proposal or response to a parent proposal that will be discussed at a later meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-25(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.501(b)(3)).

In addition to involving parents in making decisions about their children, schools should involve parents of children with exceptionalities in their school improvement planning process. Parents should be involved in designing, evaluating, and where appropriate, implementing school improvement plans. In Kansas, school improvement plans are implemented under Quality Performance Accreditation (QPA), which is built upon standards for student educational performance and includes Special Education Focused Assistance and Monitoring (FAM). Each school should include parents of students with exceptionalities on each School Site Council.

The Kansas special education law (K.S.A. 72-961-997), known as the Special Education for Exceptional Children Act, revised in 2006, (referred to here as the "State statute") also sets forth parental responsibilities. This law requires parents to see that their child with a disability (not giftedness) attends school so that their child can receive the special education and related services on the child's IEP, or to provide such services privately. This means that for a child with a disability who has an IEP (or IFSP ages 3-5) compulsory attendance may begin as early as age 3 (K.S.A. 72-977).

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-977

- (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, it shall be the duty of the parent of each exceptional child to require such child to attend school to receive the special education and related services which are indicated on the child's IEP or to provide for such services privately.
- (b) The provisions of subsection (a) do not apply to gifted children or to parents of gifted children.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-17. IEP team meetings and participants.

- (a) Each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include the following:
  - (1) Scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and informing the parents of the information specified in subsection (b) of this regulation;
  - (2) except as otherwise provided in K.A.R. 91-40-37, providing written notice, in conformance with subsection (b) of this regulation, to the parents of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting.
- (b) The notice required in subsection (a) of this regulation shall meet the following requirements:
  - (1) The notice shall indicate the purpose, time, and location of the IEP team meeting and the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency, including, if appropriate, any other agency invited to send a representative to discuss needed transition services.
  - (2) If the meeting is for a child who has been receiving special education services under the infant and toddler provisions of the federal law but is now transitioning to the provisions for older children, the notice shall inform the parents that they may require that a representative of the infant and toddler program be invited to attend the initial IEP team meeting to assist with the smooth transition of services.
  - (3) The notice shall indicate the following information, if a purpose is to consider postsecondary goals and transition services for the child:
    - (A) The agency will invite the parents' child to attend.
    - (B) One of the purposes of the meeting will be to consider the postsecondary goals and needed transition services for the student.
    - (3) The parents have the right to invite to the IEP team meeting individuals whom the parents believe to have knowledge or special expertise about their child.
- (c) If neither parent of an exceptional child can be physically present for an IEP team meeting for the child, the agency shall attempt other measures to ensure parental participation, including individual or conference telephone calls.

K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(2)

In determining the educational placement of a gifted child, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision is made by a group of persons, including the child's parent and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data and appropriate placement options for gifted children.

K.A.R. 91-40-25. Opportunity to examine records and participate in meetings.

- (a) Each agency shall allow the parents of an exceptional child an opportunity to inspect and review all education records and participate in any meeting concerning their child with respect to the following:
  - (1) The identification, evaluation, or education placement of the child; and
  - (2) the provision of FAPE to the child.
- (b) Each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each meeting concerning their child or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include the following:
  - (1) Scheduling the meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and informing the parents of the information specified in subsection (c) of this regulation; and
  - (2) providing prior written notice of any meeting, in accordance with subsection (c) of this regulation, to the parents of the child.
- (c) The notice required in subsection (b) of this regulation shall indicate the purpose, time, and location of the meeting and the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency or at the agency's request.
- (d) If neither parent of an exceptional child can be physically present for a meeting concerning the child, the agency shall attempt other measures to ensure parental participation, including individual or conference telephone calls.
- (e) As used in this regulation, a meeting shall not include the following:
  - (1) Informal or unscheduled conversations involving agency personnel and conversations on issues including teaching methodology, lesson plans, or coordination of service provision if those issues are not addressed in the child's IEP; and
  - (2) preparatory activities that agency personnel engage in to develop a proposal or response to a parent's proposal that will be discussed at a later meeting.

B. DEFINITION OF PARENT

School personnel must determine the appropriate person(s) to make educational decisions on behalf of the child. Those individuals have a right to receive notice, give or revoke consent, file formal complaints, request mediation, file for a due process hearing, give or deny permission for release of records, etc. (See Appendix A, Figure 1-1, KSDE Memo: "Definition of a Parent")

In Kansas "parent" is defined as:

- A natural (biological) parent;
- An adoptive parent;
- A person acting as a parent;
- A legal guardian;
- An education advocate; or
- A foster parent, if the foster parent has been appointed the education advocate of an exceptional child. (K.S.A. 72-962(m); 34 C.F.R. 300.30)

"Person acting as a parent" means a person such as a grandparent, stepparent or other relative with whom a child lives, or a person other than a parent or relative who is legally responsible for the welfare of a child.

If there is more than one party qualified to act as a parent, and the biological or adoptive parents attempt to act as the parent, the biological or adoptive parents must be presumed to be the parents and legal decision makers, unless they do not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child. A judge may decree or order a person acting as a parent or a legal guardian or persons to act as the "parent" to make educational decisions for the child. The school shall recognize this person(s) as the legal decision maker for the child (K.A.R. 91-40-27(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.30(b)(1)(2)).

If parents are divorced, regardless of which parent has primary custody, the school must provide Prior Written Notice of any special education action to both parents, even if only one parent has the right to consent, unless a court order precludes this from happening. This applies to all special education notice requirements including notice of an IEP meeting. If the school is only aware of one parent's address, the school must make reasonable efforts to locate the other parent in order to provide notice. However, consent from one parent is sufficient. In the event that the school receives consent forms from both parents, with one parent providing consent for the action and the other denying consent, the school is deemed to have received consent and must fulfill its obligation to provide FAPE to the student. The parent who denies consent has the right to request mediation or file for due process.

The following checklist in Figure 1-3 is provided as a guide to school personnel to help determine the legal educational decision maker:

WHO CAN GIVE CONSENT FOR EDUCATIONAL DECISIONS?
1.	Are Parents available? A. ___ Natural (biological) parent(s): If parents are divorced, notify both parents unless a court order precludes this from happening. Consent from one parent is sufficient even if the other parent refuses to consent. B. ___ Adoptive parent(s): If adoption is not final, an education advocate is needed; documentation is the 'Decree of Adoption'. C. ___ Guardian: Guardianship has been completed and is documented with "Letters of Guardianship" issued by a court.
2.	Parent is unknown or unavailable (Person acting as a parent) A. ___ Person Acting as a Parent: A person, such as a grandparent, stepparent or other relative with whom a child lives, or a person other than a parent who is legally responsible for the welfare of a child. B. ___ Education Advocate: Appointment as an education advocate has been completed and is documented with a Letter of Appointment from Families Together. C. ___ Foster parent: Only if appointment as an education advocate has been completed and is documented with a Letter of Appointment from Families Together.
3.	The student at age 18: At age 18 the student becomes his/her own educational decision-maker unless determined by a court to be incompetent.

State Statute: K.S.A. 72-961 (m) "Parent" means: (1) A natural parent; (2) an adoptive parent; (3) a person acting as parent; (4) a legal guardian; (5) an education advocate; or (6) a foster parent, if the foster parent has been appointed the education advocate of an exceptional child. (n) "Person acting as parent" means a person such as a grandparent, stepparent or other relative with whom a child lives or a person other than a parent who is legally responsible for the welfare of a child. (o) "Education advocate" means a person appointed by the state board in accordance with the provisions of section 13, and amendments thereto. A person appointed as an education advocate for a child shall not be: (1) An employee of the agency which is required by law to provide special education or related services for the child; (2) an employee of the state board, the department, or any agency which is directly involved in providing educational services for the child; or (3) any person having a professional or personal interest which would conflict with the interests of the child. State Regulations: K.A.R. 91-40-27 Parent Consent (c) Unless a judicial order specifies to the contrary, an agency shall recognize the biological or adoptive parent of an exceptional child who is a minor as the educational decision maker for the child if the parent exerts his or her rights on behalf of the child, even if other persons meet the definition of parent for the particular child.

C. PARENT RIGHTS IN SPECIAL EDUCATION NOTICE

To ensure that parents have knowledge about their rights under the special education law, schools are required to provide a copy of the Parent Rights in Special Education Notice to the parents:

- At least one time in a school year; and
- Upon a referral or parent request for initial evaluation;
- First formal complaint or due process complaint filed in a school year;
- Upon a disciplinary removal from school that constitutes a change in placement; and
- Upon parent request.

These are the only times when the Parent Rights Notice is required to be provided. IDEA-04 eliminated the requirement to provide the Parent Rights Notice with the notification of each IEP meeting.

The notice is to be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent unless it is clearly not feasible to do so. If the language or mode of communication is not a written language, the school must translate the notice orally or use another mode of communication so that the parent understands the content of the notice. Parents may elect to receive the Parent Rights Notice by electronic mail communication, if the school makes that option available (34 C.F.R. 300.504(a)(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.505). If the Parent Rights Notice is provided electronically the school should have a copy of the email sent to the parent and documentation that the notice was received. The school may place a current copy of the Parent Rights Notice on its Internet Web site if one exists (34 C.F.R. 300.504(b)). However, simply putting the notice on the school's website does not fulfill a school's obligation to provide notice to the parents.

The Parent Rights in Special Education Notice is referred to in this document as Parent Rights Notice, and is referred to as Notice of Procedural Safeguards in federal law (34 C.F.R. 300.504). Special Education Services has developed a model Parent Rights Notice that schools may use or substitute another version if it includes the required content. If a district is not using the State version, the local version must be submitted to the KSDE Special Education Services Team for review and approval. Check with Special Education Services for available translations of the Parent Rights Notice. (See Appendix A, Figure 1-2, Parent Rights Notice. The notice is also available by calling 1-800-203-9462, or on the Special Education Services Homepage at <http://www.kansped.org>.)

The Parent Rights Notice must include a full explanation of all of the procedural safeguards available as identified in K.S.A. 72-988 and 34 C.F.R. 300.504(c):

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-988. Parental rights. (a) The rights of parents of exceptional children shall include, but not be limited to, the rights specified in this section.

(b) The parents of exceptional children shall have the right to:

- (1) Examine all records relating to such child and to participate in meetings with respect to the identification, evaluation, and educational placement of the child, and the provision of a free appropriate public education to such child, and to obtain an independent educational evaluation of the child;
- (2) written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency: (A) Proposes to initiate or change; or (B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child;
- (3) receive the notice required by provision (2) in their native language, unless it clearly is not feasible to do so;
- (4) present complaints with respect to any matter relating to the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child, or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child, subject to the requirements in section 8, and amendments thereto;
- (5) request mediation in accordance with this act;
- (6) consent, or refuse to consent, to the evaluation, reevaluation or the initial placement of their child and to any substantial change in placement of, or a material change in services for, their child, unless a change in placement of their child is ordered pursuant to the provisions of section 17, and amendments thereto, or the agency can demonstrate that it has taken reasonable measures to obtain parental consent to a change in placement or services, and the child's parent has failed to respond. If the parent fails to respond to the request for parental consent to a substantial change in placement or a material change in services, the agency must maintain detailed records of written and verbal contacts with the parent and the response, if any, received from the parent;
- (7) be members of any group that makes decisions on the educational placement of their child;
- (8) demand that their child remain in the child's current educational placement pending the outcome of a due process hearing, except as otherwise provided by federal law and this act;
- (9) subject to the requirements of this act, request a due process hearing in regard to any complaint filed in accordance with provision (4) of this subsection, or as authorized in section 18, and amendments thereto;

(10) appeal to the state board any adverse decision rendered by a hearing officer in a local due process hearing;

(11) appeal to state or federal court any adverse decision rendered by a review officer in a state-level due process appeal; and

(12) recover attorney fees, as provided in the federal law, if they are the prevailing parties in a due process hearing or court action; however, only a court shall have the authority to award attorney fees, and such fees may be reduced or denied in accordance with federal law.

(c) The state board shall develop a model form to assist parents in filing a complaint and due process complaint notice.

(d) The state board shall develop, and thereafter amend as necessary, and distribute for use by agencies, a notice of the rights available to the parents of exceptional children under the federal law and this act. The notice shall include a full explanation of the rights and be made available in various languages and be written so as to be easily understandable by parents.

(e) A list of the rights available to the parents of exceptional children shall be given to the parents only one time each school year, except a copy also shall be given to the parents: (A) Upon initial referral or parental request for evaluation; (B) upon request of a parent; and (C) upon the initial filing of a complaint under subsection (b)(4). History. L. 1999, ch. 116, § 9; L. 2005, ch. 171, § 15; July 1.

A parent of a child with a disability may elect to receive notices required by §§300.503, 300.504, and 300.508 by an electronic mail communication, if the public agency makes that option available.

D. PRIOR WRITTEN NOTICE

One of the procedural safeguards afforded to parents is the required Prior Written Notice of certain proposed special education actions. This notice must be provided to parents within a reasonable amount of time before the date the school proposes to initiate or change the

- identification,
- evaluation,
- educational placement of their child, or
- the provision of special education and related services (FAPE) to their child.

Prior Written Notice is also provided when the school refuses a parent's request to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child, or to make a change to the provision of special education and related services to the child (K.S.A. 72-988(b)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.503(a)). When parents make a request for an evaluation (whether oral or written), KSDE has determined that 15 school days is a reasonable time for providing parents with a Prior Written Notice of the district's proposal to conduct the evaluation or the district's refusal to conduct the evaluation (See Appendix A, Figure 1-4, KSDE Memo, "Reasonable Time" to respond to parent request for evaluation, January 8, 2002).

Additionally, Prior Written Notice is provided to the parent when the school proposes to make a change in services or placement that is not substantial or material. However, parent consent is not required for either of these changes.

The Prior Written Notice provided to parents for each proposed special education action must contain specific information:

- a description of the action proposed or refused;
- an explanation of why the school proposes or refuses to take the action;
- a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the school used as basis for proposed or refused action;
- a description of the other options the IEP team considered and reasons why they were rejected;
- a description of any other factors relevant to the proposal or refusal;
- a statement that the parents have parental rights under the law; and
- sources for parents to contact to assist in understanding their rights. (K.S.A. 72-990)

Additionally, if the notice is to propose to conduct an initial evaluation or a reevaluation, the notice must describe any evaluation procedures that the school proposes to conduct (K.S.A. 72-986(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(a)(1)).

The notice is to be provided in language understandable to the general public, and in the native language of the parent unless it is clearly not feasible to do so. Additionally, if the native language or other mode of communication of the parent is not a written language, the school must take steps to ensure that (a) the notice is translated orally, or by other means, to the parent in his or her native language or other mode of communication (such as sign language); (b) the parent understands the content of the notice; and (c) there is written documentation that these requirements are met. (K.A.R. 91-40-26(b)(c); 34 C.F.R. 300:503(b)(c))

Figure 1-5a and 1-5b, Prior Written Notice for Evaluation or Reevaluation and Figure 1-6, Prior Written Notice for Identification, Eligibility and Placement can be found in Appendix A. Copies of these forms may be accessed at www.kansped.org. If a district is not using these State forms, the local versions must be submitted to KSDE Special Education Services Team for review and approval.

State statute and regulations (K.S.A. 72-990; K.A.R. 91-40-26) reflect Federal requirements for the content and provision of the Prior Written Notice (34 C.F.R. 300.503):

State Statute: K.S.A. 72-986 (b) An agency shall provide notice to the parents of a child that describes any evaluation procedures such agency proposes to conduct. K.S.A. 72-988. Parental rights. (2) written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency: (A) Proposes to initiate or change; or (B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child; (3) receive the notice required by provision (2) in their native language, unless it clearly is not feasible to do so; K.S.A. 72-990. Notice of parental rights; contents. The notice required by subsection (b)(2) of K.S.A. 72-988, and amendments thereto, shall include: (a) A description of the action proposed or refused by the agency; (b) an explanation of why the agency proposes or refuses to take the action; (c) a description of other options that the agency or IEP team considered and the reasons those options were rejected; (d) a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed or refused action; (e) a description of any other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal; (f) a statement that the parents have protection under the procedural safeguards of this act and, if the notice is not an initial referral for evaluation, the means by which a copy of the procedural safeguards can be obtained; and (g) sources for parents to contact to obtain assistance in understanding the provisions of the federal law and this act.

K.A.R. 91-40-26. Notice requirements.

- (a) In providing any notice to the parents of an exceptional child in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990 and amendments thereto, regarding action proposed or refused by an agency, ~~an~~ the agency shall ensure that the notice includes the following descriptions:
- (1) a description of other options the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and
  - (2) a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal.
- (b) The notice shall be ~~is~~ written in a language understandable to the general public and ~~is~~ provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so.
- (c) If the native language or other mode of communication of a parent is not a written language, the agency shall take steps to ensure all of the following:
- (1) The notice is translated orally or by other means to the parent in the parent's native language or other mode of communication.
  - (2) The parent understands the content of the notice.
  - (3) There is written evidence that the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection have been met.

Sources for Parents to Contact to Obtain Assistance in Understanding Parent Rights

In addition to school staff, there are other resources parents can contact for more information to understand their parent rights. IDEA provides funding for a Parent Training and Information (PTI) Center in each state. In Kansas, Families Together, Inc., is the PTI and provides training, information and resources for parents. Schools are encouraged to include any additional resources, including local resources that are knowledgeable and available to parents, including any of the following:

Kansas State Department of Education, 800-203-9462 (in-State only)
Families Together, 800-264-6343
Disability Rights Center of Kansas (DRC), 877-776-1541
Keys for Networking, 785-233-8732

E. PARENT CONSENT

Federal and State laws and regulations have specific requirements for requesting parent consent. Consent is always to be "informed consent." The Prior Written Notice must accompany the request for consent for each proposed special education action. The parent must agree in writing to the action for which his or her consent is sought (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.300). In determining that informed consent is obtained, the following must be insured:

- a. The parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is being sought, in his or her native language, or other mode of communication.
- b. The parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which his or her consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records (if any) that will be released and to whom.
- c. The parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time.
- d. If a parent revokes consent, that revocation is not retroactive (i.e., it does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked). (K.A.R. 91-40-1(l); 34 C.F.R. 300.9)

Parent consent is required for the following actions:

1. Consent to conduct an initial evaluation: If the child is enrolled in a public school or seeks to be enrolled in a public school and the parent does not provide consent (refuses) for initial evaluation, or the parent fails to respond to a request to provide consent, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the initial evaluation of the child by utilizing the procedural safeguards available under special education laws and regulations, including mediation. If the parent refuses or does not respond, the school does not violate its obligation for the provision of FAPE to the child if it declines to pursue the evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a), (f)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(a)).
2. Consent to conduct a reevaluation: If the parent refuses to consent to a reevaluation, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the reevaluation by using mediation or due process procedures. Additionally, informed parental consent is not required to conduct a reevaluation if the school can demonstrate that: (a) it made reasonable efforts to obtain such consent; and (b) the child's parent has failed to respond (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a), (f)(3),(g); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(c)).
3. Consent for the initial provision of services on the IEP: If the parent fails to respond or refuses to consent to initial services the school can not use mediation or due process procedures in order to obtain agreement or a ruling that the services may be provided to the child. Under these circumstances, the school does not violate its obligation for the provision of FAPE to the child for failure to provide the child with the special education and related services for which the public agency requested consent. In addition, the school is not required to convene an IEP meeting or develop an IEP for the child (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(f)(3)(g); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(b)).
4. Consent to make a substantial change in placement (more than 25% of the child's school day): If the parent refuses to consent to a substantial change in placement, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the proposed substantial change in placement by using mediation or due process procedures. Additionally, informed parental consent is not required to make a substantial change in placement if the school can demonstrate that: (a) it made reasonable efforts to obtain such consent; and (b) the child's parent has failed to respond; or (c) if the change is made under the discipline provisions in K.A.R. 91-40-33-38 (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(f)(1)(g); K.A.R. 91-40-1(rrr)).
5. Consent to make a material change in services (25% or more of any one service): If the parent refuses to consent to a material change in services, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the material change in services by using mediation or due process procedures. Additionally, informed parental consent is not required to make a material change in services if the school can demonstrate that: (a) it made reasonable efforts to obtain such consent; and (b) the child's parent has failed to respond; or (c) if the change is made under the discipline provisions in K.A.R. 91-40-33-38 (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a),(f)(1)(g); K.A.R. 91-40-1(mm)).
6. Consent to add a new service, or to delete a service completely (100%): If the parent refuses to consent to add or delete a service, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the action by using mediation or due process procedures. Additionally, informed parental consent is not required to add or delete a service if the school can demonstrate that: (a) it made reasonable efforts to obtain such consent; and (b) the child's parent has failed to respond; or (c) if the change is made under the discipline provisions in K.A.R. 91-40-33-91-40-38. Consent is not required when the change in placement is due to graduation or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services. (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a),(f)(1)(g))

7. Consent for evaluation or services in private school: If the parent of a child who is home schooled or placed in a private school by the parents at their own expense does not provide consent (refuses) for an initial evaluation or reevaluation, or the parent fails to respond to a request to provide consent, the school may not use mediation or due process procedures to obtain consent. (K.A.R. 91-40-27(f)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d)(4)). When the school requests consent for an initial evaluation, a reevaluation or initial services and the parents of a private school or home-schooled child fails to respond or refuses to give consent, the school has met its obligation for child find.

The following requests for parent consent do not require that the parent be provided the Prior Written Notice as described in Section D above, however, parents must be fully informed about what they are being asked to provide consent.

8. Consent to excuse an IEP team member from IEP team meeting: A required member of the IEP Team, may be excused from attending an IEP Team meeting, in whole or in part, when the meeting involves a modification to or discussion of the member's area of the curriculum or related services, if, (a) the parent, in writing, and the school consent to the excusal; and (b) the IEP Team member submits, in writing to the parent and the IEP Team, input into the development of the IEP prior to the meeting (34 C.F.R. 300.321(e); K.S.A. 72-987(b)(2)(3)). (See Appendix A, Figure 4-3, Excusal From IEP Meeting form or www.kansped.org and See Chapter 4, Individualized Educational Program.)
9. Consent to invite outside agency: When the IEP team is considering a child's post-secondary goals and transition services needed to assist the child in reaching those goals, the school is required to invite a representative of any agency that is likely to provide or pay for transition services. The school must obtain parental consent to invite the representative from that agency because confidential information about the child would be shared at the meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(g)). (See Appendix A, Figure 4-5, Consent to Invite Representative of Non-educational Agency to IEP Meeting or www.kansped.org .) (See Chapter 4, Individualized Educational Program.)
10. Consent for Use of Private Insurance and Medicaid: When an IEP team has identified special education and related services for a child who is Medicaid eligible or is covered by private insurance the school must request parent consent at the time the services are determined, but at least annually, in order to access Medicaid or private insurance (See Appendix A, Figure 1-9, Memo to Smith, January 23, 2007).

Parental consent is not required for the following actions:

- Review existing data as part of an initial evaluation or a reevaluation,
- Administer a test or other evaluation that is administered to all children unless consent is required of parents of all children (K.A.R. 91-40-27(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d)); or
- Any other proposed special education action where parental consent is not specifically required by special education statutes and regulations. In these situations, only Prior Written Notice to the parent of the action proposed and the parent's acknowledgement of the notice is required (e.g., less than a material or substantial change in placement, or the school refuses to conduct an initial evaluation or reevaluation).

Requirements for Parental Notice and Consent (34 C.F.R. 300.503)

Kansas Statute
K.S.A. 72-988

(b)(6) consent, or refuse to consent, to the evaluation, reevaluation or the initial placement of their child and to any substantial change in placement of, or a material change in services for, their child, unless a change in placement of their child is ordered pursuant to the provisions of section 17, and amendments thereto, or the agency can demonstrate that it has taken reasonable measures to obtain parental consent to a change in placement or services, and the child's parent has failed to respond. If the parent fails to respond to the request for parental consent to a substantial change in placement or a material change in services, the agency must maintain detailed records of written and verbal contacts with the parent and the response, if any, received from the parent;

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(f)

(f) "Consent" means all of the following:

- (1) A parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought, in the parent's native language or other mode of communication.
- (2) A parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records, if any, that will be released and to whom.
- (3) A parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time, but if the parent revokes consent, that the revocation is not retroactive and does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked.

K.A.R. 91-40-27. Parental consent.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this regulation, an agency shall obtain written parental consent before taking any of the following actions:

- (1) Conducting an initial evaluation or any reevaluation of an exceptional child;
- (2) initially providing special education and related services to an exceptional child; or
- (3) making a material change in services to, or a substantial change in the placement of, an exceptional child, unless the change is made under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-33 through 91-40-38, or is based upon the child's graduation from high school or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services.

(d) An agency shall not construe parental consent for initial evaluation as parental consent for the initial provision of special education and related services to an exceptional child.

- (e) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent before taking either of the following actions:
  - (1) Reviewing existing data as part of an evaluation, reevaluation, or functional behavioral assessment; or
  - (2) administering a test or other evaluation that is administered to all children, unless before administration of that test or evaluation, consent is required of the parents of all children.
- (f) (1) If the parent of an exceptional child who is enrolled or is seeking to enroll in a public school does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or any reevaluation, or for a proposed material change in services or a substantial change in the placement of the parent's child, an agency may, but is not required to, pursue the evaluation or proposed change by initiating due process or mediation procedures.
  - (2) If the parent of an exceptional child who is being home schooled or has been placed in a private school by the parent does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or a reevaluation, or fails to respond to a request to provide consent, an agency may not pursue the evaluation or reevaluation by initiating mediation or due process procedures.
  - (3) An agency shall not be in violation of its obligations for identification, evaluation or reevaluation if the agency declines to pursue an evaluation or reevaluation, because a parent has failed to provide consent for the proposed action.
  - (4) Each agency shall document its attempts to obtain parental consent for action proposed under this regulation.
- (g) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent for a reevaluation or a proposed change in services or placement of the child if the agency has made attempts, as described in K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2), to obtain consent but the parents have failed to respond.
- (h) An agency shall not use a parent's refusal to consent to an activity or service to deny the parent or child other activities or services offered by the agency.

F. PARENTAL CONSENT REQUESTED BUT NOT PROVIDED

1. Parents Do Not Respond

The school must make reasonable attempts to obtain consent from the parents for each special education action as required. Reasonable attempts are defined as at least 2 contacts by 2 different methods and documentation of such attempts should be kept including detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted and the results, copies of written correspondence sent to the parents and their response if any, and visits made to the parents home or place of employment, and the response, if any, from the parents (K.A.R. 91-40-27(g); K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(d)(1)).

As indicated previously, parent consent is required to conduct a reevaluation, or to make a material change in services or a substantial change in placement. However, parent consent is not required for these actions if the parent does not respond to the schools requests for consent and the school can document its attempts to obtain parental consent as outlined above (K.S.A. 72-988(b)(6)). Additionally, under the disciplinary protections, the school would not be deemed to have knowledge of the child's disability if the parent has not allowed an evaluation or refused services; or the child has been evaluated and determined not to have a disability (K.S.A. 72-994(c)).

2. Parents Revoke Consent

Parent consent is voluntary, and may be revoked by the parents at any time. If a parent revokes consent for existing services, the LEA should meet with the parent to attempt to resolve the difficulty, seek mediation, or possibly initiate a due process proceeding to override the parent's objection. If the parent cannot be convinced to continue the services, the LEA may honor the parent's objection and cease provision of the services. The LEA should send written notice to the parent that it stands ready, willing, and able to provide appropriate services to the child, if the parent reconsiders his or her objection to those services.

In this case, a due process hearing is not required. However, if a due process hearing is not initiated by the school district, it is possible the student, at a future time, could ask for compensatory education. If a due process hearing is initiated, the "stay put" provision in the law requires that the services and placement specified in the child's IEP continue during the pendency of the proceedings.

When parents revoke their consent for a specific special education action the revocation is not retroactive but becomes effective on the date that it was revoked (K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.9). Therefore, the revoking of consent does not negate any action that has occurred after the previous consent was given and before the consent was revoked.

If the parent refuses or revokes consent for one service or activity the school cannot deny the parent or child any other service, benefit or activity on the child's IEP (K.A.R. 91-40-27(h)). In addition, because consent for services must be in writing, revocation of consent must also be in writing.

State Statute:
K.S.A. 72-961

(rrr) "Substantial change in placement" means the movement of an exceptional child, for more than 25% of the child's school day, from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment.
(mm) "Material change in services" means an increase or decrease of 25% or more of the duration or frequency of a special education service, a related service or a supplementary aid or a service specified on the IEP of an exceptional child.

G. NOTICE OF IEP TEAM MEETING

The school must take steps to ensure that one or both parents are present at each IEP meeting or are otherwise afforded the opportunity to participate in the IEP meeting. The meeting is to be scheduled at a mutually agreed upon time and place. The school must provide notice of an IEP meeting to the parents for the initial IEP meeting and any subsequent IEP meetings. The notice must be provided in writing at least 10 days prior to the meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(2)) and inform the parents that their child is invited to attend the meeting. The written notice must indicate:

1. the purpose;
2. date;
3. time;
4. location of the meeting;
5. the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the school (The school is to notify the parents about who will be in attendance at an IEP team meeting, however, individuals may be indicated by position only. The school may elect to identify participants by name, but they have no obligation to do so.); and
6. inform the parents of their right to invite to the IEP meeting individuals whom the parents believe to have knowledge or special expertise about their child;
7. inform the parents that if their child was previously served in Part C they may request that the local Part C coordinator or other representative be invited to participate in the initial IEP meeting to ensure a smooth transition of services.

In addition, beginning not later than the first IEP to be in effect when the child turns 14, or younger if determined appropriate by the IEP team, the notice must:

8. indicate that a purpose of the meeting is the consideration of the postsecondary goals and transition services;
9. indicate that the school will invite the student; and
10. identify any other agency that will be invited, with parent consent (or student consent if age 18), to send a representative. (K.A.R. 91-40-17(b); 34 CRF 300.322(b))

Figure 1-7 in Appendix A of is a sample Notice of Meeting form, see www.kansped.org . Also see Chapter 4, Individualized Education Program.

Kansas Regulations:*K.A.R. 91-40-17. IEP team meetings and participants.

- (a) Each agency shall take steps to ensure that one or both of the parents of an exceptional child are present at each IEP meeting or are afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include the following:
- (1) Scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and informing the parents of the information specified in subsection (b) of this regulation;
  - (2) except as otherwise provided in K.A.R. 91-40-37, providing written notice, in conformance with subsection (b) of this regulation, to the parents of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting.
- (b) The notice required in subsection (a) of this regulation shall meet the following requirements:
- (1) The notice shall indicate the purpose, time, and location of the IEP team meeting and the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency, including, if appropriate, any other agency invited to send a representative to discuss needed transition services.
  - (2) If the meeting is for a child who has been receiving special education services under the infant and toddler provisions of the federal law but is now transitioning to the provisions for older children, the notice shall inform the parents that they may require that a representative of the infant and toddler program be invited to attend the initial IEP team meeting to assist with the smooth transition of services.
  - (3) The notice shall indicate the following information, if a purpose is to consider postsecondary goals and transition services for the child:
    - (A) The agency will invite the parents' child to attend.
    - (B) One of the purposes of the meeting will be to consider the postsecondary goals and needed transition services for the student.
  - (4) The parents have the right to invite to the IEP team meeting individuals whom the parents believe to have knowledge or special expertise about their child.
- (e)(1) An agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate.
- (2) If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent to provide notice of the meeting and to secure the parent's participation. The record shall include at least two of the following:
    - (A) Detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls;
    - (B) detailed records of visits made to the parent's home or homes, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit;
    - (C) copies of correspondence sent to the parent and any responses received; and
    - (D) detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parent and the results of that attempt.

H. RIGHTS FOR PARENTS OF GIFTED STUDENTS

The State statute also includes the category of giftedness. In the State statute and regulations, the term "exceptional children" includes children who are gifted and children with disabilities. Special education services are not compulsory for children who are gifted. Therefore, parents of gifted children may choose to accept whatever special education services are proposed by the IEP team. However, schools are required to provide the services specified in an IEP once the parent gives consent. Accordingly, parents of, and children with giftedness (who do not also have a disability) have the same rights as parents of, and children with disabilities, with the following exceptions:

- There are no special education protections for students who are gifted under the discipline provisions (K.A.R. 91-40-34(c));
- Preschool children under the age of 5 are not eligible for gifted services (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ddd));
- Students who are gifted do not have the same considerations for least restrictive environment (LRE) as students with disabilities (K.A.R. 91-4-1(II)), but the IEP Team must make placement decisions based on their individual needs (K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(2));
- Students who are gifted are not eligible for all of the related services (See Management Information System Data Dictionary, www.kansped.org )
- The Kansas Alternate Assessment (KAA) and Kansas Assessment of Multiple Measures (KAMM) are not available to students who are gifted;
- Extended school year services are not provided to students who are gifted (K.A.R. 91-40-1(y));
- Students in JJA or DOC facilities do not receive gifted services (K.A.R. 91-40-5); and
- Requirements for secondary transition (K.A.R. 91-40-1(uuu)); and summary of performance (K.S.A. 72-986(m)) are not applicable to gifted students.

I. EDUCATION ADVOCATES

An education advocate (referred to as "surrogate parents" in Federal law) is appointed to act on behalf of the child when parents are unknown, unavailable, or parental rights have been severed. The State Special Education for Exceptional Children Act gives the Kansas State Board of Education (KSBE) the authority to appoint education advocates to act on behalf of the child, if parents are unknown, unavailable, or parental rights have been severed.

The State statute defines education advocate as "a person appointed by the state board [of education] in accordance with the provisions of section 13 [K.S.A. 38-1513a], and amendments thereto. A person appointed as an education advocate for a child shall not be: (1) An employee of the agency which is required by law to provide special education or related services for the child; (2) an employee of the state board, the department, or any agency which is directly involved in providing educational services for the child; or (3) any person having a professional or personal interest which would conflict with the interests of the child" (K.S.A. 72-962(o)).

In Kansas, a foster parent must receive the required training and be appointed by the State Board of Education as an education advocate to act as a parent in making educational decisions for a child. In other circumstances when a judge orders someone to serve as the child's legal education decision maker the district must follow the judge's orders. Documentation from the court should be retained in the student's file.

State Law:

K.S.A. 38-1513a

When the court has granted legal custody of a child in a hearing under the Kansas code for care of children to an agency, association or individual, the custodian or an agent designated by the custodian shall have authority to make educational decisions for the child if the parents of the child are unknown or unavailable. When the custodian of the child is the secretary, and the parents of the child are unknown or unavailable, and the child appears to be an exceptional child who requires special education, the secretary shall immediately notify the state board of education, or a designee of the state board, and the school district in which the child is residing that the child is in need of an education advocate. As soon as possible after notification by the secretary of the need by a child for an education advocate, the state board of education, or its designee, shall appoint an education advocate for the child.

K.S.A. 72-962

(o) "Education advocate" means a person appointed by the state board in accordance with the provisions of section 13, and amendments thereto. A person appointed as an education advocate for a child shall not be: (1) An employee of the agency which is required by law to provide special education or related services for the child; (2) an employee of the state board, the department, or any agency which is directly involved in providing educational services for the child; or (3) any person having a professional or personal interest which would conflict with the interests of the child.

1. Assigning Education Advocates

KSDE and the Kansas Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (SRS) have developed a system for assigning education advocates when necessary. Details of the education advocate system are given in K.A.R. 91-40-24. KSDE contracts with Families Together (the State's Parent Information and Training Center) to:

- provide training for potential education advocates,
- receive referrals for students who need an education advocate,
- match an education advocate to the student,
- notify KSDE to appoint the education advocate, and
- provide support for education advocates.

The appointment of an education advocate is to be made within 3 business days of receiving a request for an appointment. The school or agency making the request will be notified by KSDE of the name, address, and the telephone number of the person appointed to serve as the child's educational advocate. KSDE sends the formal letter of appointment to the education advocate, with a copy to the special education director, the building principal at the student's school, and the student's primary SRS, DOC, or JJA caseworker. KSDE and Families Together retain copies of the appointment letter.

Education advocates are appointed for students ages 3 to 18 who are in the custody of SRS, the Department of Corrections (DOC), or the Juvenile Justice Authority (JJA); are receiving special education services or need an evaluation to determine eligibility for services; and whose parents are unknown or unavailable, whose parent rights have been severed, or whose parents have a court order of "no contact" against them. Like all other students with disabilities students in SRS, JJA or DOC custody at age 18 become their own educational decision makers, unless a judge has determined that they are not capable of doing so and has appointed a guardian.

For a 2-year-old who is transitioning from Infant-Toddler Services, if parents are unknown or unavailable, an education advocate may be appointed to provide consent to conduct a Part B evaluation, attend an IEP meeting, and be involved in other special education actions required.

For more information about obtaining an education advocate, contact Families Together, 800-264-6343 or 785-233-4777, or the Kansas State Department of Education, 800-203-9462.

2. School District Responsibilities

Sometimes it is difficult to determine the situation with parents. There is a difference between "unavailable" and "unwilling." An uncooperative parent is not unavailable. A parent who can be located by mail, personal visits, or phone is not unavailable, even though s/he does not respond to the school's attempts to involve him or her in the student's education. If a parent has not responded to a request for consent to conduct a reevaluation, or to make a substantial or material change in the IEP; under Federal and State regulations, the district may conduct the reevaluation without parent consent as long as they have documentation of required attempts made and the parent did not respond. (See Chapter 7, Reevaluation.)

If a parent is in jail, s/he is technically not "unknown or unavailable". The parent's participation may be obtained by telephone and consent may be obtained through contact by mail, unless not feasible to do so. If, as a result of a court order, the parent cannot have any contact with the child, the school should request an education advocate.

The special education director may access the Foster Care Database to determine whether the child is in the custody of SRS or JJA. Each time a child in SRS or JJA custody experiences a change in out of home placement, data is entered into the database to assist in tracking the child's records. When a child receiving special education services is in the Foster Care Database, the school should enter information into the education section of the database. The school must obtain written consent from the parent before entering such information because other State agencies, such as SRS, JJA, KSDE and Kansas Medical Agency (KMA) also have access to this data base (See Appendix A, Figure 1- 8, SRS Memo)

3. Social and Rehabilitation Services Responsibilities

The Kansas Statute at K.S.A. 38-1513a of the SRS Children and Family Services Commission states that when SRS staff determine that a child in SRS custody appears to be a student with an exceptionality who may require special education services and the parents are unknown, unavailable, or have their rights terminated, SRS must:

- a. Document in the case record that the parents are unknown, unavailable, or their rights have been terminated; and
- b. Contact Families Together (800-264-6343 or 785-233-4777) within three business days to request that an education advocate be appointed.

"Unavailable" means SRS has documented that at least two pieces of certified mail were sent to the parent's last known address, and were sent back unclaimed.

4. Juvenile Justice Authority and Department of Corrections Responsibilities

If a student is in a juvenile correctional facility or an adult correctional facility, the Juvenile Justice Authority (JJA) or the Department of Corrections (DOC) is obligated to follow the same procedures for appointment of an education advocate as SRS, as stated above.

A student age 18 or over, who is incarcerated in an adult correctional institution or facility and was not identified as a child with a disability and did not have an IEP in their educational placement prior to incarceration, is not entitled to FAPE (K.A.R. 91-40-5(c)(3)). A student previously identified as gifted only is not entitled to receive special education services while incarcerated.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-24. Educational advocates.

- (a)
  - (1) Before taking any special education action in regard to any child, an agency shall attempt to identify the parents of the child and the parents' current whereabouts.
  - (2) If the parental rights of the parents of an exceptional child have been severed, the secretary of social and rehabilitation services or the secretary's designee shall notify the state board or its designee of this fact and request the appointment of an educational advocate for the child.
  - (3) If the identity of the parent or the parent's current whereabouts cannot be determined, the agency shall take the following action:
    - (A) Request that proceedings be initiated, pursuant to the Kansas code for the care of children, to determine whether the child is a child in need of care; and
    - (B) notify the state board or its designee, within three business days, of the agency's determination and request the appointment of an educational advocate for the child.
- (b) Within three business days of receiving a request for the appointment of an educational advocate, the agency making the request shall be notified by the state board or its designee of the name, address, and telephone number of the person appointed to serve as the child's educational advocate.
- (c) Each person appointed as an educational advocate shall meet the following requirements:
  - (1) Be at least 18 years of age;
  - (2) have completed a training program offered or approved by the state board concerning the powers, duties, and functions of an educational advocate;
  - (3) not be an employee of the state board or any agency that is involved in the education or care of the child; and
  - (4) have no interest that conflicts with the interest of any child whom the person represents.
- (d)
  - (1) A person who is an employee of a nonpublic agency that provides only noneducational care for the child and who meets the requirements of subsection (c) of this regulation may be appointed as an educational advocate.
  - (2) A person who otherwise qualifies to be an educational advocate shall not be considered an employee of an agency solely because that person is paid by the agency to serve as an educational advocate.
- (e) Any person appointed as an educational advocate shall perform the following duties:
  - (1) Assert the child's rights in the education and decision-making process, including the identification, evaluation, and placement of the child;
  - (2) comply with applicable confidentiality requirements imposed by state and federal law;
  - (3) participate in the development of the child's individualized education program; and
  - (4) exercise all the rights given to parents under the special education for exceptional children act.

K.A.R. 91-40-5(c)(3)

(c) State adult correctional facilities.

(3) Provision of FAPE to any person incarcerated in a state correctional institution or facility shall not be required by the secretary of corrections if the person meets both of the following criteria:

(A) The incarcerated person is at least 18 years of age.

(B) The incarcerated person, in the person's last educational placement before incarceration, was not identified as a child with a disability.

J. STUDENT RIGHTS AT AGE 18

On or before the student's 17th birthday, the IEP of the student must contain a statement that the student has been informed that at age 18, students have attained the age of majority in Kansas and all parent rights transfer to the student (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(9)). Thus, at age 18, students become their own educational decision makers. (This Handbook will refer to the student who is age 18 or over as an adult student.)

When a student reaches the age of majority, school personnel must provide all required special education notices to both the student and to the parents and obtain informed consent for specified special education actions from the student (same requirements as for parents). Parents are not entitled to attend the IEP meeting, however, either the school or the student may, but are not required to, invite the parents to attend IEP meetings as persons who are knowledgeable about the student. When a court has judged a student to be unable to fulfill these responsibilities, schools must provide Prior Written Notice and obtain informed consent from the person whom the court has appointed as the legal guardian. Schools may provide parents information about other options and resources about this topic.

Federal regulations and Kansas law (K.S.A. 72-989; 34 C.F.R. 300.520 and 34 C.F.R. 300.625) provide specific requirements for school personnel regarding this issue.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-987(c)(9).

(c) The IEP for each exceptional child shall include:

(9) beginning at least one year before the child reaches the age of majority under state law, a statement that the child has been informed of the child's rights, if any, that will transfer to the child on reaching the age of majority as provided in K.S.A. 72-989, and amendments thereto.

72-989. Rights of child with disability upon reaching 18 years of age. When a person who has been determined to be a child with a disability reaches the age of 18, except for such a person who has been determined to be incompetent under state law:

- (a) An agency shall provide to both the person and to the person's parents any notice required by this act;
- (b) all other rights accorded to parents under this act transfer to the person;
- (c) the agency shall notify the person and the parents of the transfer of rights; and
- (d) all rights accorded to parents under this act transfer to the person if incarcerated in an adult or juvenile federal, state or local correctional institution.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT PARENT RIGHTS

1. Who can give consent for a student's educational program?

Regarding parents and/or legal educational decision makers must be given Prior Written Notice and request for consent whenever a school proposes to initiate or change (or refuses to initiate or change) the identification, evaluation, placement or educational services of a child with an exceptionality. Parents may then provide or withhold consent for decisions regarding these matters. Consent from one parent is sufficient, even if the other parent refuses to consent. If an Education advocate is officially appointed, that is the person who will work with the school in planning and monitoring the student's school program, and who may grant or withhold consent just as parents may. See the chart on page 1-5 within this chapter for further information about determining who may grant consent for educational decisions.

Unless a judicial order specifies to the contrary, a school shall recognize the biological or adoptive parent of an exceptional child who is a minor as the educational decision maker for the child, even if other persons meet the definition of a parent for the child.

2. What if there is disagreement about an action that requires consent?

Parents and other legal educational decision makers should clarify the issues about which there is no disagreement. Those actions, or portions of the IEP, should be implemented without delay.

For the area of disagreement requiring consent, there are two options: (1) Mediation as an impartial proceeding whereby a mediator works with the parents and the school representative to reach consensus and develop a written agreement, and (2) a due process hearing in which a hearing officer makes the decision. In mediation, both parties must first agree that they want to mediate. There is no cost to the parents or to the school for mediation. In due process, either the parents or the school may request a hearing. Also see Chapter 10, Mediation and Chapter 12, Due Process Hearings.

3. What are the school's responsibilities for notice and consent with divorced parents?

If parents are divorced, regardless of which parent has primary custody, the school must provide notice to both parents, even if only one parent has the right to consent, unless a court order precludes this from happening. This applies to all special education notice requirements including notice of an IEP meeting. If the school is only aware of one parent's address, the school must make reasonable efforts to locate the other parent in order to provide notice.

Consent from one parent is sufficient. In the event that the school receives responses from both parents, with one providing consent and the other denying consent, the school is deemed to have received consent and must fulfill its obligation to provide FAPE to the student. The parent who denies consent has the right to request mediation or file for due process.

4. What are the qualifications of an education advocate?

Requirements for education advocates are established in K.A.R. 91-40-24(c). Education advocates must:

- be 18 years or older,
- attend the Families Together training for education advocates so they have knowledge and skills to be sure the student is adequately represented, and
- provide three references for appointment as an education advocate.

Education advocates cannot be:

- employees of the agency required by law to provide special education services,
- employees of KSDE or any agency directly involved in providing care or educational services for the student, or
- people with a professional or personal interest that would conflict with the student's best interests.

Professionals not providing care or educational services to the student, retired professionals such as teachers, school administrators, school psychologists, counselors, and social workers, and local community volunteers may be education advocates, if they receive the training from Families Together.

5. May an education advocate be assigned to represent a student over the age of 18?

In Kansas, students from age 18 through 21 years have attained the age of majority, and so they become their own advocates. If the student is a ward of the State and determined to be a Child in Need of Care by SRS, s/he would have an education advocate appointed at age 18, or before if necessary. If the student has been judged to be unable to represent himself/herself, a guardian may be appointed by the court.

6. Are education advocates appointed for a student who is gifted?

Yes. In Kansas, services for students who are gifted are provided through the special education system in public schools. An Education advocate would be appointed in the same way for students ages 5 to 18 who are gifted.

7. May parents revoke consent to a special education service, but not the goals for that service; or in reverse, consent to goals, but not the service necessary to implement the goals?

Parents provide consent only for placement and services, including supplemental aids and services, in the IEP. They do not have the option of consenting to the individual annual goals in the IEP. Parents should consider which individual services they wish to consent to; the annual goals are the method for measuring the progress made by the provision of the service. Parents may revoke consent for some services and not others, but need to realize that when they revoke consent for a service, they have also eliminated the goal(s) that would have measured progress for that service.

8. What is the difference between "Prior Written Notice" and "10-Day IEP Notice?"

"Prior Written Notice" is provided to the parents before the school proposes or refuses to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of special education and related services (FAPE) to the child. Each Prior Written Notice must contain the information required in 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b). This Notice is to ensure that parents are fully informed about any action that the school is proposing and is provided with each request for consent for a special education action. If a change in identification, educational placement, educational services, or the need for more evaluation information is determined to be needed by the IEP team, then the Prior Written Notice and, if required, request for consent for the specific action(s) would be given to parents before that action could take place.

"The 10-Day IEP Notice" is given to parents at least 10 calendar days before the IEP meeting to develop, review and/or revise the IEP. The 10-day IEP notice is to ensure that the parent has an opportunity to participate in the IEP meeting as well as any meeting with respect to the identification, evaluation, placement and special education and related services for the child. The notice must indicate the purpose, time, and location of the meeting and who will be in attendance; and inform the parents that may invite others who have knowledge or special expertise about the child.

9. If a student who is identified as gifted, and does not also have a disability, is incarcerated in a juvenile or adult correctional facility, will they be eligible to receive special education services?

No. Students who are incarcerated in a juvenile or adult correctional facility are not eligible to receive gifted services even if they were identified prior to incarceration.

10. What if the biological parent and another individual meet the definition of parent? Must the school seek consent from the biological parent or can they accept consent from the other qualified individual?

If there is more than one party qualified to act as a parent, and the biological or adoptive parents attempt to act as the parent, the biological or adoptive parents must be presumed to be the parents and legal decision makers, unless they do not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child.

11. What obligation does a school have to allow parents or other non-school personnel to observe or video tape a child in the educational setting?

Neither federal or state laws or regulations give parents the right to observe their children in class. A district may, however, give a parent permission to observe a child in class if doing so would not disrupt school activities and would help the district and the parent work together to develop an appropriate IEP. Many districts have policies that define the conditions under which parents and others may observe children in school and for videotaping children in the classroom.

12. If a parent calls the school and verbally revokes their consent for special education and related services and tells the school they want services stopped immediately, what should the school do?

The parent must revoke consent for special education and related services in writing. The school should inform the parent that it must continue providing services until they receive written notice that consent is being revoked. This could be in the form of a letter or a signature on the document where the parent provided informed consent for the child's current services.

CHAPTER 2

SCREENING AND GENERAL EDUCATION INTERVENTION (CHILD FIND)

INTRODUCTION

Schools must have policies and procedures in effect to ensure that all children with exceptionalities (those who have disabilities and those who are gifted) and who are in need of special education and related services are identified, located, and evaluated. This included children who attend public or private schools, which are home schooled; are highly mobile including migrant and homeless, or are wards of the State. The child find requirement for schools applies to children ages birth through 21. Child find in Kansas involves a screening process for children from birth to age 5, and a general education intervention process for children from kindergarten through age 21. Schools in conjunction with parents use these processes to locate, evaluate, and identify children who may need special education and related services. Children in need of special education services should be identified as young as possible, and also as soon as possible after the concern is noted. This includes children who are suspected of having a disability even though they are advancing from grade to grade (K.A.R. 91-40-7(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.111(a)(c)). The earliest possible identification of educational or behavioral concerns will diminish the impact of the concerns on the child's education.

As an agency, the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) encourages the use of a multi-tiered system of support for all children, encompassing school-wide support for both academic and behavioral competency. This is further emphasized in Kansas special education regulations which require the use of general education interventions (GEI), prior to referring any child in kindergarten through grade 12 for an initial evaluation. GEI requires schools to have data-based documentation of the general education interventions and strategies implemented for each child.

Some schools conduct GEI through a school-wide approach of providing multi-tiered levels of intervention to support children to achieve more successfully. In recent years, this kind of a systemic approach has been referred to as Response to Intervention or RtI. The practices utilized in RtI are based on providing high-quality instruction and intervention matched to child need; monitoring progress frequently to make decisions about change in instruction or goals; and applying child response data to important educational decisions (Response to Intervention: Policy Considerations and implementation. National Association of State Directors of Special Education, 2005). In Kansas, the set of principles and practices found in the literature with regard to RtI is encompassed within Kansas' Multi-tiered System of Support (MTSS).

Other schools accomplish conducting GEI through an individual child problem solving approach, often referred to as student improvement teams (SIT, SAT, TAT, Care Team, etc.). The individual problem solving approach to GEI is consistent with past guidance provided by the state.

Either approach (school-wide or individual problem-solving) may be used as schools seek to provide early intervention for children in need of additional supports to be successful.

This chapter includes information on the following topics:

- A. Public Notice for Child Find
- B. Screening for Children from Birth to Age 5
- C. General Education Intervention for Children from Kindergarten through Age 21
- D. Data Collection and Documentation for General Education Intervention
- E. Referral for Initial Evaluation
- F. Early Intervening Services

A. PUBLIC NOTICE FOR CHILD FIND

The first step in the child find process is to provide information to the public concerning the availability of special education services for exceptional children, including procedures for accessing these services. This public notice is usually provided at the beginning of the school year and must be repeated annually. Copies of the information from child find activities are kept on file as documentation for implementing policies and procedures K.A.R. 91-40-7(d).

The public notice may be provided through a variety of methods. Informational materials could be distributed to all schools in the area, including private schools, other agencies and to professionals who would likely encounter children with a possible need for special education. Schools may publish yearly notices in local newspapers, provide pamphlets, furnish information on the Internet, broadcast announcements on radio or television and provide information at parent-teacher conferences. Suggested methods to accomplish public notice include:

- Newspaper articles or ads,
- Radio, TV, or cable announcements,
- Community newspaper notices
- School handbook and calendar
- Letters to all patrons in the district
- Post in child care programs
- Post in health departments or doctors offices
- Post in grocery stores, department stores and other public places

Additional information about public notice as it relates to confidentiality requirements is included in Chapter 9. An example of a public notice about child find is included in Appendix A, Figure 2-1.

B. SCREENING FOR CHILDREN FROM BIRTH TO AGE 5

Kansas regulations (K.A.R. 91-40-7(b)) require each school district to implement screening procedures that meet the following requirements:

- For children younger than five years of age, observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that disclose any potential disabilities or developmental delays that indicate a need for evaluation, including hearing and vision screening
- Implement procedures ensuring the early identification and assessment of disabilities in children.

Screening must include observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that address potential developmental delays or disabilities in the areas of communication, cognitive development, social-emotional development, self-help/adaptive behavior, and/or physical development. This requirement also extends to hearing and vision screenings, which must be available on an equal basis to all children in public and all private schools within the district's boundaries (K.S.A. 72-1204 and 72-5204 et seq.). If the results of the screening indicate a potential developmental delay or disability, the screening team makes the referral for initial evaluation.

Mass screening of all children is not required, but screening is to be available for any child for whom there is a concern about an area of development including communication, cognitive development, social-emotional development, self-help/adaptive behavior, and/or physical development; and hearing and vision. It is recommended that a child should not have to wait more than 30 calendar days for a screening. Young children's needs must be identified as soon as possible, so that early intervention may be provided. Screening is considered to be a quick look at the developmental areas to assist in determining whether a child should be referred for an initial evaluation. There are screening procedures that require minimal staff and time to complete. Screening should be equally available to all children in public and private schools within the school district's boundaries. For preschool age children, the district of residence of each preschool child is responsible for child find (locate, evaluate and identify) even though the child may be attending a preschool or other child care program outside the district of residence.

The Part B child find requirements begin at birth, therefore they overlap with the Part C child find requirements. Schools should work with their local Part C Infant-Toddler Network for child find activities for children from birth through 2 years to ensure that all children have access to screening in a timely manner. Each local Infant-Toddler Network is to have a local interagency coordinating council and this is a way for the local school district and the local Infant-Toddler Network to develop collaborative efforts for child find in their community.

Children who are transitioning from the Part C Infant and Toddler program are not required to participate in a Part B screening process at age 3. For children receiving Part C services who may need an initial evaluation to determine eligibility for Part B special education services, the Part C Infant-Toddler Program may make a referral to the school district. The referral is to be made at least 90 calendar days prior to the child's third birthday and according to the school's policy for making a referral for an initial evaluation.

Schools must maintain documentation on results of screening and must ensure that the collection and use of data under the child find requirements are subject to confidentiality requirements under FERPA (K.A.R. 91-40-7(e); K.A.R. 91-40-50).

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-7. Child find.

- (a) Each board shall adopt and implement policies and procedures to identify, locate, and evaluate all children with exceptionalities residing in its jurisdiction, including children with exceptionalities who meet any of the following criteria:
  - (1) Attend private schools;
  - (2) are highly mobile, including migrant and homeless children; or
  - (3) are suspected of being children with disabilities even though they are advancing from grade to grade.
- (b) Each board's policies and procedures under this regulation shall include age-appropriate screening procedures that meet the following requirements:
  - (1) For children younger than five years of age, observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that disclose any potential disabilities or developmental delays that indicate a need for evaluation, including hearing and vision screening;
  - (2) for children from ages five through 21, observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that disclose any potential exceptionality and indicate a need for evaluation, including hearing and vision screening as required by state law; and
  - (3) implementation of procedures ensuring the early identification and assessment of disabilities in children.
- (d) Each board, at least annually, shall provide information to the public concerning the availability of special education services for exceptional children, including child find activities conducted by the board.
- (e) Each agency shall ensure that the collection and use of data under this regulation are subject to the confidentiality requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-50 and amendments thereto.

C. GENERAL EDUCATION INTERVENTION (GEI) FOR CHILDREN FROM KINDERGARTEN THROUGH AGE 21

For children in kindergarten through age 21, Kansas screening laws require that schools utilize observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that disclose any potential exceptionality and indicate a need for evaluation, including hearing and vision screening, and age-appropriate assessments for school-aged children designed to identify possible physical, intellectual, social or emotional, language, or perceptual differences. Screening must be available for children in public schools, private schools, or for children who are homeschooled. For children of school age attending a private elementary or secondary school, the district in which the private school is located is responsible for child find for children who are residents and non-residents of the district who may be attending the private school (K.S.A. 72-966(a)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.131(a)).

In Kansas, this screening is conducted, in part, through the required implementation of general education intervention (GEI). The purpose of GEI is to intervene early for any child who is presenting academic or behavioral concerns. This early intervention leads to a better understanding of the supports children need in order to be successful in the general education curriculum and school setting. Additionally, the data collected during GEI assists school personnel in determining which children may be children with potential exceptionalities who need to move into initial evaluation for special education. Collaboration between special education and general education staff is an important part of the general education intervention process. Both special education and general education personnel must be involved in this building-level, school-wide activity (K.A.R. 91-40-7(c)), however, some services provided by special education staff may not be fully reimbursable.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-7(c)

(c) Any board may refer a child who is enrolled in public school for an evaluation if one of the following conditions is met:

- (1) School personnel have data-based documentation which indicates that general education interventions and strategies would be inadequate to address the areas of concern for the child.
- (2). School personnel have data-based documentation that indicates that prior to, or as a part of the referral, the following were met:
  - A. The child was provided appropriate instruction in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel;
  - B. The child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals which reflected formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction;
  - C. The assessment results were provided to the child's parents; and
  - D. The assessment results indicate an evaluation is appropriate.

1. Conducting GEI

The No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB) and IDEA place a strong emphasis on using scientifically research-based interventions, as appropriate, for children in general education. NCLB defines scientifically research-based as "research that involves the application of rigorous, systemic, and objective procedures to obtain reliable and valid knowledge relevant to education activities and programs" (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46683). These practices and programs apply to all schools and all children in general education. Kansas' requirement to implement GEI supports this emphasis on providing the intensity of instructional support in proportion to the presenting needs of children through methods of analyzing child data, implementing scientifically research-based interventions, and monitoring child progress. (See Appendix A, Figure 2-2, General Education Interventions (GEI))

The GEI process should continue until a successful intervention is determined, when it is evident that the successful intervention requires resources beyond those available in general education, and/or when the team suspects the child is a child with an exceptionality (disability or giftedness). At any time during GEI, the team responsible for planning and implementing the interventions has three decisions that may be made:

- a) Continue the intervention and monitor child progress
- b) Change or modify the intervention and monitor child progress
- c) Change or modify the intervention, monitor child progress, and carry the child into initial evaluation.

It should be made clear here that the process of continually designing and re-designing supports for children is one that does not end until the child is successful. Even when the decision has been made to move from GEI into an initial evaluation, the intervention process should not stop. Rather, it becomes part of the evaluation process.

Kansas regulations provide additional information which describes when a school may refer a child for an initial evaluation:

- a) School personnel have data-based documentation which indicates that general education interventions and strategies would be inadequate to address the areas of concern for the child.
- b) School personnel have data-based documentation that indicates that prior to, or as a part of the referral, the following were met:
  - i. the child was provided appropriate instruction in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel;
  - ii. the child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals which reflected formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction;
  - iii. the assessment results were provided to the child's parents; and
  - iv. the assessment results indicate an evaluation is appropriate. (K.A.R. 91-40-7(c))

As indicated previously, GEI may be carried out through a school-wide approach of providing a multi-tiered system of scientifically, research-based interventions for all children (e.g. MTSS) or through an individual child problem solving approach. Regardless of the approach used, the focus should be on designing supports for children who need additional assistance in order to be successful in the general education curriculum and environment.

The following provides a brief comparison of the two approaches (i.e. school-wide multi-tiered system of supports or individual child problem-solving) that may be used to conduct GEI, and ultimately, yield the data that may be used to make the decisions as to whether or not a child should be moved on to an initial evaluation.

2. School-Wide Multi-Tiered System of Supports Approach to GEI

The law allows schools to use a process that assesses a child's response to scientific, research-based intervention to determine whether the child is making sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade-level standards. Kansas encourages schools to use a school-wide, multi-tiered model of support for all children including both academic and behavioral concerns. In Kansas, this is supported through the Multi-tiered System of Support (MTSS) which includes both School-Wide Academic Supports (SWAS) and School-Wide Positive Behavior Supports (SWPBS). The following briefly explains the multi-tiered aspect of the school-wide approach.

Tier 1: All children receive a core instructional program that uses a scientifically validated curriculum that is provided for all students. Schools choose curricula that have evidence of producing adequate levels of achievement (i.e., research-based) and instruction is differentiated within the core to meet a broad range of student needs. Therefore, interventions are provided via the general curriculum. Universal screening of all children to monitor progress and to identify children who may need additional support is conducted. Approximately eighty percent of children in the school will be successful in the general curriculum.

Tier 2: Those children who do not respond to the core instructional procedures will receive targeted group interventions in addition to core instruction. More frequent measures of progress monitoring are used to collect child progress data. Approximately fifteen percent of children in the school will need targeted (supplemental) support.

Tier 3: A few children receive intensive, individualized interventions. These may be in addition to, or instead of the supports provided in Tier 1 and Tier 2 depending on the needs of the child. Interventions will be more intensive and delivered in more substantial blocks of time. Approximately five percent of children in the school will need this kind of intensive support.

The graphic below depicts a school-wide approach of providing a multi-tiered system of intervention.

Within a school-wide multi-tiered system such as that depicted above, children will receive GEI as a part of the system in place for all students. Data collected at each tier should guide school personnel as to the next steps to take based on the child's response to interventions tried. At least by the time a child is ready to access the more intensive supports of Tier 3, the school should employ the use of individualized problem solving to design the intensive individualized support the child will receive as well as a plan to monitor the child's progress and document the child's response to the scientifically research-based interventions. The approach of individual child problem-solving is therefore a component of the larger school-wide system, or it may stand alone as a method to conduct GEI as outlined below.

3. Individual Problem-solving Approach to GEI

This process is typically carried out through building level problem-solving teams. These teams function with the intent to provide support to any child who may be experiencing difficulty (academic or behavior) and to work to improve the overall achievement of all children in the school. Typically, these teams facilitate the problem-solving process which results in the development of an intervention plan which documents the child's area of concern, the interventions implemented, the data reflecting the child's response to the intervention, and the recommendations as a result of the child's response to the intervention.

The problem-solving conducted by these teams may vary, however, there should be at least four basic steps common to the process used by schools. All steps should include parent involvement – not just informing parents, but including them in decision-making whenever possible. Additionally, parents are to be provided with copies of the child data collected as interventions are tried and monitored for children.

The following outlines the four basic steps of problem solving and indicates briefly what happens at each step.

STEP 1. Problem Identification

- a. Precisely define the problem
- b. Measure the skill or behavior in the natural setting to establish baseline performance.
- c. Estimate the severity of the problem (use age norms or compare to peers)
- d. Establish expectations for the child

STEP 2. Problem Analysis

- a. Analyze antecedent, situational, and consequent conditions
- b. Use ICEL components (instruction, curriculum, environment, learner) to analyze the problem
- c. Collect additional data as needed to understand the cause of the problem.

STEP 3. Develop and Implement an Intervention Plan

- a. Formulate a plan that uses scientific research based interventions designed to target the cause of the presenting problem.
- b. Establish intervention goals
- c. Develop a plan for monitoring progress which specifies the child data to be collected and the schedule for collecting it. Decide how the data will be displayed (e.g. chart/graph) to facilitate evaluation.
- d. Implement the plan with treatment integrity and frequent monitoring of progress

STEP 4. Evaluate and Revise Plan

- a. Review progress monitoring data to determine if enough progress has been made by repeating Step 1.
- b. If expectations have not been met, repeat Step 2 to further analyze the problem.
- c. Revise current intervention or select a new intervention including components of Step 3

D. DATA COLLECTION AND DOCUMENTATION FOR GENERAL EDUCATION INTERVENTIONS

GEI has been a requirement in Kansas since 2000, however, with the most recent reauthorization of IDEA and the subsequent Kansas regulations, the requirements for GEI have been strengthened. Before a child may be referred for a special education evaluation, school personnel are now required to have data-based documentation that:

(1) general education interventions and strategies would be inadequate to address the areas of concern for the child,

or

(2) the child was provided appropriate instruction in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel;

and

(3) the child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals which reflected formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction. (K.A.R. 91-40-7(c))

In either case, there must be data-based documentation that provides a basis for determining that a special education evaluation is warranted.

It should rare that documentation would indicate that GEI and strategies would be inadequate to address the areas of concern for the child. This would most likely occur in an instance where a child with an obvious disability has for whatever reason not been identified previously. Another example might be for a child who has recently sustained a Traumatic Brain Injury. Of course in situations such as these it would be inappropriate to delay further evaluation to determine the child's need for special education. In these cases, the data used for documentation that GEI would be inadequate to address the needs of the child might come from medical records, previous school records, observations, parent and teacher reports, etc. However, in cases such as this, even though it is appropriate to move directly to evaluation, it is recommended that GEI and strategies occur as part of the child's special education evaluation so that the team may collect data to determine what the best instructional approach for the child might be.

In most cases, school personnel will be documenting data from the GEI and strategies that have been tried. Schools must have data-based documentation that: (1) appropriate instruction was provided to the child, (2) the child was provided appropriate instruction was delivered by qualified personnel in regular education settings; (3) the child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals which reflected formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction; and (4) the instructional strategies used and the student-centered data collected. The data to document that appropriate instruction was provided to the child may include evidence that the school's curriculum has a solid research base and that it contains, for example in reading, the essential components of reading instruction as defined in the No Child Left Behind Act.

Additionally, data could include the extent to which instruction has been delivered by qualified teachers. Other data may include evidence that the child has regularly attended school in order to access instruction. The data to document the educational interventions and strategies that have been implemented may include records such as intervention plans that indicate the interventions and strategies selected and implemented for a given child. The requirement to provide data-based documentation of the repeated assessments of child progress during instruction (i.e. progress monitoring) is perhaps the most important of all. Progress monitoring data is used to evaluate the effectiveness of the intervention; to determine the intensity of interventions and resources needed to support child learning; and, provides a basis for school personnel to make decisions during intervention. Documentation of progress monitoring may include charts/graphs or records of other systematic data collection. This documentation must also include evidence parents were provided with the results of the assessment of child progress and that those results indicate that an evaluation is appropriate.

Additional documentation is required for schools that utilize a school-wide multi-tiered system of support approach to providing GEI. In addition to the data described above, the school must document that the child's parents were notified about:

- The State's policies regarding the amount and nature of child performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided;
- Strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning; and
- The parents' right to request an evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-10(f)(2); 34 CFE 300.311(a)(7)(ii)).
(See Appendix A, Figure 2-3, State Policy on MTSS for Parents)

Although this documentation is required only if the child goes on for an initial evaluation and the child is subsequently placed as having a learning disability, schools should be aware of this so that it may be attended to. It is recommended to any school that utilizes a school-wide approach that they publish information about their system. This not only provides a way for the school to discuss its multi-tiered system of support for all children, but also insures that documentation requirements may be met should some children go on for evaluation and placement as having a learning disability. Some ways to accomplish this additional requirement might include providing information to parents through methods such as:

- School or student handbooks
- Annual child find notifications
- Brochures about the school's RTI system

In addition to the broad dissemination required for all schools using an school-wide multi-tiered system of supports approach, schools may also choose to establish guidelines in their school system regarding how and when information will be shared more specifically with parents of children receiving supplemental support (i.e., Tier 2, Tier 3, etc.). It is important that parents be invited to fully participate in the intervention process for their child. This practice of involving parents from the beginning when additional interventions are necessary provides a way for the school and the parent to establish a foundation upon which to face future decisions that may arise.

K.A.R. 91-40-10

(f) if the child has participated in a process that assesses the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention, the evaluation report shall also address the following matters:

- (1) The instructional strategies used and the student-centered data collected; and
- (2) the documentation that the child's parents were notified about the following:
  - (A) The state's policies regarding the amount and nature of student performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided;
  - (B) strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning; and
  - (C) the parents' right to request an evaluation.

E. REFERRAL FOR INITIAL EVALUATION

Screening and GEI are child find activities, and either process may result in the determination that an initial evaluation for special education is needed. Most decisions to move forward into initial evaluation will come as a result of these processes. However, there are instances when requests for evaluation may be made by parents or by adult students. The following describes the procedures to be used when such requests occur:

1. Referral from Parents: Parents have requested an evaluation. The request may be oral or written. The school may set a policy as to how a referral is to be made. The school must respond to the request within a reasonable period of time, which has been interpreted by the KSDE as being no more than 15 school days. The building principal or person designated to respond to parent requests for evaluations, should explain to the parents the following:
  - (a) They have the right to go directly to an evaluation; and
  - (b) A GEI process that precedes an initial evaluation is available to assist in determining the specific concerns and needs of their child. This includes the right of the parents to participate in the GEI

- process. Parents may elect to have their child participate in GEI prior to the evaluation, or, if the parents request the initial evaluation be conducted without waiting for general education interventions to conclude, the general education intervention process may be conducted as part of the initial evaluation.
- (c) The school may refuse to conduct the evaluation. The Prior Written Notice would explain why the school refuses to conduct the evaluation.
2. Self-referral from an adult student: A student 18 years of age or older has requested an evaluation. The school must respond to the request within a reasonable period of time which has been interpreted by the KSDE as being no more than 15 school days. The building principal, or person designated to respond to student requests for evaluations, should explain the following to the student:
- (a) S/He has the right to go directly to an evaluation; and
  - (b) A GEI process that precedes an initial evaluation is available to assist in determining the specific concerns and needs of the student. This includes the right of the student to participate in the GEI process. The student may elect to participate in GEI and not pursue the evaluation, or, if the student request the initial evaluation be conducted without waiting for general education interventions to conclude, the general education intervention process may be conducted as part of the initial evaluation.
  - (c) The school may refuse to conduct the evaluation. The Prior Written Notice would explain why the school refuses to conduct the evaluation.

Regardless of how the decision to move forward with an initial evaluation is made, it is crucial that the school have a process which will insure that all data collected prior to the evaluation (i.e., data collected as part of screening, or GEI) is provided to the evaluation team. This insures the evaluation team has a basis for understanding what additional data may be need to be collected as the initial evaluation process goes forward. Chapter 3 details all of the procedures and requirements that must be met at the time the child moves into the initial evaluation.

F. EARLY INTERVENING SERVICES

The federal office of education states that the use of some Part B funds for early intervening services has the potential to benefit special education, as well as the education of other children, by reducing academic and behavioral problems in the regular education environment and reducing the number of referrals to special education that could have been avoided by relatively simple regular education interventions (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, pp. 46626-46627). These early intervening services are not the same as "early intervention" services under the Part C, Infant-Toddler program, or child find activities, and are not available for preschool children ages 3 and 4, or 5 year olds not in kindergarten.

The district may carry out a variety of activities including:

1. Professional development (which may be provided by entities other than the district) for teachers and other school staff to enable such personnel to deliver scientifically-based academic and behavioral interventions, including scientifically-based literacy instruction, and, where appropriate, instruction on the use of adaptive and instructional software; and
2. Providing educational and behavioral evaluations, services and supports, including scientifically based literacy instruction.

For additional information on utilizing Part B funds for early intervening services in Kansas Statute 72-965 and Appendix D to Federal Regulations, August 14, 2006.

State Statute:
K.S.A. 72-965

- (c) (1) Each board may use up to 15% of the amount it receives each year under the federal law to develop and implement coordinated, early intervening services for students in kindergarten through grade 12, with a particular emphasis on students in kindergarten through grade 3, who have not been identified as needing special education or related services but who appear to need additional academic and behavioral support to succeed in a general education environment.
- (2) In implementing coordinated, early intervening services under this subsection, a board may carry out activities that include:
  - (A) Providing professional development for teachers and other school staff to enable such personnel to deliver scientifically based academic instruction and behavioral interventions, including scientifically based literacy instruction and, where appropriate, instruction on the use of adaptive and instructional software; and
  - (B) providing educational and behavioral evaluations, services and supports, including scientifically based literacy instruction.
- (3) Each board that develops and maintains coordinated, early intervening services under this subsection shall annually report to the department:
  - (A) The number of students served under this subsection; and
  - (B) the number of students served under this subsection who subsequently receive special education and related services under this title during the 2-year period preceding each report.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT SCREENING AND GENERAL EDUCATION INTERVENTION (CHILD FIND)

1. Who is responsible for child find?

KSDE has policies and procedures in place to ensure that all children with exceptionalities residing in the State, including children with exceptionalities attending public or private schools, are home schooled; are highly mobile, including migrant and homeless; or are wards of the State, and who are in need of special education and related services are identified, located, and evaluated. Local school districts are required to conduct ongoing public notice, screening, general education interventions, and evaluation to ensure that Kansas children from birth to age 5 with disabilities, and children from kindergarten through age 21 with exceptionalities are identified appropriately. For children of school age attending a private elementary or secondary school, the district in which the private school is located is responsible for child find for children who are residents and non-residents of the district who may be attending the private school. For preschoolers, the school district where the child resides is responsible for child find, even if the child attends preschool or child care in another district. This responsibility to conduct child find efforts for children from birth through age 2 is shared with the Part C Infant-Toddler program.

2. May special education staff participate in the general education intervention process, without jeopardizing their special education funding?

Questions often arise about who can work with a student to provide what type of support at what point in the GEI process and how that fits with funding restrictions. It is the responsibility of both general and special educators to carry out GEI. Further, because child find is required by special education law and GEI is Kansas' method of conducting child find for school age children, it is expected that special educators will, in part, support carrying out GEI. This may include special educators providing such things as assisting in collecting student data, participating in the analyses of data to determine next steps, and the provision of interventions, however, there are parameters with regard to funding to be attended to. Those parameters are outlined in the Special Education Reimbursement Guide for State Categorical Aid (See www.kansped.org).

3. How does an intervention plan developed during general education interventions differ from other plans?

The general education intervention plan contains information that documents a student's area(s) of concern, the scientific, research-based intervention(s) to be tried, the data to be collected to monitor the effectiveness of the intervention(s), and the impact of the intervention(s). It should include data that demonstrate that the child was provided appropriate instruction in general education settings, delivered by qualified personnel; and data-based documentation of repeated assessments of achievement at reasonable intervals, reflecting formal assessment of student progress during instruction. (See additional details about specific documentation in Section D of this chapter.) Additionally, it also provides documentation of the student's progress in the general education curriculum and documents the extent of the involvement of special education resources in developing, implementing, and monitoring the intervention(s). This information becomes part of the data used to determine eligibility for special education if the student is referred for an initial evaluation. The general education intervention plan is to be provided to the child's parents but parental consent is not required.

4. What is the timeline for the general education intervention process?

There is no rule of thumb for a timeline. The area(s) of concern and the nature of the interventions attempted will be the determining factors. The team will develop a plan that includes a timeline appropriate for each student. If it appears that the interventions involve intense or sustained resources, or if the team suspects the child may have an exceptionality, the team must make a referral for an initial evaluation.

5. Are there situations when the general education intervention process for children K-12 would not be used?

Usually, the general education intervention process occurs prior to a student being referred for an initial evaluation. However, under some circumstances, it would not be necessary to begin with the general education intervention process before referring the student for an initial evaluation. This would most likely occur in an instance where a student with an obvious disability has not been identified previously. Another example might be for a student who has recently sustained a Traumatic Brain Injury. Of course in situations such as these it would be inappropriate to delay further evaluation to determine the student's need for special education. In these kinds of cases, the data used for documentation that GEI would be inadequate to address the needs of the student might come from medical records, previous school records, observations, parent and teacher reports, etc. However, in cases such as this, even though it is appropriate to move directly to evaluation, it is recommended that GEI and strategies occur as part of the student's special education evaluation so that the team may collect data to determine what the best instructional approach for the student might be.

6. What happens to the information gathered about the child after the child find activities have been conducted?

If either the screening or general education intervention process is used to make a referral for an initial evaluation, the information may become part of the data used to determine eligibility during the initial evaluation process. However, screening information may not be the only information used to determine eligibility. Thus, it becomes part of the student's record, regardless of whether the student is eligible or not. Likewise, even if the screening or general education intervention process did not result in a referral for an initial evaluation, the information would be retained for documentation in the event that future issues arise. For example, if a student is later suspended or expelled and the parents assert that the student should have been receiving special education services because s/he has a disability, this information would be very helpful for the school to have. What decisions were made in the past, and upon what basis? These records might avert potential lawsuits.

Because the screening information contains personally identifiable information about the child, it is confidential and must be kept in a secure location, according to FERPA requirements. See Chapter 9 for additional details.

7. At what point does the screening of a school age child through GEI become an evaluation for special education which signals the protections of procedural safeguards and due process?

Federal requirements indicate that the screening of a student to determine appropriate instructional strategies for curriculum implementation shall not be considered to be an evaluation for eligibility for special education and related services (34 C.F.R. 300.302). Further explanation in comments to the federal regulations indicates that screening refers to a process that a teacher or specialist uses to determine appropriate instructional strategies. The comments go on to describe screening as typically being a relatively simple and quick process that is used to determine strategies to more effectively teach children. This would include examples of such things as universal screening and progress monitoring tools (e.g. DIBELS, etc.) that yield information teachers may use to more appropriately select interventions tailored to a student's area of academic need, observations of children in various environments from which analyses of behavior patterns may occur in order to direct staff to appropriate intervention selection, and diagnostic tools which assist school personnel in a deeper understanding of the student's presenting concern so that more effective interventions may be selected. It should be made very clear here that the latitude given by this regulation is NOT to be interpreted as a way to circumvent other regulations pertaining to evaluation. The difference between screening and evaluation is the intent of the activities. If the intent of the activities is to determine instructional strategies, that constitutes screening. It is clear in the regulation and subsequent comments that the ONLY activities that may be considered screening are those activities which result directly in information to be used solely for the purpose of designing instructional strategies. At any point that the intent changes to seek to determine if the student is a child with an exceptionality or if the student is in need of special education, that is evaluation and all due process protections come into play. At that point, parents must be contacted to seek consent for initial evaluation.

CHAPTER 3

INITIAL EVALUATION AND ELIGIBILITY

INTRODUCTION

As discussed in Chapter 2, the Kansas child find process is intended to identify children who may be in need of special education services. Child find includes early childhood screening for young children from birth to age 5, and general education interventions (GEI) for children enrolled in kindergarten through 12th grade. Information obtained from screening and general education interventions will assist teams in making decisions about referrals for initial evaluation. An appraisal of the extent of the presenting concern, the effectiveness of interventions tried, and the degree to which the interventions require substantial resources are important to consider when deciding whether a child should be referred for possible special education services, and are essential in planning and conducting the initial evaluation after a referral has been made. When teams conducting general education interventions begin to question whether the child might be a child with an exceptionality, or when the team begins to question whether the child might need special education and related services, then a referral for an initial evaluation needs to be considered.

An initial evaluation involves the use of a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information to assist in determining if the child is eligible for special education. A two-pronged test for eligibility: (1) whether the child is a child with an exceptionality (disability or giftedness); and (2) by reason thereof, has a need for special education and related services, has driven eligibility decisions for many years. However, it is clear more than ever in the law that evaluations must also determine the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(1); K.A.R. 91-40-8(a)(c)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(a)(2)(i)(ii)(iii)). This shifts the focus of the initial evaluation from access to services to what the child needs to enable him or her to learn effectively and to participate and progress in the general education curriculum.

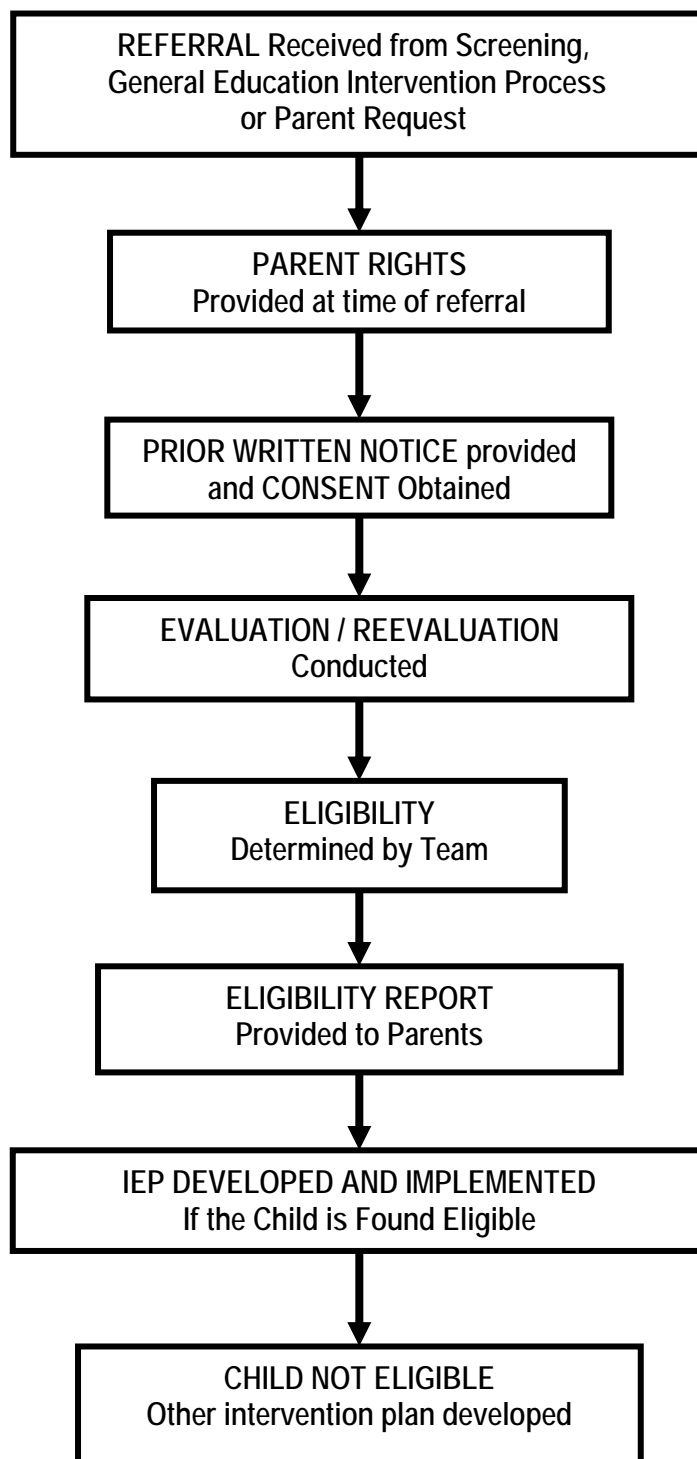

This chapter includes information on the required elements of the process to conduct an initial evaluation and determine eligibility, and also suggests ways to synthesize the team process at the building level. The initial evaluation process begins when a referral for initial evaluation is made and applies to all children beginning at age 3.

The following topics related to initial evaluation are discussed within this chapter:

- A. Referral for Initial Evaluation
- B. Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent
- C. The Evaluation Team
- D. Timeline for Conducting the Initial Evaluation
- E. Conducting the Evaluation
- F. Eligibility Determination and Documentation
- G. Prior Written Notice for Identification

INITIAL EVALUATION

A. REFERRAL FOR INITIAL EVALUATION

Referrals for initial evaluation may come from a variety of sources. These include:

- Early Childhood Screening
- Part C Infant-Toddler Program
- General Education Intervention Team (individual problem-solving team)
- Parents
- Self-referral by adult student

A referral for an initial evaluation is made whenever it is suspected that a child may be a child with an exceptionality. For a preschool child the referral may be a result of screening described in 91-40-7(b), or from a Part C Infant-Toddler program. A school age child would participate in general education interventions (GEI) prior to the referral. As a result of GEI, the school would have data-based documentation of repeated assessments of achievement at reasonable intervals, that indicate the instruction and educational interventions and strategies presented to the child in the general education setting were not adequate and indicated an evaluation for special education is appropriate (K.A.R. 91-40-7(b)(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.309(c)(1)). A parent or adult student may request an evaluation at any time.

Upon referral for an initial evaluation, regardless of the source, the first action the school must take is to provide the parents, or the adult student, a copy of the Parent Rights Notice (procedural safeguards) available to them (K.S.A. 72-988(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.503). (See Appendix A, Figure 1-2, Parent Rights Notice, or www.kansped.org .)

K.S.A. 72-988(e)

(e) A list of the rights available to the parents of exceptional children shall be given to the parents only one time each school year, except a copy also shall be given to the parents: (A) Upon initial referral or parental request for evaluation; (B) upon request of a parent; and (C) upon the initial filing of a complaint under subsection (b)(4).

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-7

(b) Each board's policies and procedures under this regulation shall include age-appropriate screening procedures that meet the following requirements:

- (1) For children younger than five years of age, observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that disclose any potential disabilities or developmental delays that indicate a need for evaluation, including hearing and vision screening;
  - (2) for children from ages five through 21, observations, instruments, measures, and techniques that disclose any potential exceptionality and indicate a need for evaluation, including hearing and vision screening as required by state law; and
  - (3) implementation of procedures ensuring the early identification and assessment of disabilities in children.
- (c) Any board may refer a child who is enrolled in public school for an evaluation if one of the following conditions is met:
- ~~(A)~~ (1) School personnel have data-based documentation indicating that general education interventions and strategies would be inadequate to address the areas of concern for the child.
  - (2) School personnel have data-based documentation indicating that before the referral or as a part of the referral, all of the following conditions were met:
    - (A) The child was provided with appropriate instruction in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel.
    - (B) The child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals that reflected formal assessment of the student's progress during instruction.
    - (C) The assessment results were provided to the child's parent.

B. PRIOR WRITTEN NOTICE AND REQUEST FOR CONSENT

Whenever a child has been referred for an evaluation, the school must provide Prior Written Notice to the parents that describe any evaluation procedures the school proposes to conduct (K.S.A. 72-988(b)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(a)). In addition, there are standard components of content the notice must also contain. The purpose of providing notice to the parents is so they understand what action the public agency is proposing (in this case, to conduct an initial evaluation) and the basis used for determining the action is necessary. The Prior Written Notice must include:

- 1) A description of the action proposed by the agency,
- 2) An explanation of why the agency proposes the action,

- 3) A description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed action,
- 4) A statement that the parents have protection under the procedural safeguards and how a copy of the procedural safeguards can be obtained,
- 5) Sources for parents to contact to obtain assistance in understanding their procedural safeguards, and
- 6) A description of other options considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and,
- 7) A description of other factors that is relevant to the agency's proposal. (K.S.A. 72-990; 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b))

Additionally, if the notice is to propose to conduct an initial evaluation, the notice must describe any evaluation procedures that the school proposes to conduct (K.S.A. 72-986(b); K.A.R. 91-40-27(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(a)(1)). (See Appendix A, Figure 1-5a, Prior Written Notice for Evaluation or Reevaluation form or www.kansped.org.)

The notice must be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so. If the native language or other mode of communication of the parent is not a written language, the LEA must take steps to ensure that the notice is translated orally or by other means to the parent in his or her native language or other mode of communication, that the parent understands the content of the notice. The school must have written evidence that this has been done (K.A.R. 91-40-26(b)(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.503(c)).

1. Preparing the Prior Written Notice

After the school receives the referral for an initial evaluation the school staff may engage in preparatory activities to determine the content of the proposal to conduct an initial evaluation. The school staff will consider information provided in the referral or in the parent request for an evaluation and in the child's file including information collected during general education interventions. Based on this information the school staff will determine whether they will propose to conduct an evaluation and what procedures the evaluation will include (such as existing or new assessment tools and strategies). The staff will then prepare the Prior Written Notice of proposed action to provide to the parent. In some cases, the school staff may determine that there is not enough evidence to support conducting an initial evaluation and would, therefore, refuse to conduct the initial evaluation.

When preparing the prior written notice, the team must plan which assessments and other evaluation measures may be needed to produce the data needed to meet the requirements of eligibility determination (K.A.R. 91-40-8(e)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(c)). Every evaluation should be approached and designed individually based on the specific concerns of the child to be evaluated. Thoughtful planning is required to insure that the team will use appropriate tools to collect the data needed, while eliminating time spent collecting information that is either unnecessary or overly time-consuming for no clear purpose. It would be inappropriate to use the same battery of assessments for all children or to rely on any single tool to conduct an evaluation.

To insure that enough data will be collected as part of the evaluation, teams are reminded of the importance of using a variety of assessment tools and strategies to collect relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the child. There are also requirements that each child be observed in the child's learning environment which will also need to be included on the Prior Written Notice. We must insure that each evaluation is sufficiently comprehensive to identify all of the child's special education and related services needs. All appropriate domains should be considered via review of screening and/or GEI data. If potential educationally related deficits are suggested by screening, then the evaluation team must provide in-depth assessment in the domain. If screening suggests adequate functioning, then in-depth assessment may be wasteful and irrelevant. In addition to these considerations, teams are reminded that they must provide information to rule out any exclusionary criteria when making eligibility decisions, and therefore should plan to collect any needed information related to issues considered in the exclusionary criteria.

The first activity the evaluation team should conduct is a review of existing data. The evaluation team needs to consider all data that is currently available including evaluations and information provided by the parents, current classroom-based, local, or State assessments, and classroom-based observations, and observations by teachers and related service providers; and the child's response to scientifically, research-based interventions, if implemented. The review of existing data, as part of the evaluation, may be conducted without a meeting and without consent from the parents (K.A.R. 91-40-8(c)(d); K.A.R. 91-40-27(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d)(1)).

The purpose of reviewing existing data is to identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine:

- a. if the child is a child with an exceptionality;
- b. whether the child needs special education and related services;
- c. the educational needs of the child;
- d. the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child; and
- e. whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable goals set out in the IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. (K.A.R. 91-40-8(c); K.S.A. 72-986(i)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(a)(2))

At the time of the review of existing data the team should also consider whether any additional data will need to be collected to insure that when the evaluation team meets to determine eligibility, they will have a clear understanding of any potential exclusionary factors. We must not determine a child to be a child with an exceptionality if the determinant factor is lack of instruction in reading, including the essential components of reading instruction; lack of appropriate instruction in math; or limited English proficiency (K.A.R. 91-40-10(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(b)), therefore it is important to plan for each evaluation to yield information to allow these determinations to occur.

In addition to the exclusionary factors discussed above, there are additional requirements to consider when evaluating a child suspected of having a specific learning disability. To ensure that underachievement in a child suspected of having a specific learning disability is not due to lack of appropriate instruction in reading or math, the group must consider, as part of the evaluation:

- (1) Data that demonstrate that prior to, or as a part of, the referral process, the child was provided appropriate instruction in regular education settings, delivered by qualified personnel; and
- (2) Data-based documentation of repeated assessments of achievement at reasonable intervals, reflecting formal assessment of child progress during instruction, which was provided to the child's parents. (K.A.R. 91-40-7(c)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.309(b))

Appropriate instruction in reading includes the essential components of reading instruction as defined in section 1208(3) of NCLB as phonemic awareness, phonics, vocabulary development, reading fluency including oral reading skills, and reading comprehension strategies. Often this information will have been collected before a child is referred for an initial evaluation; however, it is important that the team learns whether or not the data exists and plan to collect it as part of the evaluation if it has not been collected prior to the evaluation.

After the team has reviewed the existing data, there must be a determination of what data, if any, will be collected during the evaluation. The Prior Written Notice will be completed to reflect the data that will be collected as part of the evaluation. (See Appendix A, Figure 1-5a or 1-5b, Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent for Evaluation)

a. Requirements if No Additional Data are Needed

If the team has determined that no additional data are needed to determine whether the child is a child with an exceptionality, and to determine the child's educational needs, the school must notify the parents

- (1) of that determination and the reasons for it; and
- (2) the right of the parents to request an assessment to determine whether the child is a child with an exceptionality, and to determine the educational needs of the child (K.A.R. 91-40-8(e)).

The school district is not required to conduct the assessment described in (2) above unless requested to do so by the child's parents. In addition, if the parents request an assessment of their child, the school district may refuse to do so, but it must provide the parents with Prior Written Notice of the refusal to conduct the assessment and the reasons for the refusal. The parents may request mediation or due process if they want the assessment conducted. (See Appendix A, Figure 1-5a, 1-5b, Prior Written Notice and Consent for Initial Evaluation, and 3-3, No Additional Data Needed form)

b. Requirements if Additional Data are Needed

If the team has determined that additional data are needed, the team should plan who will collect it and plan to insure all data will be collected within the evaluation timeline. The procedures to be used to collect the data should be described on the Prior Written Notice for the initial evaluation and provided to the parents for their consent.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-986 (i) As part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as part of any reevaluation under this section, the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, shall:

(1) Review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher and related services providers' observations; and

(2) on the basis of that review, and input from the child's parents, identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine: (A)

Whether the child is an exceptional child and the educational needs of the child, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the current educational needs of the child; (B) the present levels of academic and related needs of the child; (C) whether the child needs special education and related services; or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and (D) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-8(c)(d)(e)

(c) As a part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as a part of any reevaluation, each agency shall ensure that members of an appropriate IEP team for the child and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, comply with the following requirements:

(1) The evaluation team shall review existing evaluation data on the child, including the following information:

(A) Evaluations and information provided by the parent of the child;

(B) current classroom-based, local, and state assessments and classroom-based observations; and

(C) observations by teachers and related services providers.

(2) On the basis of that review and input from the child's parent, the evaluation team shall identify what additional data, if any, is needed to determine the following matters:

(A) Whether the child has a particular category of exceptionality or, in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to have such an exceptionality;

(B) what the present levels of academic achievement and educational and related developmental needs of the child are;

(C) whether the child needs special education and related services, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and

(D) whether, in the case of a reevaluation of the child, any additions or modifications to the special education and related services currently being provided to the child are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

(d) The team described in subsection (c) may conduct its review without a meeting.

(e) (1) If the team described in subsection (c) determines that additional data is required to make any of the determinations specified in paragraph

(2) of subsection (c), the agency, after giving proper written notice to the parent and obtaining parental consent, shall administer those tests and evaluations that are appropriate to produce the needed data.

K.A.R. 91-40-10(c)

(c) An evaluation team shall not determine a child to be an exceptional child if the determinant factor for that eligibility determination is the child's lack of appropriate instruction in reading or mathematics or limited English proficiency, and if the child does not otherwise qualify as a child with an exceptionality.

K.A.R. 91-40-27(e)

(e) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent before taking either of the following actions:

(1) Reviewing existing data as part of an evaluation, reevaluation, or functional behavioral assessment; or

(2) administering a test or other evaluation that is administered to all children, unless before administration of that test or evaluation, consent is required of the parents of all children.

2. Request for Consent

The school must obtain informed consent from the parent of the child before conducting the evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(a)). In determining that informed consent is obtained, the following must be insured (K.A.R. 91-40-1(l); 34 C.F.R. 300.9):

- a. The parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is being sought, in his or her native language, or other mode of communication.
- b. The parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which his or her consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records (if any) that will be released and to whom.
- c. The parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time.
- d. If a parent revokes consent, that revocation is not retroactive (i.e., it does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked).

Parental consent for initial evaluation must not be construed as consent for initial provision of special education and related services.

3. Failure to Respond or to Provide Consent

The school must make reasonable attempts to obtain consent from the parents to conduct the initial evaluation. Reasonable attempts are defined as at least 2 contacts by 2 different methods (phone calls, letters, visits, email, etc.) and documentation of such attempts should be kept including detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted and the results, copies of written correspondence sent to the parents and their response if any, and visits made to the parents home or place of employment, and the results, if any, from the parents (K.A.R. 91-40-27(g); K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(d)(1)).

If the parent does not provide (refuses) consent or fails to respond to a request to provide consent for an initial evaluation, the school may, but is not required to, pursue the initial evaluation by utilizing mediation or by requesting a due process hearing. The school does not violate its obligation for (provisions of FAPE) Child Find or for conducting an initial evaluation if it declines to pursue the evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-27(f)(1)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(a)(3)). Additionally, under the disciplinary protections, the school would not be deemed to have knowledge of the child's disability if the parent has not allowed an evaluation or refused services; or the child has been evaluated and determined not to have a disability (K.S.A. 72-994(c)).

The district is required to locate, identify, and evaluate children who are home schooled, but not required to provide services unless the child is enrolled in the public school. If the parent of a child who is home schooled or voluntarily placed in a private school by the parents does not provide consent for the initial evaluation, or the parent fails to respond to a request to provide consent, the school can NOT use mediation or due process procedures to obtain consent. In this case the school is not required to consider the child as eligible for services and does not violate the FAPE requirement (K.A.R. 91-40-27(f)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d)(4)).

(b) An agency shall provide notice to the parents of a child that describes any evaluation procedures such agency proposes to conduct. In conducting the evaluation, the agency shall:

- (1) Use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child and the content of the child's individualized education program, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress, in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities;
- (2) not use any single measure or assessment as the sole criterion for determining whether a child is an exceptional child or determining an appropriate educational program for the child;
- (3) use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors; and

- (4) in determining whether a child has a specific learning disability, not be required to take into consideration whether the child has a severe discrepancy between achievement and intellectual ability, and may use a process that determines if the child responds to scientific, research-based intervention as part of the child's evaluation.

K.S.A. 72-988

- (b) The parents of exceptional children shall have the right to:
- (2) written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency:
- (A) Proposes to initiate or change; or
  - (B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child;
- (e) A list of the rights available to the parents of exceptional children shall be given to the parents only one time each school year, except a copy also shall be given to the parents:
- (A) Upon initial referral or parental request for evaluation;
  - (B) upon request of a parent; and
  - (C) upon the initial filing of a complaint under subsection (b)(4).

K.S.A. 72-990. Notice of parental rights; contents.

The notice required by subsection (b)(2) of K.S.A. 72-988, and amendments thereto, shall include:

- (a) A description of the action proposed or refused by the agency;
- (b) an explanation of why the agency proposes or refuses to take the action;
- (c) a description of other options that the agency or IEP team considered and the reasons those options were rejected;
- (d) a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed or refused action;
- (e) a description of any other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal;
- (f) a statement that the parents have protection under the procedural safeguards of this act and, if the notice is not an initial referral for evaluation, the means by which a copy of the procedural safeguards can be obtained; and
- (g) sources for parents to contact to obtain assistance in understanding the provisions of the federal law and this act.

K.S.A. 72-994. School district knowledge that child is child with disability prior to determination, when deemed; subsection of child to disciplinary action, when; evaluation and placement of child.

- (a) A child who has not been determined to be eligible for special education and related services under this act and who has engaged in behavior that violated any rule or code of conduct of the school district may assert any of the protections provided for in this act if the school district had knowledge, as determined in accordance with this section, that the child was a child with a disability before the behavior that precipitated the disciplinary action occurred.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)

(l) "Consent" means all of the following:

- (1) A parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought, in the parent's native language or other mode of communication.
- (2) A parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records, if any, that will be released and to whom.
- (3) A parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time, but if the parent revokes consent, that the revocation is not retroactive and does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked.

(e)(1) An agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate.

- (2) If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent to provide notice of the meeting and to secure the parent's participation. The record shall include at least two of the following:
- (A) Detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls;
  - (B) detailed records of visits made to the parent's home or homes, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit;
  - (C) copies of correspondence sent to the parent and any responses received;
  - (D) detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parent and the results of that attempt.

K.A.R. 91-40-26. Notice requirements.

- (a) In providing any notice to the parents of an exceptional child in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990 and amendments thereto, regarding action proposed or refused by an agency, the agency shall ensure that the notice includes the following descriptions:
- (1) a description of other options the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and
  - (2) a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal.
- (b) The notice shall be ~~is~~ written in a language understandable to the general public and ~~is~~ provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so.

(c) If the native language or other mode of communication of a parent is not a written language, the agency shall take steps to ensure all of the following:

- (1) The notice is translated orally or by other means to the parent in the parent's native language or other mode of communication.
- (2) The parent understands the content of the notice.
- (3) There is written evidence that the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection have been met.

K.A.R. 91-40-27. Parental consent.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this regulation, an agency shall obtain written parental consent before taking any of the following actions:

- (1) Conducting an initial evaluation or any reevaluation of an exceptional child;
- (2) initially providing special education and related services to an exceptional child; or
- (3) making a material change in services to, or a substantial change in the placement of, an exceptional child, unless the change is made under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-33 through 91-40-38, or is based upon the child's graduation from high school or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services.

(d) An agency shall not construe parental consent for initial evaluation as parental consent for the initial provision of special education and related services to an exceptional child.

(e) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent before taking either of the following actions:

- (1) Reviewing existing data as part of an evaluation, reevaluation, or functional behavioral assessment; or
- (2) administering a test or other evaluation that is administered to all children, unless before administration of that test or evaluation, consent is required of the parents of all children.

(f) (1) If the parent of an exceptional child who is enrolled or is seeking to enroll in a public school does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or any reevaluation, or for a proposed material change in services or a substantial change in the placement of the parent's child, an agency may, but is not required to, pursue the evaluation or proposed change by initiating due process or mediation procedures.

(2) If the parent of an exceptional child who is being home schooled or has been placed in a private school by the parent does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or a reevaluation, or fails to respond to a request to provide consent, an agency may not pursue the evaluation or reevaluation by initiating mediation or due process procedures.

(3) An agency shall not be in violation of its obligations for identification, evaluation or reevaluation if the agency declines to pursue an evaluation or reevaluation, because a parent has failed to provide consent for the proposed action.

(4) Each agency shall document its attempts to obtain parental consent for action proposed under this regulation.

(g) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent for a reevaluation or a proposed change in services or placement of the child if the agency has made attempts, as described in K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2), to obtain consent but the parents have failed to respond.

(h) An agency shall not use a parent's refusal to consent to an activity or service to deny the parent or child other activities or services offered by the agency.

C. THE EVALUATION TEAM

Once the consent has been obtained from the parent, a team is formed who will have the responsibility of carrying out the evaluation process. The membership of the evaluation team are the same as those who would serve on the child's IEP Team (should the child be found eligible), including the parents. If the child is suspected of having a specific learning disability the team may include other qualified professionals, as appropriate.

Team members on each evaluation team may differ; however, there are specific members and skills that must be represented on the team. The make up of this team would include:

- The parents of the child;
- Not less than one regular education teacher of the child (if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment); If the child does not have a regular teacher, a regular classroom teacher qualified to teach a child of his or her age; or if the child is less than school age, an individual qualified to teach a child of his or her age;
- Not less than one special education teacher of the child, or where appropriate, not less than one special education service provider of the child;
- A representative of the local education agency who:
  - Is qualified to provide, or supervise the provision of, specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of children with exceptionalities,
  - Is knowledgeable about the general education curriculum, and
  - Is knowledgeable about the availability of resources of the public agency;
- An individual who can interpret the instructional implications of evaluation results;

- At least one person qualified to conduct individual diagnostic examinations of children; and
- At the discretion of the parent or agency, other individuals who have knowledge or special expertise regarding the child, including related services personnel as appropriate. (K.S.A. 72-962(u); K.A.R. 91-40-11(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.321; 34 C.F.R. 300.308)

State Statute
K.S.A. 72-962

- (u) "Individualized education program team" or "IEP team" means a group of individuals composed of:
- (1) The parents of a child;
  - (2) at least one regular education teacher of the child, if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment;
  - (3) at least one special education teacher or, where appropriate, at least one special education provider of the child; (4) a representative of the agency directly involved in providing educational services for the child who:
    - (A) Is qualified to provide, or supervise the provision of, specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of exceptional children;
    - (B) is knowledgeable about the general curriculum; and
    - (C) is knowledgeable about the availability of resources of the agency;
  - (5) an individual who can interpret the instructional implications of evaluation results;
  - (6) at the discretion of the parent or the agency, other individuals who have knowledge or special expertise regarding the child, including related services personnel as appropriate; and
  - (7) whenever appropriate, the child.

91-40-11. Evaluation for specific learning disability; use of response to intervention process.

- (a) If a child is suspected of having a specific learning disability and believed to need special education services because of that disability, the agency shall ensure that the evaluation of the child is made by the child's parent and a group of qualified professionals, including the following individuals:
- (1)(A) The child's regular education teacher or, if the child does not have a regular education teacher, a regular classroom teacher qualified to teach a child of the child's age; or
  - (B) for a child of less than school age, an individual who is qualified to teach a child of the child's age; and
  - (2) at least one person qualified to conduct individual diagnostic examinations of children, including a school psychologist, speech-language pathologist, or remedial reading teacher.

D. TIMELINE FOR CONDUCTING THE INITIAL EVALUATION

Kansas has established a 60 school-day timeline consistent with federal regulations (K.A.R. 91-40-8(f); 34 C.F.R. 300.301(c)). The timeline for conducting the initial evaluation starts upon receipt of written parental consent to conduct the evaluation, and ends with the implementation of an IEP if the child is found eligible for special education services or completion of the evaluation report if the child is not found eligible for special education services.

For children who transfer from one public agency to another in the same school year, assessments are coordinated with the child's prior school, as necessary and as expeditiously as possible, to ensure prompt completion of an evaluation begun by the prior school (K.S.A. 72-986(c)(4)).

The initial evaluation is to be completed within the 60-school-day timeline required in K.A.R. 91-40-8(f). There is no specified timeline for the initial evaluation itself, but several requirements must all be completed within 60 school days unless an agency can justify the need for a longer period of time or has obtained written parent consent for an extension of time. (K.A.R. 91-40-16 addresses IEP requirements, and K.A.R. 91-40-17 specifies the IEP Team participants.)

Preceding the initiation of this timeline, the school provides the parents with their Parent Rights Notice upon referral, Prior Written Notice for initial evaluation, and Request for Consent.

1. The 60-school-day timeline begins when the agency receives written parent consent to conduct the initial evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-8(f)).
2. The initial evaluation is started within a reasonable time.
3. The initial evaluation is completed, and, on the basis of the evaluation data, the team determines eligibility for special education and related services.
4. The evaluation/eligibility team provides the parents with the Evaluation/Eligibility Report within a reasonable period of time (K.S.A. 72-986(e)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(a)(2); and FERPA 34 C.F.R. 99.10(b)).
5. The school provides the parents with Prior Written Notice for proposed identification (can be combined with notice for initial services).
6. The school provides the parents with the Notice of the IEP meeting at least 10 calendar days before the meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(2)). (NOTE: If the team believes that eligibility and IEP development may be discussed at the same meeting, the IEP Meeting Notice must describe all proposed special education decisions to be addressed at the meeting.)
7. The IEP Team meets and develops an IEP within 30 calendar days of determination of eligibility (34 C.F.R. 300.323(c)(1) and K.A.R. 91-40-8(h)).
8. The school provides the parents with Prior Written Notice and request for consent for the initial provision of special education and related services to the child.
9. Services on the IEP are implemented not later than 10 school days after written parent consent for provision of special education services is granted, unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown (K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(2)).
10. The 60-school-day timeline ends when the IEP is implemented.

Exceptions to the Timeline

There are only three specific instances when an extension of the 60 school-day timeline may be justified:

- a. The parent of the child repeatedly fails or refuses to produce the child for the evaluation; or,
- b. If a child enrolls in a new district after the evaluation has begun and before the determination of eligibility, however, the new district is required to make sufficient progress to ensure a prompt completion of the evaluation, and the parent and the school district must agree to a specific timeline for completion.
- c. If the parent and the school agree in writing to extend the timeline. (K.A.R. 91-40-8(f); 34 C.F.R. 300.301(d))

State Statute:*K.S.A. 72-986(c)(4)

(c) An agency shall ensure that:

(4) the assessments of any child who transfers from another agency during the school year are coordinated with the child's prior school, as necessary and as expeditiously as possible, to ensure prompt completion of an evaluation begun by the prior school.

State Regulations:*K.A.R. 91-40-8(f)(g)

(f) Unless an agency has obtained written parental consent to an extension of time and except as otherwise provided in subsection (g), the agency shall complete the following activities within 60 school days of the date the agency receives written parental consent for evaluation of a child:

- (1) Conduct the evaluation of the child;

- (2) conduct a meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child and, if so, to develop an IEP for the child. The agency shall give notice of this meeting to the parent as required by K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); and
- (3) implement the child's IEP in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-16.
- (g) An agency shall not be subject to the time frame prescribed in subsection (f) if either of the following conditions is met:
- (1) The parent of the child who is to be evaluated repeatedly fails or refuses to produce the child for the evaluation.
  - (2) The child enrolls in a different school before the evaluation is completed, and the parent and new school agree to a specific date by which the evaluation will be completed.
- (h) In complying with subsection (f), each agency shall ensure that an IEP is developed for each exceptional child within 30 days from the date on which the child is determined to need special education and related services.

K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)

- (b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met:
- (1) An IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child.
  - (2) Those services to which the parent has granted written consent as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.
  - (3) An IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.
  - (4) The child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation.
  - (5) Each teacher and provider described in paragraph (4) of this subsection is informed of the following:
    - (A) That individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and
    - (B) the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

E. CONDUCTING THE EVALUATION

The initial evaluation must include a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child, the educational needs of the child, and the content of the child's IEP, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(1)). In addition, the procedures must also lead to the determination of the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance of the child. The public agency must administer such assessments and other evaluation measures as may be needed to produce the data to determine:

- if the child is a child with an exceptionality;
- whether the child needs special education and related services;
- the educational needs of the child;
- the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child; and
- whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable goals set out in the IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. (K.S.A. 72-986(i)(2); K.A.R. 91-40-8(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(a)(2))

As stated previously, the data collected is critical not only for the purpose of determining whether a child is eligible for special education, but also to assist in the development of present levels of academic achievement and functional performance. Regulations clearly state that the evaluation must result in determining the content of the child's IEP (if found eligible) including information related to enabling the child to be involved in and progress in the general curriculum (or for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities) (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(b)(ii)). However, the evaluation should assist in the development of an instructional plan for the child if the child is not found to be eligible.

If the team has proposed to conduct the evaluation based only on existing data, the existing data must meet the requirements of this section for an evaluation.

1. Evaluation Procedures

During the evaluation process, the child is assessed in all areas related to the suspected exceptionality, including, if appropriate, health, vision, hearing, social and emotional status, general intelligence, academic performance, communicative status, and motor abilities (K.A.R. 91-40-9(b)(1), K.A.R. 91-40-11(b)(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(c)(4)). All assessment tools and strategies must provide relevant information that directly assists in determining the educational needs of the child (K.A.R. 91-40-9(a)(9); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(c)(7)).

When conducting an evaluation, no single measure or assessment shall be used as the sole criterion for determining whether the child is a child with an exceptionality and for determining an appropriate educational program for the child. When selecting assessment tools to assist in gathering the evaluation data across the five sources of data, those conducting the evaluation must also ensure the following requirements are met (K.A.R. 91-40-9; 34 C.F.R. 300.304(b)(c)):

- Use a variety of assessment tools and strategies.
- Use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors.
- Materials and procedures used to assess a child with limited English proficiency shall be selected and administered to ensure that they measure the extent to which the child has an exceptionality and needs special education, rather than measuring the child's English language skills.
- Assessments and other evaluation materials are:
  - selected and administered so as not to be discriminatory on a racial or cultural basis;
  - provided and administered in the child's native language or other mode of communication, and in the form most likely to yield accurate information on what the child knows and can do academically, developmentally, and functionally, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so;
  - used for the purposes for which the assessments or measures are valid and reliable;
  - administered by trained and knowledgeable personnel;
  - administered in accordance with instructions provided by the producer of the assessments (Note: if an assessment is not conducted under standard conditions, a description of the extent to which it varied from standard conditions (e.g., the qualifications of the person administering the test, or the method of test administration) must be included in the evaluation report.)
  - tailored to assess specific areas of educational need and not merely those designed to provide a single general intelligence quotient;
  - selected and administered so as best to ensure that if an assessment is administered to a child with impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills, the assessment results accurately reflect the child's aptitude or achievement level or whatever other factors the test purports to measure, rather than reflecting the child's impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills (unless those skills are the factors that the test purports to measure).

The evaluation must be sufficiently comprehensive to identify all of the child's special education and related services needs, whether or not commonly linked to the exceptionality category being considered for the child. If the child is found eligible, this information translates into the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFPs) and forms the basis for making all the decisions in the IEP. If the child is not found eligible, this information assists the school in determining other appropriate supports for the child. Ultimately, at the close of an evaluation, the team should have enough information to support the child whether or not the child is found eligible for special education. The team should be able to describe where the child is currently performing within the general education curriculum and standards as well as able to describe how (or if) the child's unique learning characteristics are impacting his/her ability to access and make progress in the general education curriculum (or for early childhood, to participate in appropriate activities). Other issues that are impacting the child's ability to function in the learning environment should also be described so that the extent of the child's needs may be realized.

There are two methods of evaluation, (i)“the child’s response to scientific, research-based intervention” and (ii)“a pattern of strengths and weaknesses”, which are outlined in federal regulations with regard to the identification of students with specific learning disabilities. However, in Kansas, both are also appropriate to be used to determine eligibility for any of the areas of exceptionality. Below is a brief description of each method of evaluation. (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(4)

The process based on the child’s response to scientific, research-based intervention ((i) above) is referred to as Response to Intervention (RtI), and is based on a school-wide multi-tier system of interventions for all students. In Kansas, the child’s response to scientific, research-based intervention is referred to as a Multi-Tiered System of Support (MTSS). The evaluation data collected during this process will include results of school-wide screening and benchmark assessments, information collected during individual child problem-solving, and most importantly, the results of the child’s response to various types of interventions. Most often, the child’s response to intervention data will take the form of charts and graphs which reflect individual child growth under various intervention conditions. Teams analyze and interpret this information to determine whether or not the child is a child with an exceptionality and to determine and describe the educational needs of the child.

The process based on a child’s pattern of strengths and weaknesses ((ii) above) tends to rely more heavily on the results of norm-referenced tests and other assessments. Both ability and achievement measures are analyzed to identify patterns within academic skills and cognitive functions. These are interpreted in combination with other relevant data to identify the child’s strengths and weaknesses, including the child’s approach to tasks, characteristic patterns of learning, and difficulties in processing information. A discrepancy between ability and achievement is an example of one type of information that might be collected to help establish a pattern of strengths and weaknesses. Teams analyze and interpret this information to determine whether the pattern of strengths and weaknesses is characteristic of a child with an exceptionality and to determine and describe the child’s educational needs.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-986 (b) An agency shall provide notice to the parents of a child that describes any evaluation procedures such agency proposes to conduct. In conducting the evaluation, the agency shall:

- (1) Use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child and the content of the child’s individualized education program, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress, in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities;
- (2) not use any single measure or assessment as the sole criterion for determining whether a child is an exceptional child or determining an appropriate educational program for the child;
- (3) use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors; and
- (4) in determining whether a child has a specific learning disability, not be required to take into consideration whether the child has a severe discrepancy between achievement and intellectual ability, and may use a process that determines if the child responds to scientific, research-based intervention as part of the child’s evaluation.

(c) An agency shall ensure that:

- (1) Assessments and other evaluation materials used to assess a child under this section: (A) Are selected and administered so as not to be discriminatory on a racial or cultural basis; (B) are provided and administered in the language and form most likely to yield accurate information on what the child knows and is able to do academically, developmentally and functionally, unless it is not feasible to so provide or administer; (C) are valid and reliable for the specific purpose for which they are used; (D) are administered by trained and knowledgeable personnel; and (E) are administered in accordance with instructions provided by the producer of such tests;
- (2) the child is assessed in all areas of suspected exceptionality;
- (3) assessment tools and strategies that provide relevant information that directly assists persons in determining the educational needs of the child are provided; and
- (4) the assessments of any child who transfers from another agency during the school year are coordinated with the child’s prior school, as necessary and as expeditiously as possible, to ensure prompt completion of an evaluation begun by the prior school.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-8(c)

(c)As a part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as a part of any reevaluation, each agency shall ensure that members of an appropriate IEP team for the child and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, comply with the following requirements:

- (1) The evaluation team shall review existing evaluation data on the child, including the following information:
  - (A) Evaluations and information provided by the parent of the child;
  - (B) current classroom-based, local, and state assessments and classroom-based observations; and
  - (C) observations by teachers and related services providers.
- (2) On the basis of that review and input from the child’s parent, the evaluation team shall identify what additional data, if any, is needed to determine the following matters:

- (A) Whether the child has a particular category of exceptionality or, in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to have such an exceptionality;
- (B) what the present levels of academic achievement and educational and related developmental needs of the child are;
- (C) whether the child needs special education and related services, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and
- (D) whether, in the case of a reevaluation of the child, any additions or modifications to the special education and related services currently being provided to the child are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

K.A.R. 91-40-9. Evaluation procedures. (a) If assessment instruments are used as a part of the evaluation or reevaluation of an exceptional child, the agency shall ensure that the following requirements are met:

- (1) The assessment instruments or materials shall meet the following criteria:
  - (A) Be selected and administered so as not to be racially or culturally discriminatory; and
  - (B) be provided and administered in the child's native language or other mode of communication and in the form most likely to yield accurate information on what the child knows and can do academically, developmentally, and functionally, unless this is clearly not feasible.
- (2) Materials and procedures used to assess a child with limited English proficiency shall be selected and administered to ensure that they measure the extent to which the child has an exceptionality and needs special education, rather than measuring the child's English language skills.
- (3) A variety of assessment tools and strategies shall be used to gather relevant functional and developmental information about the child, including information provided by the parent, and information related to enabling the child to be involved and progress in the general curriculum or, for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities that could assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child and what the content of the child's IEP should be.
- (4) Any standardized tests that are given to a child shall meet the following criteria:
  - (A) Have been validated for the specific purpose for which they are used; and
  - (B) be administered by trained and knowledgeable personnel in accordance with any instructions provided by the producer of the assessment.
- (5) If an assessment is not conducted under standard conditions, a description of the extent to which the assessment varied from standard conditions shall be included in the evaluation report.
- (6) Assessments and other evaluation materials shall include those that are tailored to assess specific areas of educational need and not merely those that are designed to provide a single general intelligence quotient.
- (7) Assessments shall be selected and administered to ensure that if an assessment is administered to a child with impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills, the ~~test~~ results accurately reflect the child's aptitude or achievement level or whatever other factors the assessment purports to measure, rather than reflecting the child's impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills, unless those skills are the factors that the assessment purports to measure.
- (8) A single procedure shall not be used as the sole criterion for determining whether a child is an exceptional child and for determining an appropriate educational program for the child.
- (9) Each agency shall use assessment tools and strategies that provide relevant information that directly assists persons in determining the educational needs of the child.

(b) (1) Each child shall be assessed in all areas related to a suspected exceptionality, including, if appropriate, the following:

- (A) Health;
- (B) vision;
- (C) hearing;
- (D) social and emotional status;
- (E) general intelligence;
- (F) academic performance;
- (G) communicative status; and
- (H) motor abilities.

(2) Each evaluation shall be sufficiently comprehensive to identify all of the child's special education and related services needs, whether or not commonly linked to the disability category in which the child has been classified.

(c) If a child is suspected of having a specific learning disability, the agency also shall follow the procedures prescribed in K.A.R. 91-40-11 in conducting the evaluation of the child.

K.A.R. 91-40-11(b)(c)

(b)(1) A group evaluating a child for a specific learning disability may determine that the child has that disability only if the following conditions are met:

- (A) The child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or meet state-approved grade-level standards, if any, in one or more of the following areas, when the child is provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age and grade level:
  - (i) Oral expression;
  - (ii) listening comprehension;
  - (iii) written expression;
  - (iv) basic reading skill;
  - (v) reading fluency skills;
  - (vi) reading comprehension;
  - (vii) mathematics calculation; and
  - (viii) mathematics problem solving; and

(B)(i) The child does not make sufficient progress to meet age or state-approved grade-level standards in one or more of the areas identified in paragraph (b)(1)(A) when using a process based on the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention; or
 (ii) the child exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, grade-level standards, or intellectual development that is determined by the group conducting the evaluation to be relevant to the identification of a specific learning disability, using appropriate assessments.

(2) A child shall not be determined to be a child with a specific learning disability unless the group evaluating the child determines that its findings under paragraphs (b)(1)(A) and (B) are not primarily the result of any of the following:

(i) A visual, hearing, or motor disability;

(ii) mental retardation;

(iii) emotional disturbance;

(iv) cultural factors;

(v) environmental or economic disadvantage; or

(vi) limited English proficiency.

(c) (1) The group evaluating the child shall ensure that the child is observed in the child's learning environment, including the regular classroom setting, to document the child's academic performance and behavior in the areas of difficulty.

(2) In conducting the observation, the group may employ either of the following procedures:

(A) Use information from an observation in routine classroom instruction and monitoring of the child's performance that was done before the child was referred for an evaluation; or

(B) have at least one member of the group conduct an observation of the child's academic performance in the regular classroom after the child has been referred for an evaluation and parental consent is obtained.

2. Collecting Evaluation Data

Collecting relevant functional, developmental and academic information related to enabling the child to be involved in, and progress in, the general curriculum (or for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities) requires that data be collected not only about the child, but about the child's interactions in the curriculum, instruction, and environment as well. Every evaluation should be approached and designed individually based on the specific concerns and the selection of assessment tools based on the information needed to answer the eligibility questions. It would be inappropriate to use the exact same battery of assessments for all children or to rely on any single tool to conduct an evaluation.

Data must be collected from the five sources referred to in Kansas as G R I O T. GRIOT represents five sources of data that teams need to be aware of and use as appropriate. The following is a discussion of each of the five sources of data:

G – General Education Interventions/Curriculum Progress: During the initial evaluation we must look at two different "G"s:

- (1) General Education Interventions: Whether you're operating within a school system that uses individual child problem solving (problem-solving teams, SIT, SAT, CARE, etc.) and/or a school-wide multi-tier model of interventions, when a child is referred for an initial evaluation there will be data on what scientific, research-based interventions have been used with the child and specific data about the effectiveness and results of the implementation of the interventions. K.A.R. 91-40-7(c) requires that results of the interventions provided to the child prior to a referral for an initial evaluation are documented and provided to the parent. Documentation may be done through a written intervention plan developed by the problem-solving team, which may include data that the child was provided appropriate instruction in general education settings, including repeated assessments of achievement at reasonable intervals, reflecting formal assessment of child progress during instruction. (See Chapter 2, Screening and General Education Interventions.)
- (2) General Education Curriculum Progress: An evaluation team needs to understand how the child is progressing in general education curriculum across settings with the available supports. To do this they must understand the outcomes of the general education curriculum and how the skills represented in those outcomes relate to the needs of each child. Are the skills needed, for the child we are working with, different from the skills that general education children need? Is the instruction required for the child to learn those skills different? The general education curriculum outcomes and the supports available through general education are unique to each school. Gaining an understanding of what support is available and the level of support needed by the child is one of the most important parts of the evaluation.

- R – Record Review: The evaluation team should also include as part of the evaluation a review of records. These records would include such things as information provided by the parents, current classroom-based assessments, information from previous services providers, screenings, previous evaluations, reports from other agencies, portfolios, discipline records, cumulative files, and other records.
- I – Interview: It is important to understand the perceptions of significant adults in the child's life and of the child himself. Parents, teachers, and the child can all typically provide insight into areas of strengths and needs. Interviews can also provide information about significant historical events in the child's life as well as about his performance in the classroom and other settings.
- O – Observation: A district must ensure the child is observed in the child's learning environment (including the regular education classroom setting) to document the child's academic performance and behavior in the areas of difficulty (K.A.R. 91-40-11(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.310). In the case of a child of less than school age or out of school, a group member must observe the child in an environment appropriate for a child of that age. If the child is already in an educational setting the observation should be done in that setting, opposed to bringing them into a different setting just for observation. These observations could include structured observations, rating scales, ecological instruments (e.g., EBASS, TIES-II), behavioral interventions, functional analysis of behavior and instruction, anecdotal, and other observations (conducted by parents, teachers, related services personnel, and others). The purpose of the observation is to help the evaluation team understand the extent to which the child's skills are impacting their ability to participate and progress in a variety of settings. Observations allow you to see first hand how a child is functioning in naturally occurring settings. Observation data can also allow you to compare the child's behavior to that of peers in the same setting. Observation data helps us to understand not only the child's current functional performance but also the level of independence demonstrated which can help determine necessary supports.
- T – Test: A wide range of tests or assessments may be useful in determining an individual child's skills, abilities, interests, and aptitudes. Typically, a test is regarded as an individual measure of a specific skill or ability, while assessment is regarded as broader way of collecting information that may include tests and other approaches to data collection. Standardized norm-referenced tests are helpful if the information being sought is to determine how a child compares to a national group of children of the same age or grade. Criterion-reference tests are helpful in determining if the child has mastered skills expected of a certain age or grade level. Tests typically provide specific information but are never adequate as a single source of data to determine eligibility for special education. Because tests require a controlled testing environment, the result is that children are removed from their learning environments to participate. This is a very intrusive way of gathering data and the value of the data obtained should always be weighed carefully against the cost of missed class time. For this reason, tests should be thoughtfully selected and be used for specific purposes when data cannot be obtained through other sources. Some test information may already have been collected during the GEI process, especially if the child attends a school that uses school-wide benchmark assessment. However, additional information may need to be collected during the initial evaluation. This might include curriculum-based assessments (e.g., CBA, CBM, or CBE), performance-based assessments (i.e., rubric scoring), or other skill measures such as individual reading inventories. The testing that needs to be done will vary depending on what information already has been collected and the needs of the individual child. Diagnostic testing might include measures of reading, math, written language, or other academic skills, or tests of motor functioning, speech/language skills, adaptive behavior, self-concept, or any domain of concern. As with all types of data collection, the information from testing needs to be useful for both diagnostic and programmatic decision-making.

GRIOT offers a framework in which to organize and structure data collection. It is not that any data source or assessment procedure is inherently good or bad. All procedures and tools are appropriate as long as they are selected thoughtfully and for the appropriate purposes. A team will not necessarily use all data sources every time an evaluation is conducted. Thoughtful planning will need to be given for each child to ensure that the team is using the appropriate tools to collect data useful for both making the eligibility determination and for program planning.

F. ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATION AND DOCUMENTATION

At the time the evaluation is completed and the information is compiled, the team should schedule a time to convene in order to make the determination of eligibility. Parents are to be provided an opportunity to participate in the eligibility meeting, which can be conducted at the same time as the IEP team meeting. The school must provide a notice of the meeting at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting date that includes the requirements in K.A.R. 91-40-17(b)(1).

The team must ensure that information obtained from all sources used in the evaluation is documented and carefully considered (K.A.R. 91-40-10(d)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(c)(1)(ii)). The parents and other qualified professionals review the results of the initial evaluation to determine:

- (1) whether the child is a child with an exceptionality as defined in Federal and State laws and regulations (K.A.R. 91-40-1(k)(w); and
- (2) the educational needs of the child (K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(a)).

When interpreting evaluation data for the purpose of making these determinations, the team must:

- draw upon information from a variety of sources, including aptitude and achievement tests, parent input, and teacher recommendations, as well as information about the child's physical condition, social or cultural background, and adaptive behavior; and
- ensure that information obtained from all of these sources is documented and carefully considered (K.A.R. 91-40-10(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(c)(1)(i) and (ii)).

Teams must ensure that the child meets the definition of one of the categories of exceptionality and, as a result of that exceptionality, needs special education and related services (i.e., 2 pronged test) (K.A.R. 91-40-1(k)(w); 34 C.F.R. 300.8). If a child meets the definition of an exceptionality category but does not need special education and related services, s/he will not be determined to be eligible. If the child has a need for special education and related services but does not meet the definition of an exceptionality category, s/he will not be determined to be eligible. In the case of a child who is found to have a disability, but does not need special education and related services, a referral for a 504 evaluation may be considered. Teams may utilize the "Eligibility Indicators, Fall 2007" document (See Appendix A, Figure 3-4).

1. Determining Whether the Child is a Child with an Exceptionality

The team reviews the data to determine whether or not the child is a child with an exceptionality. To do this, team members compare the data about the child to see if there is a match to one of the exceptionality categories defined in the regulations. However, even when the data point to a particular area of exceptionality, there are exclusionary factors that must be examined before determining the child is a child with an exceptionality.

Regulations are very clear with regard to the fact that a child must NOT be determined to be a child with an exceptionality if:

- (a) the determinant factor is:
  - Lack of appropriate instruction in reading, including the essential components of reading instruction (defined in section 1208(3) of the ESEA(NCLB) as phonemic awareness, phonics, vocabulary development, reading fluency including oral reading skills, and reading comprehension strategies);
  - Lack of appropriate instruction in math; or
  - Limited English proficiency ; and

- (b) the child does not otherwise meet the eligibility criteria as a child with an exceptionality (K.S.A. 72-986(f); K.A.R. 91-40-10(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(b)).

There are unique issues that must be examined before a child may be determined to have a specific learning disability. It is important that the team attend to collecting the data needed to examine these issues prior to and/or as part of the initial evaluation. According to K.A.R. 91-40-11(b) (34 C.F.R. 300.309(a)), the group evaluating a child for a specific learning disability collects the following:

- (a) Data to determine that the child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or to meet State-approved grade-level standards in one or more of the following areas, when provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age or State-approved grade-level standards:
- oral expression;
  - listening comprehension;
  - written expression;
  - basic reading skill;
  - reading fluency skills;
  - reading comprehension;
  - mathematics calculation;
  - mathematics problem solving.

Additionally, in order for a child to be eligible as a child with a specific learning disability, the evaluation and eligibility report must document that the child meets the following conditions:

- a. The child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or to meet State-approved grade-level standards when provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age or State-approved grade-level standards,

AND

- (i) The child does not make sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade-level standards when using a process based on the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention;

OR

- (ii) The child exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, State-approved grade-level standards, or intellectual development.

- b. The determinate factor for why the child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or does not make sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade level standards, or exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses, is not primarily the result of:
- A visual, hearing or motor disability;
  - mental retardation;
  - emotional disturbance;
  - cultural factors;
  - environmental or economic disadvantage; or
  - limited English proficiency (K.A.R. 91-40-9(a)(2)(3), K.A.R. 91-40-11(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.309(a)(3)).

If the evaluation data indicates there is a match with a particular category of exceptionality and the team has ruled out the presence of any exclusionary factors, the team may determine that the child meets one of the requirements of eligibility as a child with an exceptionality (Prong 1 of the test of eligibility). If there is not a match or exclusionary factors are present, the team must determine that the child does not meet the eligibility of a child with an exceptionality.

2. Determining Whether the Child Needs Special Education and Related Services

The second prong of the test of eligibility is to determine whether or not the child needs special education and related services. It is helpful for teams to remember that by definition special education means specially designed instruction

(K.A.R. 91-40-1(kkk); 34 C.F.R. 300.39(a)(1)), and, that specially designed instruction means adapting the content, methodology or delivery of instruction to address the unique needs of a child that result from the child's exceptionality to ensure access of the child to the general education curriculum in order to meet the educational standards that apply to all children (34 C.F.R. 300.39(b)(3)(i)-(ii)). This implies that in order to have a need for special education, the child has specific needs which are so unique as to require specially designed instruction in order to access the general education curriculum.

Kansas regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-7(c), require that prior to referral for an initial evaluation the school must have data-based documentation of having provided appropriate instruction to the child and having implemented educational interventions and strategies for the child, along with repeated assessments of achievement at reasonable intervals, which reflect formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction. The results of which indicate that the child is suspected of having an exceptionality and may require special education and related services. If the school is implementing a multi-tiered model of intervention, it will have data regarding the child's needs related to the intensity of instruction and supports required for the child to be successful.

The team must review the evaluation data in such a way as to understand the extent of the child's needs with regard to specially designed instruction. Teams should be able to use the data to describe the intensity of the support needed to assist the child in accessing and progressing in the general education curriculum. It is only through this discussion that the team can determine whether or not the child's need for having adapted content, methodology, or delivery of instruction is so great that it cannot be provided without the support of special education.

If the team determines that the child's need for having adapted content, methodology, or delivery of instruction is so great that it cannot be provided in regular education without the support of special education, the team may determine that the child needs special education and related services (Prong 2 of the eligibility test). If the data suggests the child's needs for instruction can be provided within regular education without the support of special education and related services, the team must determine that the child is not in need of special education and related services.

3. Eligibility Report

The evaluation team shall ensure that the information obtained from all sources is documented and considered. After carefully considering all data and making the eligibility determination, the team then must document the decision made regarding the child's eligibility for special education and related services. Once the evaluation report and documentation of eligibility has been completed, each team member must certify in writing whether the report reflects the member's conclusion. If it does not reflect the member's conclusion, the team member must submit a separate statement presenting the member's conclusions (K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.311(b)). (See Appendix A, Figure 3-5, Evaluation/Eligibility Report Content Checklist)

The evaluation report serves as the documentation of the child's eligibility. The evaluation report and the documentation of eligibility must be provided, at no cost, to the parent (K.A.R. 91-40-10(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.306(a)(2)). Additionally, the school is not required to classify a child with an exceptionality according to his/her category of exceptionality if such child is regarded as a child with an exceptionality and is provided FAPE (K.A.R. 91-40-10(g)).

There are specific requirements for reporting the eligibility determination (K.A.R. 91-40-10(a), (e); 34 C.F.R. 300.311).

The evaluation report must include the following statements:

- a. whether the child is a child with an exceptionality;
- b. the basis for making the determination, including an assurance that the determination was made in accordance with applicable laws and regulations;
- c. the relevant behavior noted during the observation of the child; and for LD the relationship of that behavior to the child's academic functioning;

- d. the educationally relevant medical findings, if any;
- e. for a child determined to have a learning disability, the report must include documentation of the following:
  - (i) the child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or to meet State-approved grade-level standards when provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age or State-approved grade-level standards;
    - AND
    - o the child does not make sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade-level standards when using a process based on the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention;
    - OR
    - o the child exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, State-approved grade-level standards, or intellectual development.
  - (ii) the team determines the reason the child does not achieve adequately for the child's age, does not make sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade level standards, or exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses, is not primarily the result of:
    - o A visual, hearing or motor disability;
    - o mental retardation;
    - o emotional disturbance;
    - o cultural factors;
    - o environmental or economic disadvantage; or
    - o limited English proficiency.
  - (iii) if the child has participated in a process that assesses the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention (RtI/MTSS), the report must also document
    - o the instructional strategies used; and
    - o the student-centered data collected.
  - (iv) Documentation that the child's parents were notified about the process, including the following information:
    - o the State's policies regarding the amount and nature of student performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided (See Appendix A, Figure 2-3);
    - o strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning; and
    - o the parent's right to request an evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-10(e), (f); K.A.R. 91-40-9(a)(2)(3), K.A.R. 91-40-11; 34 C.F.R. 300.309(a)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.311(a)); and
- f. Signatures of each team member indicating whether the report reflects their conclusion. If it does not reflect the team member's conclusion, the team member must submit a separate statement presenting his/her conclusion.

State Statute:
K.S.A. 72-986(e)(f)

(e) Upon completion of the administration of assessments and other evaluation materials:

- (1) The determination of whether the child is an exceptional child shall be made by a team of qualified professionals and the parent of the child in accordance with this section; and
- (2) a copy of the evaluation report and the documentation of determination of eligibility shall be given to the parent.

(f) In making a determination of eligibility under this section, a child shall not be determined to be an exceptional child if the determinant factor for such determination is lack of instruction in reading, including instruction using the essential components of reading instruction, math or limited English proficiency.

(g) (1) If it is determined that a child is an exceptional child, the agency shall seek consent from the parent of the child to provide special education and related services to the child. No such services shall be provided until consent is given by the parent.

- (2) If the parent of a child refuses to consent to the provision of services, or fails to respond to a request for consent to services, the agency:
  - (A) Shall not initiate any procedure or proceeding under this act to gain authority to provide services to the child;
  - (B) shall not be considered to be in violation of the requirement to provide a free appropriate public education to the child; and
  - (C) shall not be required to convene an IEP meeting or develop an IEP for the child.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(k)(w)(kkk)

- (k) "Child with a disability" means the following:
- (1) A child evaluated as having mental retardation, a hearing impairment including deafness, a speech or language impairment, a visual impairment including blindness, emotional disturbance, an orthopedic impairment, autism, traumatic brain injury, any other health impairment, a specific learning disability, deaf-blindness, or multiple disabilities and who, by reason thereof, needs special education and related services; and
  - (2) for children ages three through nine, a child who is experiencing developmental delays and, by reason thereof, needs special education and related services.
- (w) "Exceptional children" means children with disabilities and gifted children.
- (kkk) "Special education" means the following:
- (1) Specially designed instruction, at no cost to the parents, to meet the unique needs of an exceptional child, including the following:
    - (A) Instruction conducted in the classroom, in the home, in hospitals and institutions, and in other settings; and
    - (B) instruction in physical education;
  - (2) paraeducator services, speech-language pathology services, and any other related service, if the service consists of specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability;
  - (3) occupational or physical therapy and interpreter services for deaf children if, without any of these services, a child would have to be educated in a more restrictive environment;
  - (4) travel training; and
  - (5) vocational education.

K.A.R. 91-40-10. Eligibility determination. (a) (1) After completion of appropriate evaluation procedures, a team of qualified professionals and the parent of the child who has been evaluated shall prepare a written evaluation report that includes a statement regarding each of the following matters:

- (A) The determination of whether the child has an exceptionality;
  - (B) the basis for making the determination;
  - (C) the relevant behavior noted during the observation of the child;
  - (D) the relationship of that behavior to the child's academic functioning;
  - (E) educationally relevant medical findings, if any; and
  - (F) ~~if~~ if the child was evaluated for a specific learning disability, the additional information specified in subsection (e).
- (2) Each team member shall certify in writing whether the report reflects the member's conclusion. If ~~it~~ the report does not reflect that member's conclusion, the team member shall submit a separate statement presenting the member's conclusion.
- (b) Each agency shall provide, at no cost, a copy of the evaluation report to the child's parent.
- (c) An evaluation team shall not determine a child to be an exceptional child if the determinant factor for that eligibility determination is the child's lack of appropriate instruction in reading or mathematics or limited English proficiency, and if the child does not otherwise qualify as a child with an exceptionality.
- (d) Each evaluation team, in determining whether a child is an exceptional child and what the educational needs of the child are, shall meet the following requirements:
- (1) The evaluation team shall draw upon information from a variety of sources, including the following:
    - (A) Aptitude and achievement tests;
    - (B) parent input;
    - (C) teacher recommendations;
    - (D) physical condition;
    - (E) social or cultural background; and
    - (F) adaptive behavior.
  - (2) The evaluation team shall ensure that the information obtained from all of the sources specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection is documented and considered.
- (e) If the evaluation team and the parent determine the parent's child to be a child with a specific learning disability, the evaluation team and the parent shall prepare a written evaluation report that includes a statement regarding each of the following matters:
- (1) An indication of whether the child has a specific learning disability;
  - (2) the basis for making the determination, including an assurance that the determination has been made in accordance with applicable laws and regulations;
  - (3) the relevant behavior, if any, noted during the observation of the child and the relationship of that behavior to the child's academic functioning;
  - (4) educationally relevant medical findings, if any;
  - (5) an indication of whether the child meets the following criteria:
    - (A) Does not achieve adequately for the child's age or meet state-approved grade-level standards; and
    - (B)(i) Does not make sufficient progress to meet age standards or state-approved grade-level standards; or
    - (ii) exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, state-approved grade-level standards, or intellectual development; and
  - (6) the determination of the team concerning the effect of the following factors on the child's achievement level:
    - (i) Visual, hearing, or motor skills disability;
    - (ii) mental retardation;
    - (iii) emotional disturbance;
    - (iv) cultural factors;
    - (v) environmental or economic disadvantage; and
    - (vi) limited English proficiency.

(f) If the child has participated in a process that assessed the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention, the evaluation report shall also address the following matters:

(1) The instructional strategies used and the student-centered data collected; and

(2) the documentation indicating that the child's parent was notified about the following:

(A) The state's policies regarding the amount and nature of student performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided;

(B) strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning; and

(C) the parent's right to request an evaluation.

(g) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, after a child has been determined to be a child with an exceptionality and has been provided special education or related services, an agency shall conduct a reevaluation of the child before terminating special education or related services to the child.

G. PRIOR WRITTEN NOTICE FOR IDENTIFICATION

After the eligibility determination is made, the school is required to provide Prior Written Notice to the parents that the school proposes to initially identify the child as a child with an exceptionality and that the child requires special education and related services. Likewise, school personnel must give Prior Written Notice to the parents if they determine that a child is not eligible for special education or related services. The required content of the Prior Written Notice is identical to the content described earlier in Section B of this chapter. However, parent consent is not required for identification of a child with an exceptionality. (See Appendix A, Figure 1-6, Prior Written Notice and Consent for Identification, or <http://www.kansped.org>)

H. INDEPENDENT EDUCATIONAL EVALUATION

After an initial evaluation is completed, if the parents disagree with the school's evaluation, they have the right to ask for an independent educational evaluation at public expense. If the parent obtains an independent educational evaluation at public expense or provides the agency with an evaluation obtained at private expense, the results of the evaluation shall be considered by the school, if it meets the school's criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of FAPE to the child.

Independent educational evaluation means an evaluation conducted by a qualified examiner who is not employed by the district responsible for the education of the child in question. Public expense means that the district either pays for the full cost of the evaluation or ensures that the evaluation is otherwise provided at no cost to the parent.

If the parent requests an independent educational evaluation the school must either:

- Provide information to the parent about where an independent educational evaluation can be obtained, the agency criteria (which may include qualifications of examiners and location to obtain the evaluation); and
- Ensure that the evaluation is provided at public expense, unless the special education due process hearing officer determines that the independent educational evaluation did not meet agency criteria; or
- Initiate a due process hearing to show that the school's evaluation was appropriate.

If a parent requests an independent educational evaluation, the agency may ask the reason for the objection to the public evaluation. However, the explanation by the parent shall not be required, and the agency shall not unreasonably delay either providing the independent educational evaluation at public expense or initiating a due process hearing to defend the public evaluation.

A due process hearing would determine whether the school must pay for the independent educational evaluation. If the school's evaluation is found to be appropriate and the parents still want an independent educational evaluation, the expense is the responsibility of the parents. When an independent educational evaluation is conducted, the school or a special education due process hearing officer, or both must consider the results of the independent educational evaluation in decisions made with respect to a free appropriate public education for the child.

If an independent educational evaluation is provided at public expense, the criteria under which the evaluation is obtained must be the same as the criteria that the school uses when it initiates an evaluation. These criteria may include the location of the evaluation and the qualifications of the examiner. The credentials of the independent evaluator or evaluators must be comparable to the school's evaluators. The school may set reasonable limitations on the costs for which it will be responsible. The school may have to exceed those costs if necessary to ensure that the independent educational evaluation meets the child's unique needs.

If a special education due process hearing officer requests an independent educational evaluation, the evaluation is provided at public expense. The school either pays the full cost of the evaluation, or ensures that the evaluation is otherwise provided at no cost to the parents. A parent is entitled to only one independent education evaluation at public expense each time the public agency conducts an evaluation with which the parent disagrees (34 C.F.R. 300.502(b)(5)).

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-12

91-40-12. Right to independent educational evaluation. (a) (1) Subject to the conditions specified in this regulation, the parent of an exceptional child shall have the right to request an independent educational evaluation at public expense if the parent disagrees with the evaluation obtained by the agency.

(2) The parent shall be eligible for only one independent educational evaluation at public expense in response to an evaluation conducted by the agency.

(b) If a parent requests an independent educational evaluation of the child, the agency, without unnecessary delay, shall take one of the following actions:

(1) Initiate a due process hearing to show that its evaluation is appropriate; or

(2) (A) Provide information to the parent about where an independent educational evaluation may be obtained and the agency criteria prescribed under subsection (g) that apply to independent educational evaluations; and

(B) take either of the following actions:

(i) Pay the full cost of the independent educational evaluation or otherwise ensure that the evaluation is provided at no cost to the parent; or

(ii) initiate a due process hearing to show that the evaluation obtained by the parent does not meet agency criteria.

(c) If the agency initiates a hearing and the final decision is that the agency's evaluation is appropriate, the parent shall still have the right to an independent educational evaluation, but the agency shall not be required to pay the cost of that evaluation.

(d) If a parent requests an independent educational evaluation, the agency may ask the reason for the objection to the public evaluation. However, the explanation by the parent shall not be required, and the agency shall not unreasonably delay either providing the independent educational evaluation at public expense or initiating a due process hearing to defend the public evaluation.

(e) If the parent obtains an independent educational evaluation at public expense or provides the agency with an evaluation obtained at private expense, the results of the evaluation shall be considered by the agency, if it meets agency criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of FAPE to the child. The results of this evaluation may be presented as evidence at a due process hearing regarding that child.

(f) If a hearing officer requests an independent educational evaluation as part of a hearing, the cost of the evaluation shall be paid by the agency.

(g) (1) Subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) of this subsection, each agency shall adopt criteria for obtaining an independent educational evaluation at public expense. The criteria may include the qualifications of the examiner and the location of the evaluation, but shall not impose other conditions or timelines for obtaining the evaluation.

(2) The criteria adopted by an agency under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be the same as the criteria that the agency uses when it conducts an evaluation, to the extent that those criteria are consistent with the parents' right to obtain an independent educational evaluation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT INITIAL EVALUATION AND ELIGIBILITY

1. What happens when a child transfers to a different school district during the initial evaluation?

Assessments for a child who transfers to a different school district in the same school year during the initial evaluation are coordinated with the child's prior and subsequent schools, as necessary and as expeditiously as possible, to ensure prompt completion of the full evaluation. The 60 school day timeline for the initial evaluation may be extended only if the new school is making sufficient progress to ensure a prompt completion of the evaluation, and the parent and the new school agree to a specific time when the evaluation will be completed.

2. How can school staff ensure that evaluation materials and procedures used to assess racially and culturally diverse children are appropriate?

It is important that professionals conducting evaluations be aware of the potential bias that exists in all areas of assessment and seek to choose techniques and tools that reduce bias to the largest extent possible. This may involve being more aware of the growing body of research literature on this topic, developing a deeper understanding of the cultural and linguistic diversity represented in the school, purchasing evaluation materials that have been developed to reduce bias, and utilizing trained bilingual examiners. Further, professionals conducting the evaluation must document the extent that an assessment was not conducted under standard conditions (e.g., giving a standardized test in a language other than the one it was originally developed for). Teams should carefully consider the presence of bias and interpret the results of that evaluation accordingly.

3. What are the qualifications of the people doing the assessment?

Each assessment must be given and interpreted by a licensed or certified professional in the area being assessed (e.g., speech and language, motor, behavior, or other area). Public school psychological evaluations must be given and interpreted by school psychologists. Certain test developers/suppliers also have specific requirements with regard to training and qualifications that must be considered. Assessments during initial evaluations encompass much more than test administration, however. When planning to collect the data for an evaluation, teams should determine which individuals have the most appropriate skills to obtain whatever data is needed.

4. May an initial evaluation consist only of existing data?

Yes. Existing data should be reviewed as a part of any initial evaluation. This would include evaluations and information provided by the parents, current classroom-based, local, or State assessments and classroom-based observations, and observations from teachers and related service providers. For an initial evaluation, such data would help the team to decide if more information is needed to determine eligibility--both the presence of an exceptionality and the determination of the child's educational need. The existing data will also help identify the present levels of academic achievement and related developmental needs of the child, and whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum, or for preschool age children, an age appropriate environment. If the team has enough information from all five required sources of data (General Education Interventions or Screening, Record Review, Interviews, Observations, Tests), the team may conclude that no additional data are needed and eligibility may be determined based upon existing data. The Prior Written Notice would include: (1) a statement of this fact and the reasons for it; and (2) a statement of the right of the parents to request additional assessment to determine whether the child is a child with an exceptionality. Parent consent to conduct the initial evaluation is required, whether or not additional data is needed.

5. What is the parent’s role in the review of existing data?

As members of the IEP team, parents may review any existing data, as well as provide existing data to the evaluation team. Parents may contribute relevant medical data or other records that the parent has concerning the child.

6. Does an evaluation report have to specify the particular category of exceptionality under which a child has been identified?

Kansas regulations, at K.A.R. 91-40-10(a)(1)(A), require that the evaluation report include a statement as to whether the child has an exceptionality. These regulations do not require that the evaluation report include the particular category of exceptionality in which a child has been identified.

However, no information should be withheld from parents. It is important that parents be informed of the particular category of exceptionality in which eligibility for special education was determined, and which is reported by the school to the state through the Management Information System (MIS). In a court case where the school did not inform the parents that the special education evaluation identified their child as having autism, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals said:

“Procedural violations that interfere with parental participation in the IEP formulation process undermine the very essence of the IDEA...These procedural violations, which prevented Amanda’s parents from learning critical medical information about their child, rendered the accomplishment of the IDEA’s goals and the achievement of a FAPE – impossible.” Amanda J. v. Nevada State Department of Education, 260 F.3d 1106 (9th Cir. 2001).

In essence, this court said that the IEP team could not create a valid IEP that addressed the child’s unique needs if required members of the team (the parents) were not fully informed of the evaluation results, which indicated their child had autism. Although this court did not address it, when a parent is not fully informed of the results of an evaluation, it is also likely that any consent given by the parent will be deficient. For these reasons, it is recommended that the evaluation report include the specific category of exceptionality in which a child is identified as an exceptional child. If the category of exceptionality is not identified in the evaluation report, it is important that school personnel document in some other way that the parents have been informed of this important information.

7. If the eligibility determination team fails to reach consensus about a child’s eligibility for special education, who makes the decision?

Teams should try to reach consensus about the eligibility decision. If a member of the school team does not agree with the others, they are able to record their disagreement on the eligibility report. However, if the team cannot reach agreement, the final decision rests with the person who serves as the LEA representative at the eligibility determination meeting.

8. Can the evaluation team use severe discrepancy between ability and achievement to determine eligibility for learning disability?

Remember the two-prong test for eligibility. The existence of a severe discrepancy between ability and achievement is only a single indicator of whether a child might be a child with an exceptionality (prong 1). Other supporting data would be needed to establish the presence of a learning disability. In addition, other types of data would be needed to indicate that the child needs special education and related services (prong 2).

9. Once a child has been exited from special education services, must you complete an initial evaluation upon a referral to determine need for special education?

Once the child has been identified as a child with an exceptionality, even though s/he may have been exited, any subsequent evaluation would be a "reevaluation." The reevaluation must include all the same requirements for an initial evaluation and a review of existing data. If there is enough current data available, there may not need to be any further assessments.

11. If the parent presents written information from an outside agency (i.e., medical doctor) stating the need for an evaluation and/or IEP is the school district obligated to complete an evaluation to determine eligibility?

This should be considered a referral for an evaluation. The school has the right to determine the need for an evaluation. They are to ensure that the child has been presented with general education interventions wither before or during the evaluation and collect data to determine the child's need for an evaluation. The school must provide Prior Written Notice to the parent if they refuse to conduct an evaluation.

12. How should school staff respond if the parent and/or outside agency request a specific assessment be completed as part of an evaluation?

The school evaluation team is to determine what assessments are to be conducted as part of the evaluation. They should consider any request from the parent or outside agency, however, if the school proposes to conduct the evaluation with no additional data, the parent may request the school to conduct an assessment to determine if the child is a child with an exceptionality and to determine the educational needs of the child.

13. If a parent presents an outside evaluation report to the school, is the school district obligated to implement the recommendations made by the outside evaluation team?

After an initial evaluation is completed, if the parents disagree with the school's evaluation, they have the right to ask for an independent educational evaluation at public expense. If the parent obtains an independent educational evaluation at public expense or provides the agency with an evaluation obtained at private expense, the results of the evaluation shall be considered by the school, if it meets the school's criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of FAPE to the child. However, the school is not obligated to implement the recommendations made by the outside evaluation team.

CHAPTER 4

THE INDIVIDUALIZED EDUCATION PROGRAM (IEP)

INTRODUCTION

The Individualized Education Program (IEP) is defined as a written statement for each student with an exceptionality which describes that child's educational program and is developed, reviewed, and revised in accordance with special education laws and regulations. The team that develops the IEP includes parents, school professionals, the student (when appropriate), and personnel from other agencies as appropriate (when addressing transition). Each IEP must be developed with careful consideration of the individual child's capabilities, strengths, needs, and interests. The IEP should direct the child toward high expectations and toward becoming a member of his or her community and the workforce. It should function as the tool that directs and guides the development of meaningful educational experiences, thereby helping the child learn skills that will help them achieve his or her goals. In short, it should assist the child in meeting the goals and challenging standards of our educational system as well as identified postsecondary goals.

The IEP describes and guides services for each child on an individual basis. Such a guide also assists teachers and other staff to have very specific, well-defined measurable annual goals for each eligible child. All persons involved should have high expectations for children and work from a strengths perspective in developing educational programs. The IDEA includes numerous IEP requirements. Kansas has State statutes and regulations regarding IEPs, which also include children identified as gifted. Additionally, for children ages 3-5, an Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP) may be used, with parent consent.

This chapter addresses the following topics:

- A. IEP Team
- B. Notice of IEP Team Meeting
- C. Using An IFSP Instead of An IEP
- D. When IEP/IFSP Must Be in Effect
- E. Development of the IEP
- F. Meeting to Review and Revise the IEP
- G. Transfer within State or from Out-Of-State
- H. Implementing the IEP

A. IEP TEAM

The IEP team is a group of people, knowledgeable about the child, who come together at an IEP meeting in order to develop or review and revise a child's IEP. Collaboration among IEP team members is essential to ensure that each child's educational experience is appropriate and meaningful. All members of the IEP team are equal partners in IEP discussions. Because of their long-term perspective and unique relationship, parents bring a valuable understanding of their child to the table. Children also can express their own needs, strengths, and interests. Educators, on the other hand, bring an educational focus to the meeting; an understanding of the curriculum, the challenging educational standards for the child, and the relationship to the general education environment. With this in mind, parents and educators must continue to recognize their responsibility to maintain and enhance partnerships with each other and the child throughout the school year in order to create a collaborative environment at each IEP team meeting.

The IEP team should work toward consensus, however, if an IEP team is unable to come to consensus the school has ultimate responsibility to ensure that the IEP includes the services that the child needs in order to receive a free appropriate public education (FAPE). Following the IEP meeting, the school must provide the parents Prior Written Notice of the school's proposal for services as identified in the child's IEP. If, after all options have been exhausted, the parents and the school cannot come to agreement either party may ultimately utilize mediation or due process proceedings to resolve the differences.

1. IEP Team Membership

The members of the IEP team are specifically identified and described in State and federal laws and regulations. In addition to the following listed members of the IEP team, if parents need a sign language or foreign language interpreter, the school must provide that service (K.S.A. 72-962(u); K.A.R. 91-40-17(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(e); 34 CRF 300.321).

- a. The student must be invited to attend his/her own IEP meeting beginning at age 14, or younger, if a purpose of the meeting is consideration of the student's postsecondary goals and the transition services needed to assist the student in reaching those goals. If the student elects not to participate, the IEP team must take other steps to ensure that the student's preferences and interests are considered in developing the IEP (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(8); K.A.R. 91-40-17(f); (34 C.F.R. 300.321(b)(2)). The school may invite the student to attend their own IEP team meeting at any age if appropriate.

The school is not required to give students younger than age 18 the same notice of meeting that is required for parents, but should document that the student was invited to the meeting. Beginning at age 18, if rights have transferred to the student, both the student and parents must receive 10-day written notice of the IEP team meeting (K.S.A. 72-989; K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(2)).

- b. The parents must be members of the IEP team. The parents are equal partners and play an active role in providing critical information about their child's abilities, interests, performance, and history. They are involved in the decision-making process throughout the development of the IEP (K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)). (See Chapter 1 of this Process Handbook for a discussion of who may act as a parent.)
- c. The special education teacher(s) or provider(s); not less than one special education teacher of the child, or where appropriate, not less than one special education special education provider of the child. The school may determine the particular individual(s) to be members of the IEP team.
- d. The general education teacher(s) not less than one general education teacher of the child, if the child is, or may be, participating in the general education environment (K.S.A. 72-962(u)(2)). This must be a teacher who is or may be working with the child to ensure success in the general curriculum and implement portions of the IEP. The general education teacher is knowledgeable about the curriculum, appropriate activities of typically developing peers, and how the child's exceptionality affect the child's participation (involvement and progress) in the curriculum or those appropriate activities. General education teachers assist in the development, review and revision of the IEP including determining appropriate positive behavioral interventions and supports and other strategies for the child, as well as supplementary aids and services, program modifications and supports to enable general education teachers to work with the child (K.A.R. 91-40-17(h)).

If the child has several general education teachers, at least one must attend the IEP meeting. However, it may be appropriate for more to attend. The school may designate which teacher or teachers will serve as IEP team member(s), taking into account the best interests of the child. The general education teacher who serves as a member of the child's IEP team should be one who is, or may be, responsible for implementing a portion of the IEP. The school is strongly encouraged to seek input from the teachers who will not be attending the IEP team meeting. All general education teachers of the child must be informed by the IEP team of their specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP. The child's IEP must be accessible to each general education teacher who is responsible for its implementation (K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(4)(5)).

General Education Teacher for Early Childhood

If a school district provides 'regular education' preschool services to nondisabled children, or if a preschool child with disabilities is enrolled in a preschool program for children without disabilities operated by the school district, the preschool teacher has the same requirements to attend the IEP meeting as for school age children. If the child is enrolled in a preschool program for children without disabilities that is not operated by the school district, the school is required to invite the preschool teacher, but has no authority to require his/her attendance. If the preschool teacher of the child does not attend the school shall designate a teacher who, under State standards, is qualified to serve children without disabilities of the same age.

For a child 3-5 years of age, the representative may be a preschool teacher (e.g., regular preschool, Title I preschool, Even Start, Head Start, Migrant, Bilingual, 4-year-old at-risk, Parents as Teachers, etc.). For a 4- or 5-year old child, the general education teacher may be the kindergarten teacher, if the child is or will be attending kindergarten within the term of the IEP. Early childhood providers working in various community settings must meet the credentialing requirements of their hiring agencies. KSDE acknowledges those requirements, and encourages those providers to take part in IEP meetings, as appropriate, for preschool-aged children.

For a child 3-5 years of age that is in a setting that does not provide a preschool educational component (e.g., home setting or child care) it is considered the child does not have a regular education teacher and is not participating in a general education environment, therefore, a general education teacher is not required to be part of the IEP team. However, a parent may invite a child care provider to attend the IEP team meeting as a person with knowledge or expertise about the child.

See Figures 4-1a and 4-1b in Appendix A, for additional guidance on when a preschool general education teacher must attend the IEP meeting and who meets the requirements of a general education teacher for early childhood.

General Education Teacher for Children in Separate Settings

It is expected that the circumstances will be rare in which a general education teacher would not be required to be a member of the child's IEP team. However, there may be situations where a child is placed in a separate school and participates only in meals, recess periods, transportation, and extracurricular activities with children without exceptionalities and is not otherwise participating in the general education environment, and no change in that degree of participation is anticipated during the next twelve months. In these instances, since there would be no current or anticipated general education teacher for a child during the period of the IEP, it would not be necessary for a general education teacher to be a member of the child's IEP team.

- e. The School Representative or designee must be a member of the IEP team. There are three requirements of the school representative or designee. The school representative or designee:
  - i. is qualified to provide or supervise provision of special education services;
  - ii. has knowledge of the general education curriculum; and
  - iii. is knowledgeable about the availability of the school's resources. (K.S.A. 72-962(u)(4))

The primary responsibility of the school representative or designee must be to commit school resources and ensure that services written in the IEP will be provided. The school representative must have the authority to commit school resources and be able to ensure that whatever services are described in an IEP will actually be provided because the school will be bound by the IEP that is developed at an IEP meeting (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46670).

- f. A person who can interpret instructional implications of any new evaluation or assessment results must also be a member of the IEP team. This may include individuals who participated on the evaluation team. Certainly a school psychologist, a special education teacher, general education teacher, speech/language pathologist, or other related service provider might have evaluation results that need to be interpreted and provide instructional implications.
- g. Others, include individuals who have knowledge or special expertise regarding the child, including related services personnel, as appropriate, and those who are invited by the parents or the school to attend the IEP meeting.

The determination of who has knowledge or special expertise regarding the child is made by the party (parents or school) who invited the individual to be a member of the IEP team. Therefore, the other party may not bring into question the expertise of an individual invited to be a member of the IEP team and may not exclude another team member's expert based on the amount or quality of their expertise (KSR 91-40-17(j); 34 C.F.R. 300.321(c)). Although parents are not required to do so, the school may ask the parents to inform them of the individuals they are bringing. The person who contacts the parents may wish to ask them if they intend to bring other people to be sure that the room is adequate for the number of participants.

Other team members may also be added, based on the child's individual needs. For example, for a child who uses assistive technology or who may be in need of such services, an internal or outside expert may be required at this meeting. In other circumstances, the school nurse or another health professional should attend. Any child with a need for a Health Care Plan should have a health professional participate at the annual review meeting for the IEP, and other meetings as appropriate. Other team members might be speech-language pathologists, occupational or physical therapists, adapted physical education teachers, or others as appropriate.

- h. Representatives of any other agencies. For a child with a disability age 14 or older the IEP team will consider the transition services of the child, and the IEP team must determine, to the extent appropriate, any other public agency that must be invited to the IEP meeting because they are likely to be responsible for providing or paying for transition services. The parents, or a student who is 18 year of age, must provide consent for the school to invite any outside agency who may be providing secondary transition services to the IEP meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(g); 34 C.F.R. 300.321(b)(3)).

Consent from the parent (or adult student) is required when inviting outside agencies to ensure the protection of confidentiality of any personally identifiable data, information and records collected or maintained by the school. Although the school has the responsibility to invite (after receiving parent or adult student consent) individuals from other agencies, the school district does not have the authority to require the other agency representative to attend the IEP meeting (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46672). (See Figure 4-5 in Appendix A for Consent to Invite Representative of Noneducational Agency to IEP Meeting.)

- i. Representative of Part C services. When conducting an initial IEP team meeting for a child who was previously served under Part C of the federal law, a school, at the request of the parent, shall send an invitation to attend the IEP meeting to the local Part C services coordinator or other representative of the Part C system to assist with the smooth transition of services (K.S.A. 72-987(a)(2)(B)).

- j. Multiple roles. The law allows for individuals to represent more than one of the membership roles on the IEP team. If a person is representing more than one role, s/he must meet the individual qualifications for each role at the IEP team meeting. Additionally, all of the requirements for one representative do not have to be filled by one person; other members of the school team may meet one or any of these requirements. Individuals assuming more than one role at an IEP team meeting should document their roles on the signature page of the IEP. Although there is no legal minimum number of participants at IEP team meetings, the number of participants should be reasonable and appropriate to address the needs of the child and to carry out the intent of the law. It would probably not be responsible for only one member of the school staff to adequately represent every required membership role at an IEP team meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(i)).

State laws and regulations and Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.321) address required IEP team members:

Kansas Statute:

K.S.A. 72-962

- (u) "Individualized education program team" or "IEP team" means a group of individuals composed of:
- (1) The parents of a child;
  - (2) at least one regular education teacher of the child, if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment;
  - (3) at least one special education teacher or, where appropriate, at least one special education provider of the child;
  - (4) a representative of the agency directly involved in providing educational services for the child who:
    - (A) Is qualified to provide, or supervise the provision of, specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of exceptional children;
    - (B) is knowledgeable about the general curriculum; and
    - (C) is knowledgeable about the availability of resources of the agency;
  - (5) an individual who can interpret the instructional implications of evaluation results; (6) at the discretion of the parent or the agency, other individuals who have knowledge or special expertise regarding the child, including related services personnel as appropriate

K.S.A. 72-987

- (a)(2)(B) In conducting the initial IEP meeting for a child who was previously served under part C of the federal law, an agency, at the request of the parent, shall send an invitation to attend the IEP meeting to the part C services coordinator or other representatives of the part C system to assist with the smooth transition of services.

K.S.A. 72-989. Rights of child with disability upon reaching 18 years of age. When a person who has been determined to be a child with a disability reaches the age of 18, except for such a person who has been determined to be incompetent under state law:

- (a) An agency shall provide to both the person and to the person's parents any notice required by this act:
  - (b) all other rights accorded to parents under this act transfer to the person;
  - (c) the agency shall notify the person and the parents of the transfer of rights; and
  - (d) all rights accorded to parents under this act transfer to the person if incarcerated in an adult or juvenile federal, state or local correctional institution.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-17. IEP team meetings and participants.

- (a) Each agency shall take steps to ensure that a parent of an exceptional child is present at each IEP team meeting or is afforded the opportunity to participate. These steps shall include the following:
  - (1) Scheduling each meeting at a mutually agreed-upon time and place and informing the parent of the information specified in subsection (b) of this regulation;
  - (2) except as otherwise provided in K.A.R. 91-40-37, providing written notice, in conformance with subsection (b) of this regulation, to the parent of any IEP team meeting at least 10 days in advance of the meeting.
- (b) The notice required in subsection (a) of this regulation shall meet the following requirements:
  - (1) The notice shall indicate the purpose, time, and location of the IEP team meeting and the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the agency, including, if appropriate, any other agency invited to send a representative to discuss needed transition services.
  - (2) If the meeting is for a child who has been receiving special education services under the infant and toddler provisions of the federal law but is now transitioning to the provisions for older children, the notice shall inform the parent that the parent may require that a representative of the infant and toddler program be invited to attend the initial IEP team meeting to assist with the smooth transition of services.
  - (3) The notice shall indicate the following information, if a purpose is to consider postsecondary goals and transition services for the child:

(A) The agency will invite the parent's child to attend.

(B) One of the purposes of the meeting will be to consider the postsecondary goals and needed transition services for the student.

(4) The notice shall inform the parent that the parent has the right to invite to the IEP team meeting individuals whom the parent believes to have knowledge or special expertise about the child.

(c) If a parent of an exceptional child cannot be physically present for an IEP team meeting for the child, the agency shall attempt other measures to ensure parental participation, including individual or conference telephone calls.

(d) An agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand the discussions that occur at IEP team meetings, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

(e)(1) An agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate.

(2) If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent to provide notice of the meeting and to secure the parent's participation. The record shall include at least two of the following:

(A) Detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls;

(B) detailed records of visits made to the parent's home or homes, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit;

(C) copies of correspondence sent to the parent and any responses received; and

(D) detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parent and the results of that attempt.

(f)(1) An agency shall invite a child with a disability, regardless of the child's age, to attend any IEP team meeting for the child if a purpose of the meeting is consideration of the child's postsecondary goals and transition services needs.

(2) If the child with a disability does not attend the IEP team meeting, an agency shall take other steps to ensure that the child's preferences and interests are considered.

(g) If a purpose of any IEP team meeting for a child with a disability is consideration of the postsecondary goals of the child and the transition services needed to assist the child to reach those goals, the agency, with the consent of the parent or the child if the child is at least 18 years old, shall invite a representative of any other agency that is likely to be responsible for providing or paying for transition services.

(h) A regular education teacher of an exceptional child, as a member of an IEP team, shall participate to the extent appropriate in the development, review, and revision of the child's IEP. This participation shall include assisting in making the following determinations:

(1) The appropriate positive behavioral interventions and strategies for the child;

(2) the supplementary aids and services needed by the child; and

(3) the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to assist the child.

(i) If qualified to do so, an agency member of the IEP team may serve in the role of two or more required members of a child's IEP team.

(j) In asking individuals with knowledge or special expertise about a child to be members of the child's IEP team, the party asking the person to participate shall have the sole discretion in determining whether the invited person has knowledge or special expertise regarding the child.

2. IEP Team Attendance and Excusals

A member of the IEP team, as described above, is not required to attend an IEP team meeting, in whole or in part, if the parent of a child with an exceptionality and the school agree, in writing, that the attendance of the IEP team member is not necessary because the member's area of the curriculum or related services is not being modified or discussed in the meeting.

A required member of the IEP team, may be excused from attending an IEP team meeting, in whole or in part, when the meeting involves a modification to or discussion of the member's area of the curriculum or related services, if:

- The parent, in writing, and the school consent to the excusal; and
- The IEP team member submits, in writing to the parent and the IEP team, input into the development of the IEP prior to the meeting (K.S.A. 72-987(b)(2)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.321(e)).

Informed parental consent means that the school must provide the parent with appropriate and sufficient information to ensure that the parent fully understands that the parent is consenting to excuse a required IEP team member from attending an IEP team meeting in which the member's area of the curriculum or related services is being changed or discussed and that if the parent does not consent the IEP team meeting must be held with that IEP team member in attendance (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p 46674). To ensure that the parent is fully informed and written agreement or consent is appropriately documented, it is highly recommended that the school use the KSDE sample form for excusing a member of the IEP team. (See Figure 4-3 in Appendix A, for Excusal from IEP Team Meeting form or <http://www.kansped.org> .)

Excusals through written agreement or consent apply only to the required IEP team members. Other members of the team, who have been invited by the school district or the parent, may be excused from attending the meeting without agreement or consent. If an individual that is not a required IEP team member, as described above, but is invited to attend a meeting, and is included on the notice of meeting, it is not required for the parent and school to consent and/or provide written agreement to excuse those individuals because they are not required members of an IEP team (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46675).

Schools are encouraged to carefully consider, based on the individual needs of the child and the issues that need to be addressed at the IEP team meeting, whether it makes sense to offer to hold the IEP team meeting without a particular IEP team member in attendance or whether it would be better to reschedule the meeting so that person could attend and participate in the discussion (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46674). Each school district should consider developing a policy indicating who the local representative is that has authority to consent to the excusal of a member of the IEP team.

Kansas Statute:

K.S.A. 72-987(b)(2)(3)

- (2) A member of a child's IEP team shall not be required to attend an IEP meeting, if the parent of the child and the agency agree that the attendance of such IEP member is not necessary because the IEP member's area of curriculum or related service is not to be discussed or modified at the meeting. The parent's agreement shall be in writing.
- (3) A member of a child's IEP team may be excused from attending an IEP meeting when the meeting is to involve a discussion of, and possibly a modification to, the IEP member's area of the curriculum or related service, if:
  - (A) The parent and the agency consent to the excusal;
  - (B) the IEP member submits, in writing to the parent and the IEP team, input into the development of the IEP prior to the meeting; and
  - (C) the parent's consent to the excusal is in writing.

B. NOTICE OF IEP MEETING

The school must take steps to ensure that one or both parents are present at each IEP meeting or are otherwise afforded the opportunity to participate in the IEP meeting. The meeting is to be scheduled at a mutually agreed upon time and place. The school must provide notice of an IEP meeting to the parents for the initial IEP meeting and any subsequent IEP meetings. The notice must be provided in writing at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(a)(2)) and if the child is at least 14 years old, inform the parents that their child is invited to attend the meeting. (See Appendix A, Figure 1-7, Meeting Notice and Figure 4-6 IEP Meeting Requirements)

If parents are divorced, regardless of which parent has primary custody, the school must notify both parents unless a court order precludes this from happening. This applies to all special education notice requirements including notice of an IEP meeting. If the school is only aware of one parent's address, the school must make reasonable efforts to locate the other parent in order to provide notice. The school is not required to conduct duplicate IEP team meetings for divorced parents that do not wish to attend the same meeting.

Beginning at age 14, or younger, if a purpose of the meeting is consideration of the student's postsecondary goals or transition services, the student must be invited to attend and participate in the IEP team meetings. The school is not required to give children who are younger than age 18 the same notice that is required for parents, but should document that the student was invited to the meeting. The school is required to invite the student to the IEP meeting even if the student's parents do not want their child to attend the meeting. However, because parents have authority to make educational decisions for their child (under 18 years of age), the parents make the final determination of whether their child will attend the meeting (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46671).

Beginning at age 18, if rights have transferred to the student, all notices are to go to both the adult student and the parent, including the notice of the IEP meeting (K.S.A. 72-989(a)). When a student reaches 18 years of age, the parents no longer have a right to attend or participate in an IEP meeting for their child. The school or the student may invite the parents to attend the meeting as persons with knowledge or expertise about the student. The notice of the IEP meeting could be used as an invitation for all team members who are invited to attend the IEP meeting. An IEP meeting requirements checklist has been developed to ensure all requirements are met (see Figure 4-6 in Appendix A).

1. Content of Notice of IEP Meeting

The written notice must indicate (K.A.R. 91-40-17(b); 34 CRF 300.322(b)):

- a. the purpose;
- b. date;
- c. time;
- d. location of the meeting;
- e. the titles or positions of the persons who will attend on behalf of the school (The school is to notify the parents about who will be in attendance at an IEP team meeting, however, individuals may be indicated by position only. The school may elect to identify participants by name, but they have no obligation to do so.);
- f. inform the parents of their right to invite to the IEP meeting individuals whom the parents believe to have knowledge or special expertise about their child; and
- g. inform the parents that if their child was previously served in Part C they may request that the local Part C coordinator or other representative be invited to participate in the initial IEP meeting to ensure a smooth transition of services.

In addition, beginning not later than the first IEP to be in effect when the child turns 14, or younger if determined appropriate by the IEP team;

- h. indicate that a purpose of the meeting is the consideration of the postsecondary goals and transition services;
- i. indicate that the school will invite the student; and
- j. identify any other agency that will be invited, with parent consent (or adult student consent), to send a representative. (K.A.R. 91-40-17(g))

See Figure 1 - 7 in Appendix A for a sample Meeting Notice form.

2. Methods to Ensure Parent Participation

IEP meetings are to be scheduled at a mutually agreed upon time and place. The school should work with the parent to reach an amicable agreement about scheduling. If the parent/person acting as parent cannot be located the school shall request an education advocate (See Chapter 1 for more information on identifying who may act as a parent and appointing an educational advocate).

The school must take whatever action is necessary to ensure the parents understand the proceedings at the IEP meeting, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English (K.A.R. 91-40-17(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(e)).

If neither parent is able to physically attend the IEP meeting, the parent and the school may agree to use alternative means of participation, such as video conferences and individual or conference telephone calls (K.S.A. 72-987(b)(1); K.A.R. 91-40-17(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.328).

If the parents are unable to meet prior to the annual review date of the IEP and request that the current IEP be extended for a short period of time until they can be involved in the meeting, the school may honor their request and document why the IEP has not been reviewed and when the IEP will be reviewed and revised. This situation should not be a common practice and to avoid this issue it is best to schedule IEP meetings far enough in advance of the annual review date to allow for rescheduling if necessary.

Each parent must be provided a final copy of the IEP at no cost (K.A.R. 91-40-18(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(f)).

3. Conducting the IEP Team Meeting Without a Parent

A school may conduct an IEP meeting without the parent(s) in attendance if the school, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parents to arrange for a mutually agreed upon time or to convince the parents that they should participate (K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(d)). The school must keep a record of its attempts to arrange a mutually agreed on time and place to secure the parents' participation. The record shall include at least two of the following:

- Detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, person making the calls, and the results of those calls;
  - Detailed records of visits made to the parents' home or place of employment, including the date, time, person making the visit, and the results of the visits;
  - Copies of correspondence sent to the parents and any responses received; and
  - Detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parents and the results of that attempt.
- K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2)

Districts are encouraged to use their judgment about what constitutes a good-faith effort in making repeated attempts to involve each family in the IEP process. At minimum, school districts must at least make two attempts, using at least two methods, to involve the parents in the IEP team meeting.

C. USING AN IFSP INSTEAD OF AN IEP

The IEP team must consider the use of an IFSP in place of an IEP for children with a disability ages 3-5. The IFSP would be developed in accordance with all of the IEP procedures, but contain the content described in USC 1436, Part C. At the discretion of the school, services may be provided for a 2-year-old child who is identified as eligible under Part B and who will turn age 3 during the school year (K.S.A. 72-987(a)(2); K.A.R. 91-40-(c)(1)). (See Figure 4-2 in Appendix A for content of the IFSP).

If the school and the parents agree to use an IFSP, the school must provide the child's parents a detailed explanation of the differences between an IFSP and an IEP, and obtain written informed consent from the parents (K.A.R. 91-40-16(c)(2)). (See Figure 4-2 in Appendix A for examples of comparison chart and consent form.)

If the school uses the IFSP, as stated above, the IFSP must include the natural environments statement required under Part C (34 C.F.R. 303.18; 34 C.F.R. 303.344(d)((1)(ii)). The IFSP must also contain an educational component that promotes school readiness and incorporates pre-literacy, language, and numeracy skills (34 C.F.R. 300.323(b)).

If the child has participated in the Part C Infant-Toddler Program prior to being determined eligible for early childhood special education services, and already has an IFSP that is in effect, the IEP team may review the content of the child's current IFSP to see if it meets the needs of the child for one year, as identified through the Part B evaluation process. If it does, the IEP team may use the existing IFSP, but must ensure that all of the requirements for the development of an IEP are met, including timelines for development and implementation, and designation of a new current implementation date for the IFSP. If the current IFSP does not meet the needs of the child for one year, the IEP team, including the parent, will develop a new IFSP, or IEP, for the child.

D. WHEN THE IEP/IFSP MUST BE IN EFFECT

1. For Children Ages 3-21

An IEP must be developed within 30 calendar days of a determination that the child needs special education and related services and must be implemented within 10 school days after written parent consent is granted for the services in the IEP or Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP) unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown. It is important to keep in mind the requirements of IEP development and implementation of the IEP are both part of the 60 school day timeline of initial evaluation. In addition, the school is required to ensure that an IEP or IFSP is in effect at the beginning of each school year for each child with an exceptionality (K.S.A. 72-987(a)(1); K.A.R. 91-40-8(h)(i); K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(1)(2)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(a)(c)).

2. For Children Ages 3-5

Each school district must make FAPE available to all eligible children by their third birthday, or age 2 during the school year in which they turn age 3. An IEP or IFSP must be developed and implemented in accordance with federal and state laws and regulations. If a child's birthday occurs during the summer, the child's IEP team must determine the date when services under the IEP or IFSP will begin (K.S.A. 72-987(a)(2)(A)).

Many children who have participated in Part C Infant-Toddler services transition to early childhood special education services by their 3rd birthday. Each child must be identified as eligible through a Part B initial evaluation prior to receiving services at age 3.

For a child who is transitioning into the Part B early childhood special education services from the Part C early intervention services, the school is required to ensure that:

- the child is determined eligible under Part B requirements;
- an IEP or IFSP is in effect by the child's 3rd birthday;
- if a child's 3rd birthday occurs during the summer, the child's IEP team must determine the date when services will begin, but not later than the beginning of the school year following the 3rd birthday; and
- A representative of the district will participate in transition planning conferences arranged by the Part C program. (K.A.R. 91-40-2(b))

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.323. When IEPs must be in effect.

(b) IEP or IFSP for children aged three through five.

(1) In the case of a child with a disability aged three through five (or, at the discretion of the SEA, a two-year-old child with a disability who will turn age three during the school year), the IEP Team must consider an IFSP that contains the IFSP content (including the natural environments statement) described in section 636(d) of the Act and its implementing regulations (including an educational component that promotes school readiness and incorporates pre-literacy, language, and numeracy skills for children with IFSPs under this section who are at least three years of age), and that is developed in accordance with the IEP procedures under this part. The IFSP may serve as the IEP of the child, if using the IFSP as the IEP is--

- (i) Consistent with State policy; and
- (ii) Agreed to by the agency and the child's parents.

(2) In implementing the requirements of paragraph (b)(1) of this section, the public agency must--

- (i) Provide to the child's parents a detailed explanation of the differences between an IFSP and an IEP; and
- (ii) If the parents choose an IFSP, obtain written informed consent from the parents.

Federal Part C Regulations:

Sec. 303.12

(b) Natural environments. To the maximum extent appropriate to the needs of the child, early intervention services must be provided in natural environments, including the home and community settings in which children without disabilities participate.

Sec. 303.18 Natural environments.

As used in this part, natural environments means settings that are natural or normal for the child's age peers who have no disabilities.

Sec. 303.344. Content of an IFSP

d) Early intervention services. (1) The IFSP must include a statement of the specific early intervention services necessary to meet the unique needs of the child and the family to achieve the outcomes identified in paragraph (c) of this section, including--

- (i) The frequency, intensity, and method of delivering the services;
- (ii) The natural environments, as described in Sec. 303.12(b), and Sec. 303.18 in which early intervention services will be provided, and a justification of the extent, if any, to which the services will not be provided in a natural environment;

Kansas Statute:

K.S.A. 72-987. Individualized education program or family service plan; contents; development; duties of IEP team.

- (a) (1) Except as specified in provision (2), at the beginning of each school year, each agency shall have an individualized education program in effect for each exceptional child.
- (2) (A) In the case of a child with a disability aged three through five and for two year-old children with a disability who will turn age three during the school year, an individualized family service plan that contains the material described in 20 U.S.C. 1436, and that is developed in accordance with this section, may serve as the IEP of the child if using that plan as the IEP is agreed to by the agency and the child's parents.
- (B) In conducting the initial IEP meeting for a child who was previously served under part C of the federal law, an agency, at the request of the parent, shall send an invitation to attend the IEP meeting to the part C services coordinator or other representatives of the part C system to assist with the smooth transition of services.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-2. Free appropriate public education (FAPE)

- (b)(1) Each agency shall make FAPE available to each child with a disability residing in its jurisdiction beginning not later than the child's third birthday.
- (2) An IEP or IFSP shall be in effect by the child's third birthday, but, if that birthday occurs during the summer when school is not in session, the child's IEP team shall determine the date when services will begin.
- (3) If a child is transitioning from early intervention services provided under part C of the federal law, the agency responsible for providing FAPE to the child shall participate in transition planning conferences for the child.

K.A.R. 91-40-8. Evaluations

(h) Unless an agency can justify the need for a longer period of time or has obtained written parental consent to an extension of time, the agency shall complete the following activities within 60 school days of the date the agency receives written parental consent for evaluation of a child:

- (1) Conduct an evaluation of the child;
  - (2) Conduct a meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child and, if so, to develop an IEP for the child. The agency shall give notice of this meeting to the parents as required by K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); and
  - (3) Implement the child's IEP in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-16.
- (i) In complying with subsection (h) of this regulation, each agency shall ensure that an IEP is developed for each exceptional child within 30 days from the date on which the child is determined to need special education and related services.

K.A.R. 91-40-16. IEP Requirements; periodic IEP review.

- (b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met:
  - (1) An IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child.
  - (2) Those services to which the parent has granted written consent as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.
  - (3) An IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.
  - (4) The child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation.
  - (5) Each teacher and provider described in paragraph (4) of this subsection is informed of the following:
    - (A) That individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and
    - (B) The specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.
- (c)(1) If an agency and a child's parents agree, an IFSP that meets the requirements of the federal law and that is developed in accordance with this article may serve as the IEP of a child with a disability who is two years old but will reach three years of age during the next school year or who is three, four, or five years of age.
- (2) Before using an IFSP as an IEP each agency shall meet the following requirements:
  - (A) The agency shall provide to the child's parents a detailed explanation of the differences between an IFSP and an IEP.
  - (B) If the parent chooses an IFSP, the agency shall obtain written consent from the parents for use of the IFSP as the child's IEP.

E. DEVELOPMENT OF THE IEP

An IEP that promotes challenging expectations and ensures participation and progress in the general education curriculum is one that focuses on local and state curricular content standards and related assessments. Thus, statements of present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFPs), measurable annual goals, special education and related services, and the ongoing monitoring and evaluation of IEPs, should relate to State and local standards. It is also important that the IEP address each of the child's other educational needs identified in the PLAAFP that result directly from the child's exceptionality. For example, measurable annual goals for instruction in Braille may be appropriate for children who are blind, even though Braille is not included in the general education curriculum. Likewise, measurable annual goals for instruction in sign language may be appropriate for children who are deaf, even though sign language may not be part of the general education curriculum. Annual goals in academic content areas will be drawn from the general education curriculum. Other annual goals may be based on standards that are appropriate to meet the child's unique needs that result from the exceptionality and that allow the child to participate and progress in the general curriculum. A checklist for IEP content has been developed to assist in ensuring all necessary content has been included (See Appendix A, Figure 4-7, IEP Content Checklist).

1. IEP Team Considerations

In order to assure that the IEP team addresses all of the special education and related service needs of the child there are several special factors that the IEP team must consider in the development of the IEP (K.S.A. 72-987(d)). These considerations must be documented but there is no requirement on where they are documented. Some districts may choose to include documentation of these considerations within the IEP while others may choose to keep documentation separately and maintain it in the student's file.

a. Strengths of the Child

The IEP team should be aware of the strengths of the child, and utilize those strengths during the development of the IEP to assist in addressing the child's needs where possible. The strengths should be included in the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance of the child, as identified through the evaluation.

b. Concerns of the Parents for enhancing the education of their child

Parents should have the opportunity to express their concerns for enhancing the education of their child during the IEP meeting. This provides the parents an opportunity to share with the school what they see as the most important in meeting the needs of their child. The concerns of the parents must be considered by the IEP team but do not obligate the IEP team.

c. Results of the Initial Evaluation or Most Recent Reevaluation

In developing each child's IEP, the IEP team must consider the results of the initial or most recent reevaluation of the child. This must include a review of valid evaluation data and the observed needs of the child resulting from the evaluation process and, as appropriate, any existing data, including data from current classroom-based, local and State assessments.

d. The Academic, Developmental and Functional Needs of the Child

In developing each child's IEP, the IEP team is required to consider the academic, developmental, and functional needs of the child. A child's performance on State or district assessments logically would be included in the IEP team's consideration of the child's academic needs. In addition, as part of an initial evaluation or reevaluation, the IEP team must review existing evaluation data, including data from current classroom based, local, and State assessments. The consideration of State and district-wide assessment programs is consistent with the emphasis on the importance of ensuring that children with disabilities participate in the general curriculum and are expected to meet high achievement standards. Effective IEP development is central to helping these children meet these high standards

e. Behavioral Concerns

In the case of a child whose behavior impedes the child's learning or that of others, the IEP team must consider the use of positive behavioral interventions and supports, and other strategies, to address the behavior. The focus of behavioral interventions and supports in the IEP is prevention of the behavior, not just provision for consequences subsequent to the behavior. This means that the team will need to attempt to identify the function of the behavior, usually through a functional behavioral assessment, and develop strategies to prevent the behavior from occurring again in the future.

The positive behavioral interventions and supports could be implemented through the IEP annual goals, program modifications, or a behavioral intervention plan (BIP). If a behavioral intervention plan is developed by the IEP team, it becomes part of the IEP and any changes to it would require a meeting of the IEP team to consider the proposed changes to the plan. If the BIP is developed by a building based problem solving team or other group of individuals other than the IEP team it does not have to be included in the IEP. Special education laws and regulations place a strong emphasis on supports and interventions, including positive behavior interventions and supports that are scientifically research-based. Scientifically based research means that the interventions or supports must be accepted by a peer-reviewed journal or approved by a panel of independent experts through a comparably rigorous, objective, and scientific review. (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46683) These strategies are designed to foster increased participation of children with exceptionalities in general education environments or other less restrictive environments, not to serve as a basis for placing children with exceptionalities in more restrictive settings. No child should be denied access to special education services and the opportunity to progress in the general education curriculum. (See Appendix A, Figure 13-7, FBA)

f. Limited English Proficiency

The IEP team must consider the language needs of the child who has limited English proficiency as those needs relate to the IEP including the impact of how service provides communicate with the student and progress is measured.

g. Braille (only for Children with Disabilities)

For a child who is blind or visually impaired, the IEP team must consider instruction in Braille. The use of Braille should be provided unless the IEP team determines, after an evaluation of the child's reading and writing skills, needs, and appropriate reading and writing media (including an evaluation of the child's future needs for instruction in Braille or the use of Braille), that instruction in Braille or the use of Braille is not appropriate for the child. If Braille is to be taught as a method of accessing printed material, it is to be indicated in the IEP.

h. Communication Needs

The communication needs of all students with exceptionalities must be considered on each IEP. Depending on whether the student is Deaf/Hard of Hearing or has other exceptionalities will impact which considerations must be made.

(i) For Children with Exceptionalities

It is required that the IEP team considers the communication needs of each child. This consideration must include the unique communication needs of all children in order to help them achieve their educational goals.

(ii) For Children who are Deaf/Hard of Hearing (only for Children with Disabilities)

For a child who is deaf or hard of hearing, the IEP team must consider the child's language and communication needs, including the opportunity for direct communication with peers and professional personnel in the child's language and communication mode, as well as academic level, and full range of needs including opportunities for direct instruction in the child's language and communication mode. It is important that the school recognize that this consideration is not an administrative decision for only one particular type of sign language interpreting to be available, nor is it a parental decision based on parental choice. Instead, it is an IEP team decision based on the unique communication needs of each child. The school must provide the communication services that each child requires.

i. Assistive Technology (only for Children with Disabilities)

The IEP team must determine whether an individual child needs an assistive technology (AT) device or service, and if so, the nature and extent to be provided. It is possible that an assistive technology evaluation will be required to determine if the child would need an assistive technology service and/or assistive technology device. Any needs identified should be reflected in the content of the IEP, including, as appropriate, the instructional program and services provided to the child. According to current Medicaid reimbursement rules, if an AT device is purchased with Medicaid-funds (or from private insurance), it belongs to the family.

j. Extended School Year Services (only for Children with Disabilities)

For children with disabilities, the IEP team must consider each individual child's need for extended school year (ESY) services during time periods when other children, both disabled and nondisabled, normally would not be served. If ESY is determined to be necessary to enable the child to benefit from his or her education, then the type and amount of special education services to be provided, including frequency, location and duration, are documented in the IEP. Schools must not limit the availability of ESY services to children in particular categories of disabilities, or limit the type, amount, or duration of these necessary services. Kansas law does not allow ESY services for children identified as gifted.

For an eligible child who will turn 3 during the summer, the IEP team must make the determination of the need for ESY services during that summer. (See Chapter 5 for more information on ESY.)

k. Notification to Kansas Rehabilitation Services (only for Students with Disabilities)

When a student turns 16, the IEP team must determine if the needs of the student warrant the school's notifying the district office of Kansas Rehabilitation Services (KRS) (K.S.A. 75-53, 101). If the student may have any need for vocational rehabilitation services regardless of whether the student is headed directly to employment or into education/training, notification to KRS may be appropriate. This is only a notification and not a referral for services. If notification is determined not to be necessary, the IEP team must document reasons for that decision. When making this notification, it is important for the school to remember that the notification contains personally identifiable information regarding the student, and parental consent to disclose confidential information is required.

l. Physical Education Needs (only for Children with Disabilities)

The IEP team must consider the physical education needs of the child, which may need to be adapted physical education services. If adapted physical education is required, it should be addressed in the IEP (K.A.R. 91-40-3(c)).

m. Potential Harmful Effects (only for Children with Disabilities)

The IEP team must consider the potential harmful effects of the placement of a student with a disability no matter where on the continuum the child is placed. This consideration must include both the child and the quality of the services the student needs (K.A.R. 91-40-21(f)).

(For more information, see Chapter 5, Special Education and Related Services and See Appendix A, Figure 4-4, IEP Team Considerations.)

Kansas Statute:

K.S.A. 72-987. IEP team considerations

(d) In developing each child's IEP, the IEP team shall consider:

- (1) The strengths of the child and the concerns of the parents for enhancing the education of their child;
- (2) the results of the initial evaluation or most recent evaluation of the child;
- (3) the academic, developmental and functional needs of the child;
- (4) in the case of a child whose behavior impedes the child's learning or that of others, the use of positive behavioral interventions and supports and other strategies to address that behavior;
- (5) in the case of a child with limited English proficiency, the language needs of the child as such needs relate to the child's IEP;
- (6) in the case of a child who is blind or visually impaired, provide for instruction in Braille and the use of Braille unless the IEP team determines, after an evaluation of the child's reading and writing skills, needs, and appropriate reading and writing media, including an evaluation of the child's future needs for instruction in Braille or the use of Braille, that instruction in Braille or the use of Braille is not appropriate for the child;
- (7) the communication needs of the child, and in the case of a child who is deaf or hard of hearing, consider the child's language and communication needs, opportunities for direct communications with peers and professional personnel in the child's language and communication mode, academic level, and full range of needs, including opportunities for direct instruction in the child's language and communication mode; and
- (8) whether the child requires assistive technology devices and services.

K.S.A. 75-53,101. Same; compilation of background information. (a) If the secretary provides services under this act and staff is available, an individual with disabilities who has been receiving special education under the provisions of K.S.A. 72-961 et seq., and amendments thereto, and public law 101-476 (the individuals with disabilities education act) shall receive transition planning services upon attaining the age of 16 years. The local education authority which is responsible for the education of a person, with the consent of the person or the person's parent or guardian, shall notify the secretary of the name and address of such person, the record of the special education services being provided to such person and the expected date of termination of such services.

(b) Within 30 days after such notification, the secretary shall begin to prepare a case file on such person consisting of all available information relevant to the questions of whether such person has a disability and what services may be necessary or appropriate upon termination or graduation. The local education authority, with the consent of such person or the person's parent or guardian, shall provide the secretary with copies of relevant current portions of the record of such person, which shall be included in such person's case file. The secretary also shall provide an opportunity for the submission by or on behalf of such person, of information relative to such person's training needs and all information so provided shall be included in such person's case file. History: L. 1992, ch. 129, § 3; July 1.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-18. IEP development and content

- (a) In developing or reviewing the IEP of any exceptional child, each agency shall comply with the requirements of K.S.A. 72-987 and amendments thereto, and, as appropriate, shall consider the results of the child's performance on any general state or districtwide assessment programs.
- (b) If, as a result of its consideration of the special factors described in K.S.A. 72-987(c) and amendments thereto, an IEP team determines that a child needs behavioral interventions and strategies, accommodations, assistive technology devices or services, or other program modifications for the child to receive FAPE, the IEP team shall include those items in the child's IEP.
- (c) Each agency shall ensure that the IEP of each exceptional child includes the information required by K.S.A. 72-987(b) and amendments thereto.
- (d) Each agency shall give the parent a copy of the child's IEP at no cost to the parent.
- (e) At least one year before an exceptional child reaches 18 years of age, the agency providing services to the child shall ensure that the child's IEP includes a statement the student has been informed of rights provided in the federal law, if any, that will transfer to the child on reaching 18 years of age.

2. Content of the IEP

Evaluation information for a child with an exceptionality must identify each of the child's specific needs that result from the exceptionality, provide baseline information and describe how the exceptionality affects the child's participation and progress in the general education curriculum. Utilizing baseline data established in the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFPs), the IEP team must develop measurable annual goals, including academic and functional goals that meet the child's needs and enable the child to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum. The special education, related services, supplementary aids and services, program modifications, and supports for school personnel described in the IEP must reflect the child's needs in order to ensure he or she receives educational benefit.

a. Present Levels of Academic Achievement and Functional Performance

Present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFPs) are not new to IDEA 2004, in previous laws they have been called present levels of educational performance or PLEPs. The requirements of a present level statement is not any different, however, the name was changed slightly to emphasize the importance of issues beyond academics only.

The IEP for each exceptional child shall include a statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including:

1. how the child's disability or giftedness affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum;
2. for preschool children, as appropriate, how the disability affects the child's participation in appropriate activities; and
3. for those children with disabilities who take alternate assessments aligned with alternate achievement standards, a description of benchmarks or short-term objectives (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(1)).

The PLAAFPs summarize the child's current performance and provide the foundation upon which all other decisions in the child's IEP will be made. The PLAAFPs identify and prioritize the specific needs of a child and establish a baseline from which to develop meaningful and measurable goals. For a PLAAFP to be complete it needs to include information about:

1. Current Academic Achievement and Functional Performance: This is the broadest type of information that is included in the present level statement. It helps the team to begin to sort through information and data to determine how well the child is performing and to make note of additional issues outside of academic and functional behavior that have a direct impact upon how well the child performs in school. This communicates a more global understanding of the child. This might include information such as standardized assessments, learning rate, social issues, vocational interests, independent living skills, and other interests, strengths, and weaknesses.
2. Impact of Exceptionality upon ability to access and progress in the general curriculum: In addition to describing the child's current performance (academics and functional areas), PLAAFPs must describe how the exceptionality affects the child's involvement and progress in the general curriculum. The present level statement must also include more specific information that clearly describes how the child's exceptionality impacts (or manifests itself) within the general education curriculum that prevents them from appropriately accessing or progressing. By completing this statement it will make it clear to the team what the child's needs are and which ones are of highest priority to be addressed.
3. Baseline: Baseline data provides the starting point for each measurable annual goal, so there must be one baseline data point for every measurable annual goal on the child's IEP. Baseline data in the PLAAFPs are derived from locally developed or adopted assessments that align with the general education curriculum. Examples of baseline data include percent of correct responses, words read correctly, number of times behavior occurs, and mean length of utterances. Other issues important in collecting baseline data are the understanding that any goal written will have the same measurement method as was used in collecting its baseline data. Also, when selecting baseline data it needs to be (a) specific – to the skill/behavior that is being measured, (b) objective – so that others will be able to measure it and get the same results, (c) measurable – it must be something that can be observed, counted, or somehow measured, and (d) able to be collected frequently – when progress reports are sent out the progress of the student toward the goal will have to be reported using the same measurement method as used to collect the baseline data. Non-examples of this would be self-esteem or social awareness without a more specific description of what it means.

Local school districts have a variety of places to document these components. In the IEP there is no single place these components must be documented and the law explicitly states that information included in one part of the IEP does not have to be duplicated in another part. So when looking at local forms you may find baseline data in the main section of the present levels or in boxes along side the measurable annual goals. Both are acceptable and legal as long as the data they contain is correct.

For preschool children, the PLAAFPs describe how the disability affects the child's participation in appropriate activities. The term "appropriate activities" includes activities that children of that chronological age engage in as part of a preschool program or in informal activities. Examples of appropriate activities include social activities, pre-reading and math activities, sharing-time, independent play, listening skills, and birth to 6 curricular measures. Federal regulations at 34 C.F.R. 300.323(b) indicate that preschool programs for children with disabilities should have an educational component that promotes school readiness and incorporates pre-literacy, language, and numeracy skills. Teachers should become familiar with the curriculum standards for kindergarten to know what is expected at that age and to give direction for learning activities and from future early childhood standards.

For children ages 14 and older (or younger if appropriate), the PLAAFPs also describe the child's transition needs in the areas of education/training, employment and where appropriate independent living skills.

The IEP team should consider the following questions when writing the PLAAFPs:

- In areas of concern, what is the child's present level of performance in relationship to district standards and benchmarks in the general education curriculum (or to the extended standards)?
- In areas of concern, what is the child's present level of performance in relationship to level of performance that will be required to achieve the postsecondary goals?
- Are there functional areas of concern related to the disability not reflected in the general education curriculum (e.g., self-care skills, social skills, classroom survival, etc.)?
- What is the degree of match between the skills of the child and the instructional environment?
- What strengths of the child are relevant to address the identified concerns?

Examples of PLAAFP Statements:

Example of Current Academic Achievement and Functional Performance:

Jeremiah is a 9 year old fourth grade student with average ability, whose achievement testing shows relative strength in reading and weakness in math. Jeremiah is reading at grade level and has good comprehension. He likes to read and he also enjoys science activities. His most recent CBM testing showed that he read 111 words per minute, which is at the 65 percentile on local norms. Math CBM testing showed that he scored 9 digits correct in a two minute timing, which is at the 17 percentile on district fourth grade norms. Mom reports that he brings home assignments requiring reading, but he forgets his math homework.

Example of Impact of Exceptionality:

Jeremiah has difficulty paying attention during class time. His inability to stay on task and follow directions is negatively affecting his classroom performance. When asked to begin work, he often looks around as if he does not know what to do. Observations indicate he often looks to peers for directions, rather than attending to the teacher. This occurs in both classes that he likes and in those he does not like. When the teacher goes to him to provide individual help, he refuses help and insists he understands what to do, but then he often completes the assignment incorrectly. Jeremiah also needs to work on staying in his personal space and not invading others' personal space. This is exhibited when he swings a backpack or his arms around in a crowded room or while walking down the hall. Observations of Jeremiah show this is also an issue during games in PE class and in unstructured activities during recess, such as playing tag. He is unable to appropriately interact with others. He sometimes stands very close to other students, squaring up to them, in a posture that is intimidating to younger students, and challenging to those his own age. He has also been observed to inappropriately touch other students. These behaviors have been especially problematic during special out-of-school activities, and Jeremiah has not been allowed to attend the last two class field trips, because of the severity of problems on earlier field trips.

Example of Baseline Data:

Teachers estimate that Jeremiah inappropriately invades other's space at least 50% of the time during unstructured activities. Observations using interval recording indicate that during recess he invaded others' space (using defined behavioral criteria) during 70% of the observation intervals. During classroom time, he was out of his seat and inappropriately close to another student during 35% of the observation intervals. Total off-task behavior during classroom observation was 60% of observed intervals.

Other Examples of PLAAFP Statements:

Example of Current Academic Achievement and Functional Performance:

In his general education 8th grade math classroom, Mike is currently turning in about half of his assignments, and only about a third of those assignments are completed. Accuracy of his turned-in work fluctuates markedly. Because of his poor assignment completion, Mike received a mid-quarter failing warning letter. Mike's completion of assignments in other curricular areas is not a concern.

Example of Impact of Exceptionality:

Stephanie, a third grader, when given a sixth grade-level mixed math operations probe that includes fractions, decimals, and percents, is able to correctly solve 87% of all problems presented. This means that Stephanie is approximately 3 years ahead of her typical third grade peers in math calculation. In areas of math other than calculation, Stephanie has mastered most of the fourth grade but very few of the fifth grade math standards. She is not yet able to solve one-step equations with one variable and she is not yet able to use function tables to model algebraic relationships. She has learned to make one but not two transformations in the area of geometry. In probability, she has not yet learned how to use fractions to represent the probability of an event.

Example of Baseline Data:

Todd, a fourth grader, currently reads 85 words per minute with 5 errors when given a first semester, second grade-level passage. According to district norms, Todd is reading at the 5th percentile for fourth graders in the fall.

b. Measurable Annual Goals

Measurable annual goals are descriptions of what a child can reasonably be expected to accomplish within a 12-month period with the provision of special education (specially designed instruction) and related services. When selecting areas of need to address through annual goals, the IEP team's focus should be on selecting goals from the most highly prioritized needs from the PLAAFPs. For curricular needs, the IEP team should consider identifying goals from the standards and benchmarks of the local district or from the Kansas Extended Standards. To accomplish this, it is necessary that the child's performance be measured against the district or state standards, benchmarks, and indicators. As districts develop assessments to measure their standards, all children need to be included.

Measurable annual goals must be related to meeting the child's needs that result from the child's exceptionality, to enable the child to be involved and progress in the general or advanced curriculum. In addition, they must meet each of the child's other educational needs that result from the child's exceptionality (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(2)). Annual goals are not required for areas of the general curriculum in which the child's exceptionality does not affect the ability to be involved and progress in the general curriculum. The annual goals included in each child's IEP should be individually selected to meet the unique needs of the individual child. The goals should not be determined based on the category of the child's exceptionality or on commonly exhibited traits of children in a category of exceptionality. Additionally, a student taking the Reading KAMM must have an IEP goal in the area of reading. A student taking the Mathematics KAMM must have an IEP goal in the area of math (see section "e. Participation in State Assessment and District-wide Assessment).

There is a direct relationship between the measurable annual goal, baseline data and the needs identified in the PLAAFP. Because the PLAAFP are baseline data for the development of measurable annual goals, the same criteria used in establishing the PLAAFP must also be used in setting the annual goal.

Four critical components of a well-written goal are:

- Timeframe is usually specified in the number of weeks or a certain date for completion. A year is the maximum allowed length for the timeframe.
  - In 36 instructional weeks...
  - By November 19, 2008...
  - By the end of the 2008-2009 school year...
- Conditions specify the manner in which progress toward the goal is measured. Conditions are dependent on the behavior being measured and involve the application of skills or knowledge.
  - When presented with 2nd-grade-level text...
  - Given a mixed, 4th-grade-level math calculation probe...
  - Given a story prompt and 30 minutes to write...
- Behavior clearly identifies the performance that is being monitored, usually reflects an action or can be directly observed, and is measurable.
  - Sarah will read...
  - Claude will correctly solve...
  - Mary will score...
- Criterion identifies how much, how often, or to what standards the behavior must occur in order to demonstrate that the goal has been reached. The goal criterion specifies the amount of growth the child is expected to make by the end of the annual goal period.
  - 96 words per minute with 5 or fewer errors.
  - 85% or more correct for all problems presented.
  - 4 or better when graded according to the 6-trait writing rubric.

Well written measurable annual goals will pass the "Stranger Test." This test involves evaluating the goal to determine if it is written so that a teacher who does not know the child could use it to develop appropriate instructional plans and assess the child's progress.

The number of goals addressed in the IEP depends on the child's needs. Prerequisite skills, immediate needs, and general applicability are all factors to consider when establishing priorities. Parents, general education teachers, and children are also essential sources of information when setting priorities.

If the child needs accommodations or modifications in order to progress in an area of the general curriculum, the IEP does not need to include a goal for that area; however the IEP would need to specify the modification and accommodations. Each IEP must have at least one measurable annual goal.

c. Benchmarks or Short-Term Objectives (disabilities only)

Benchmarks or Short-Term Objectives are only required on the IEP of a child with a disability who takes an alternate assessment aligned to alternate achievement standards (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(1); 34 C.F.R. 320(a)(2)(ii)). This means that only children who take the Kansas Alternate Assessment (KAA) would be required to have short-term objectives or benchmarks on their IEPs. This requirement would apply to preschool children and children with disabilities in kindergarten through grade two only if these children are assessed in a State or district-wide assessment program based on alternate achievement standards. However, this requirement would not prohibit the use of benchmarks or short-term objectives to be used to measure progress toward meeting the measurable annual goals for any child with an exceptionality (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46663).

i. Benchmarks (Milestones or Major Milestones)

Benchmarks are major milestones that describe content to be learned or skills to be performed in sequential order. They establish expected performance levels that coincide with progress reporting periods for the purpose of gauging whether a child's progress is sufficient to achieve the annual goal. It is important to note that the term "benchmark," as it is used in the IEP, should not be confused with the term "benchmark" as it is used in state and local standards. In the curricular standards, a benchmark is a specific statement of what a child should know and be able to do. In the context of IEPs, benchmarks measure intermediate progress toward the measurable annual goal.

Example PLAAFP Statement, Measurable Annual Goal, and Benchmarks for Student taking the KAA (Kansas Alternate Assessment)

PLAAFP: Jennifer uses the BIGmack switch or step by step when it is presented, but she uses these devices only with adults, and not with her peers. She requires physical prompting to use the devices at least 90% of the time. She does not acknowledge the presence of peer communicative partners in an observable manner.

Measurable Annual Goal 1:

Within 36 educational weeks, Jennifer will acknowledge the presence of a peer communicative partner as evidenced by gestures, changes in body position, or vocalizations, and participate in a familiar structured turn-taking communicative routine with physical prompting in at least one school setting.

Benchmarks:

1. In 9 instructional weeks, when joined by a peer, Jennifer will acknowledge the presence of a peer communicative partner as evidenced by gestures, changes in body position, or vocalizations.

2. In 18 instructional weeks, when joined by a peer, Jennifer will acknowledge the presence of a peer communicative partner as evidenced by gestures, changes in body position, or vocalizations, and will participate in a structured turn-taking activity with a peer when physically prompted by an adult.
3. In 27 instructional weeks, while participating in a familiar, structured turn-taking activity with a peer, Jennifer will recognize when it is appropriate to take her turn and respond to this opportunity as evidenced by gestures, changes in body position, vocalizations, or actions, and by activating a voice-output device at the appropriate time with physical prompts from an adult.

ii. Short-Term Objectives (Intermediate Steps)

Short-term objectives are measurable, intermediate steps between a child's baseline data in the present level and the annual goal, with the conditions under which the skill is to be performed, the behavior to be observed, and the criteria for success. A short-term objective follows the same pattern of the goal, with a shorter timeframe and intermediate criteria to be attained. The goal and short-term objectives establish how child outcomes will be measured. Diagnostic assessment will provide the information needed to develop an instructional plan for achieving the goals and objectives.

Example PLAAFP Statement, Measurable Annual Goal, and Benchmarks for Student taking the KAA (Kansas Alternate Assessment)

PLAAFP: Jennifer has significant difficulty with motor strength and endurance. Currently, Jennifer is able to sit in a classroom chair while engaged in a classroom activity for only 4 minutes.

Measurable Annual Goal 3:

In 36 instructional weeks, Jennifer will sit in a classroom chair for 20 minutes while engaged in a classroom activity.

Short-Term Objectives:

1. In 9 instructional weeks, Jennifer will sit in a classroom chair for 8 minutes while engaged in a classroom activity.
2. In 18 instructional weeks, Jennifer will sit in a classroom chair for 12 minutes while engaged in a classroom activity.
3. In 27 instructional weeks, Jennifer will sit in a classroom chair for 16 minutes while engaged in a classroom activity.

d. Measuring and Reporting Progress on Annual Goals

Once the IEP team has developed measurable annual goals for a child, the team must include a description of how the child's progress toward meeting the annual goals will be measured. This measure of progress will enable parents, children, and educators to monitor progress during the year, and, if appropriate, to revise the IEP to be consistent with the child's instructional needs. The idea is to use progress monitoring information in a formative way, to help with decision-making about instructional changes that may be needed. If a measurable annual goal is written correctly with the 4 components (behavior, criteria, condition and timeframe) the requirement of how progress toward the goal is measured is contained within the goal and no additional information is required.

The IEP must include a description of when parents will be provided periodic reports about their child's progress toward meeting the annual goals. An example might be through the use of quarterly or other periodic reports concurrent with the issuance of district report cards (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(3)). The reporting may be carried out in writing or through a meeting with the parents (including documentation of information shared at the meeting); whichever would be a more effective means of communication. Whatever the method chosen, child progress toward the goals must be monitored in the method indicated on the IEP and progress reports should include a description of the child's progress toward his/her measurable annual goals.

e. Participation in State Assessments and District-Wide Assessments (disabilities only)

The IEP team must make a decision about how the child with a disability will participate in State assessments and district-wide assessments. There are three options for each content area available to children with disabilities for the Kansas State Assessments. The IEP team is to make the decision which assessment is appropriate for the child for each curricular area being assessed in that child's grade level during the upcoming IEP year. These options include the:

1. Kansas State Assessment,
2. Kansas Assessment with Modified Measures (KAMM), and
3. Kansas Alternate Assessment (KAA).

The intent is that all children will be assessed and will be part of the State and district accountability systems. The IEP team should apply the eligibility criteria for the KAMM and KAA to help determine which assessment is the most appropriate for the child. The eligibility criteria for each assessment are included in the Examiners Manual for each assessment available online at www.ksde.org. The eligibility criteria for the KAMM and KAA are also available online at www.kansped.org on the Assessments page, under either the KAMM or Kansas Alternate Assessment.

If the IEP team determines that the child shall take the KAMM or KAA, the IEP must include a statement of:

- a) which assessment the child will participate in,
- b) why the child cannot participate in the regular assessment and
- c) why the particular alternate assessment selected is appropriate for the child (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(6)).

A student taking the Reading KAMM must have an IEP goal in the area of reading. A student taking the Mathematics KAMM must have an IEP goal in the area of math. Any student for whom the KAMM is the most appropriate option for participating in a Kansas assessment is highly likely to need an IEP goal to address significantly low academic skills, since "performance that is multiple years behind grade level expectations" is a component of the eligibility criteria for the KAMM.

Goals on any student's IEP should be based upon a student's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFPs) and consideration of the Kansas content standards. If a student meets the eligibility criteria for the KAMM, that student is highly likely to need a goal or goals related to the content standards. A student taking the KAMM may also need goals not related to the content standards (e.g., behavior, orientation and mobility, motor skills, etc.) In both the Kansas Reading Standards and the Kansas Mathematics Standards, the wording of the standards is the same across grade levels. It is the benchmarks and indicators that vary according to grade level, and which reflect the specific skills appropriate for inclusion in a measurable goal. When considering specific skills and criteria for writing measurable goals, teams need to take into account both on-grade level skills and developmentally important prerequisite skills.

The State has identified allowable accommodations for State assessments for both general education and special education children. These are listed in the Accommodations Manual available at www.ksde.org or at www.kansped.org. The Accommodations Manual provides information on accommodations appropriate for classroom instruction and classroom assessment and allowable accommodations for Kansas State Assessments. Most accommodations allowed for the Kansas general assessment are for all students, but certain accommodations are designated as allowed for students with IEPs or 504 Plans only.

If a student with an IEP needs a read-aloud accommodation for the Kansas Assessments, that need must be documented on the student's IEP. The need for the read-aloud accommodation should be determined for each individual content area being assessed. However, if reading passages on the Kansas State Reading Assessment is allowed on any student's IEP, the student will then be counted as not participating. In order to use the read-aloud accommodation on Kansas Assessments, the student must have the read-aloud accommodation provided in the classroom on a regular basis (i.e. as an on-going practice), for both instructional material and assessments/tests. Local districts must provide training for human readers providing the read-aloud accommodation. If a student has the read-aloud or any other accommodation listed on his/her IEP, the student must receive that accommodation on the Kansas Assessment. If a student uses an accommodation on Kansas Assessments that is not allowed, the test will be considered invalid and the student will count against AYP participation.

Any accommodation regularly used in instruction should be used on classroom assessments for children with IEPs. Individual school districts may establish their own policies for allowable accommodations for district-wide assessments. All accommodations that are necessary in order for the child to participate in State or district-wide assessments must be documented on the IEP.

For current information regarding the Kansas State Assessments see www.ksde.org or www.kansped.org.

f. Secondary Transition (ONLY for students with disabilities)

Beginning at age 14, and updated annually, the IEP must contain (1) appropriate measurable postsecondary goals based upon age-appropriate transition assessments related to training/education, employment and where appropriate, independent living skills; and (2) the transition services, including appropriate courses of study, needed to assist the child in reaching the stated postsecondary goals; and (3) beginning at age 16, or younger, if determined appropriate by the IEP team, a statement of needed transition services for the child, including, when appropriate, a statement of the interagency responsibilities or any needed linkages (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(8)).

1. Transition Assessment

The LEA must conduct age-appropriate transition assessment at a minimum in the areas of education/training, employment, and, where appropriate, independent living. The purpose of transition assessment is to provide information to develop and write practical, achievable measurable post-secondary goals and assist in the identification of transition services necessary in helping the student reach those goals. Transition assessment must be conducted prior to the student reaching age 14 and prior to the development of the measurable post secondary goals and transition services in the students IEP. For each postsecondary goal there must be evidence that at least one age-appropriate transition assessment was used to provide information on the student's needs, strengths, preferences and interests regarding postsecondary goals. Evidence would most likely be found in the student's file.

Those responsible gather the information needed to understand student needs, taking into account strengths, preferences and interests through career awareness and exploration activities and a variety of formal and informal transition assessments. These assessments should seek to answer questions such as:

- a. What does the student want to do beyond school (e.g., further education or training, employment, military, continuing or adult education, etc.)?
- b. Where and how does the student want to live (e.g., dorm, apartment, family home, group home, supported or independent)?
- c. How does the student want to take part in the community (e.g., transportation, recreation, community activities, etc.)?

It is important to consider and understand transition assessment as having the potential of being a reevaluation. As information is collected to identify and determine need for services, in this case transition services, the assessments could easily enter into the area of reevaluation requiring notice, consent and an evaluation report. For more information about determining whether the activities of the planned transition assessment would be considered a reevaluation see Chapter 7 on Reevaluation.

2. Measurable Postsecondary Goals

Each IEP for a student with a disability, who will be 14 or older during the time period of the IEP, must have measurable postsecondary goal(s) that address the areas of: training/education, employment, and independent living when appropriate. The only goal area that is not required based on individual student needs is independent living.

Descriptions of these categories are:

- Training/Education – specific vocational or career field, independent living skill training, vocational training program, apprenticeship, OJT, military, Job Corps, etc., or 4 year college or university, technical college, 2 year college, military, etc.
- Employment - paid (competitive, supported, sheltered), unpaid, non-employment, etc.
- Independent living skills – adult living, daily living, independent living, financial, transportation, etc.

Measurable postsecondary goals are different from measurable annual goals in that they measure an outcome that occurs after a student leaves high school where a measurable annual goal measures annual progress of the student while in school. However, it is important to note that for each postsecondary goal, there must be an annual goal included in the IEP that will help the student make progress towards the stated postsecondary goal. When developing annual goals, the team should ask “what postsecondary goal(s) does this annual goal support?”. Due to this difference, how measurability is included in the goal is different. The requirements for measurable postsecondary goals are specific to the areas of training/education, employment and independent living, where appropriate, may be written into a single “combo” goal that addresses both training/education, employment, and independent living, where appropriate, in a single goal or as two/three separate goals. Measurable postsecondary goals must be stated in a way that can be measured as yes or no it was achieved; a process such as how a student will achieve a postsecondary goal is not measurable or steps/activities to achieve the goal are not appropriate. The statement needs to indicate what the student “will” do after graduating or completing their secondary program rather than what the student “plans”, “hopes”, “wishes” or “wants” to do. Some examples of measurable postsecondary goals are:

Examples of Measurable Postsecondary Goals:

Example Individual goals:

Sara’s training/education goal is to attend college to study drafting.

Sara’s employment goal is to obtain employment as a CAD operator.

Example Combo goal:

Sara’s postsecondary goal is to attend college to study drafting to obtain employment as a CAD operator.

3. Courses of Study

Each IEP for a student with a disability (who will be 14 or older during the time period of the IEP) must also contain a description of the courses of study (i.e. age 14 transition services) needed to assist the student in reaching those goals. The courses of study must focus on improving the academic and functional achievement of the student to facilitate movement from school to post-school by describing the courses and/or educational experiences that are related to the student’s postsecondary goals.

If the guidance counselor keeps a transcript of required courses toward graduation, the IEP team should review the transcript and plan to determine that the courses identified support the student's postsecondary goals. The guidance counselor may be involved in the IEP meeting should there be changes to the coursework. Other school experiences need to be considered as well. Each year the IEP team reconsiders the student's postsecondary goals and aligns the courses of study with those desired goals. The decisions regarding the courses of study should relate directly to where the student is currently performing and what he or she wants to do after graduation. The connection between the student's postsecondary goals and the courses of study should be obvious. To address the courses of study, the team should ask:

- a. Do the transition courses of study focus on improving the academic and functional achievement of the child to facilitate their movement from school to post-school?
- b. Do the courses of study (and other educational experiences) align with the student's postsecondary goal(s)?

The statement of courses of study is not required to be a listing of individual courses but could be part of the statement if appropriate for the student. The following are examples of statements of the courses of study:

Examples of Courses of Study

Sam plans on going to college and is interested in engineering. He will participate in the general college prep curriculum with a focus on math and sciences.

Nancy is planning on working construction when she finishes high school. To attain the skills necessary for construction, in addition to the general education curriculum she will take additional technical education courses in trades and industry.

The examples above are brief statements that frame the types of courses and reasons why the student will be taking them. Other options for courses of study could be an individual listing of classes which is fine but the listing alone does not show the direct relationship of the course of study to the student's postsecondary goal(s). It's important to keep in mind the reasoning behind including courses of study in the IEP as a way to engage and help the student to see the relevance of their secondary education. Be certain to write it in a way that is meaningful and emphasizes the connections to the student.

4. Age 16 Transition Services

Beginning at age 16, or younger, if determined appropriate by the IEP team, each IEP of a student with a disability must also contain an additional statement of transition services for the child, including, when appropriate, a statement of the interagency responsibilities or any needed linkages (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(8)). This requirement is in ADDITION to the age 14 requirements. Therefore, each IEP for a student (who will be 16 or older during the time period of the IEP) must contain:

- measurable postsecondary goal(s) addressing training/education and employment and possibly independent living skills
- the age 14 transition services statement (i.e. courses of study); and
- the age 16 transition services statement.

The age 16 transition services should be a coordinated set of activities or strategies that support the student in achieving their desired postsecondary goals. The IEP team builds this set of activities from information contained in the PLAAFP that describe where the student is currently performing in relationship to his/her postsecondary goals. With that as the starting point, the team needs to determine what skills, services, or supports the student will need in order to successfully transition from where (s)he is now to his/her desired postsecondary goals. For each postsecondary goal, there should be consideration of transition services in the areas of (a) instruction, (b) related service(s), (c) community experience, (d) development of employment and other post-school adult living objective, (e) if appropriate, acquisition of daily living skill(s), or (f) if appropriate, provision of a functional vocational evaluation listed in association with meeting the postsecondary goal. The LEA may also include the multi-year plan for activities and transition services in the IEP as part of the Age 16 Transition Services. If the LEA decides to include a multi-year plan there must be a clear distinction between those activities/services that are being provided for the current IEP year and the activities or services that are being planned for the future.

The age 16 (and over) transition services statement must:

1. Document activities & transition services for the current IEP year and identify the responsible agency.
2. Document who will pay for which services if an agency outside of the school has responsibility.

Examples of age 16 transition services statements:

Sam needs to improve his employment skills. He will participate 2 hours a day in the community work placement program this year.

Georgia will need adult employment supports. By the end of first semester the school will provide Georgia and her family with information about applying to CDDO for services.

The IEP team must determine, to the extent appropriate, any other public agency that must be invited to the IEP meeting because they are likely to be responsible for providing or paying for transition services. The parents, or a student who is 18 years of age, must provide consent for the school to invite any outside agency to the IEP meeting (K.A.R. 91-40-17(g); 34 C.F.R. 300.321(b)(3)). Consent from the parent (or adult student) is required when inviting outside agencies to ensure the protection of confidentiality of information under FERPA (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46672). (See Figure 4-5 in Appendix A for Consent to Invite Noneducation Agency to IEP Meeting form.)

It is expected that transition services to be provided by agencies other than the school will be included in the IEP. If an agency other than the school, fails to provide the transition service in the IEP that it had agreed to provide, the school must reconvene the IEP team to identify alternative strategies to meet the transition objectives for the child that are set out in the IEP (34 C.F.R. 300.324(c)(1)). Alternative strategies might include the identification of another funding source, referral to another agency, the public agency's identification of other district-wide or community resources that it can use to meet the student's identified needs appropriately or a combination of these strategies.

The school, or any participating agency, including the State vocational rehabilitation agency, is responsible to provide or pay for any transition service that the agency would otherwise provide to children with disabilities who meet the eligibility criteria of that agency. This is to be done without delay. The school may claim reimbursement from an outside agency that failed to provide or pay for the service pursuant to an interagency agreement or other financial arrangement (34 C.F.R. 300.324(c)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.103; 34 C.F.R. 300.154). If a participating agency, other than the school district, fails to provide the transition services described in the IEP, the school district must reconvene the IEP team to identify alternative strategies to meet the transition objectives for the child.

For students incarcerated in an adult correctional facility whose eligibility under IDEA will end because they will turn 21 years old before they will be eligible to be released from prison, the requirements relating to transition planning and transition services do not apply (K.A.R. 91-40-5(c)(2)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.324(d)).

g. Age of Majority

Beginning at age 17, the IEP team must inform the student and the parents that at the age of majority under State law (age 18 in Kansas), the rights under IDEA will transfer to the student. The school must provide documentation in the IEP, at least one year before the student is 18, that the student has been informed of rights provided in the federal and state law that will transfer to the student. If parents believe that their child may not be able to make educational decisions, they may wish to find out about obtaining a limited guardianship or some other legal means to support the student upon reaching the age of majority. It is important for the school to provide information and resources to the student and parents early in the IEP process to assist them in understanding the implications of the transfer of these rights under IDEA (K.S.A. 72-989; K.A.R. 91-40-18(e)).

h. Statement of Special Education and Related Services

Each IEP for a child with an exceptionality must include a statement of:

- the special education services
- related services
- supplementary aids and services (including accommodations), based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child
- a statement of the program modifications, and
- supports for school personnel that will be provided for the child to:
  - advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals;
  - be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, and participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and
  - be educated and participate with other children with exceptionalities and nonexceptional children in these activities. (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(4))

Each of these areas must be addressed on the IEP even if the way it is addressed is indicating the child does not need the service. All services; special education and related services, supplementary aids and services, program modifications, and supports for school personnel, as outlined in the IEP (including transition services) must indicate the projected date for the beginning of the services and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services(K.S.A. 72-987(c)(7)). It is possible that service dates may vary throughout the year and should be indicated as such on the IEP.

The amount of services to be provided must be stated in the IEP so that the level of the school's commitment of resources will be clear to parents and other IEP team members. The amount of time to be committed to each of the various services to be provided must be (1) appropriate to the specific service, and (2) stated in the IEP in a manner that is clear to all who are involved in both the development and implementation of the IEP (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46667).

In determining the location for special education and related services the IEP team must consider the continuum of educational placements necessary to implement the IEP. The school must ensure that the parents of each child are members of any group that makes decisions on the educational placement of their child. The placement decision must be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the least restrictive environment (LRE). The educational placement is to be:

- determined at least annually;
- based upon the child's IEP; and
- located as close as possible to the child's home, consistent with the requirements of the IEP. (K.A.R. 91-40-1(II))

(For more information, see Chapter 5, Special Education and Related Services.)

i. Least Restrictive Environment

Least restrictive environment (LRE) means the educational placement in which, to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are not disabled (K.A.R. 91-40-1(II)). The IEP must contain an explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with children without disabilities in the general education class, and in extracurricular and nonacademic activities with program modifications or supports for school personnel (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(5)). Children with disabilities are to be removed from the general education environment only if the nature or severity of the disability is such that education in general education classes with the use of supplementary aids and services or modifications cannot be achieved satisfactorily.

Although placement in the LRE is not legally required for children identified as gifted, the provision of FAPE still requires that the IEP team make an individualized placement determination for the child. Additionally, parents of gifted children must be part of the team making placement decisions. (For additional information on Educational Placement and Least Restrictive Environment see Chapter 6.)

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.320

(c) Failure to meet transition objectives.

- (1) Participating agency failure. If a participating agency, other than the public agency, fails to provide the transition services described in the IEP in accordance with §300.320(b), the public agency must reconvene the IEP Team to identify alternative strategies to meet the transition objectives for the child set out in the IEP.
- (2) Construction. Nothing in this part relieves any participating agency, including a State vocational rehabilitation agency, of the responsibility to provide or pay for any transition service that the agency would otherwise provide to children with disabilities who meet the eligibility criteria of that agency.

Kansas Statute:

K.S.A. 72-987. IEP content

(c) The IEP for each exceptional child shall include:

- (1) A statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including: (A) How the child's disability or giftedness affects the child's involvement and progress in the general education curriculum; (B) for preschool children, as appropriate, how the disability affects the child's participation in appropriate activities; and (C) for those children with disabilities who take alternate assessments aligned to alternate achievement standards, a description of benchmarks or short-term objectives;
- (2) a statement of measurable annual goals, including academic and functional goals designed to: (A) Meet the child's needs that result from the child's disability or giftedness, to enable the child to be involved in and make progress in the general education or advanced curriculum; and (B) meet each of the child's other educational needs that result from the child's disability or giftedness;
- (3) a description of how the child's progress toward meeting the annual goals will be measured and when periodic reports on the progress the child is making toward meeting the annual goals will be provided, such as through the use of quarterly or other periodic reports issued concurrently with general education report cards;
- (4) a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided for the child: (A) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; (B) to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in accordance with provision (1) and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and (C) to be educated and participate with other exceptional and nonexceptional children in the activities described in this paragraph;
- (5) an explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with nonexceptional children in the regular class and in the activities described in provision (4);
- (6) (A) a statement of any individual appropriate accommodations that are necessary to measure the academic achievement and functional performance of the child on state and districtwide assessments; and (B) if the IEP team determines that the child shall take an alternate assessment on a particular state or district-wide assessment of student achievement or part of such an assessment, a statement of why the child cannot participate in the regular assessment and why the particular alternate assessment selected is appropriate for the child;
- (7) the projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications described in provision (4), and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services and modifications;
- (8) (A) beginning at age 14, and updated annually thereafter: (A) Appropriate measurable postsecondary goals based upon age-appropriate transition assessments related to training, education, employment and where appropriate, independent living skills; and (B) the transition services, including appropriate courses of study, needed to assist the child in reaching the stated postsecondary goals; and (C) beginning at age 16, or younger, if determined appropriate by the IEP team, a statement of needed transition services for the child, including, when appropriate, a statement of the interagency responsibilities or any needed linkages; and
- (9) beginning at least one year before the child reaches the age of majority under state law, a statement that the child has been informed of the child's rights, if any, that will transfer to the child on reaching the age of majority as provided in K.S.A. 72-989, and amendments thereto.

Nothing in this section shall be construed to require: (1) That additional information be included in a child's IEP beyond that which is specifically required by this section; and (2) that an IEP team include information under one component of a child's IEP that is already contained under another component of the IEP.

72-989. Rights of child with disability upon reaching 18 years of age. When a person who has been determined to be a child with a disability reaches the age of 18, except for such a person who has been determined to be incompetent under state law:

- (a) An agency shall provide to both the person and to the person's parents any notice required by this act;
- (b) all other rights accorded to parents under this act transfer to the person;
- (c) the agency shall notify the person and the parents of the transfer of rights; and
- (d) all rights accorded to parents under this act transfer to the person if incarcerated in an adult or juvenile federal, state or local correctional institution.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1

(l) "Least restrictive environment" and "LRE" mean the educational placement in which, to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are not disabled, with this placement meeting the requirements of K.S.A. 72-976, and amendments thereto, and the following criteria:

- (1) Determined at least annually;
- (2) based upon the student's individualized education program; and
- (3) provided as close as possible to the child's home.

K.A.R. 91-40-18(e)

(e) At least one year before an exceptional child reaches 18 years of age, the agency providing services to the child shall ensure that the child's IEP includes a statement the student has been informed of rights provided in the federal law, if any, that will transfer to the child on reaching 18 years of age.

K.A.R. 91-40-21. Educational Placement

(a) Each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE.
(b) Each agency shall ensure that a continuum of alternative educational placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall meet the following criteria:

- (1) Include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools; instruction in a child's home; and instruction in hospitals and other institutions; and
- (2) make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement.

(c)(1) In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, including a preschool child with a disability, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision meets the following requirements:

(A) The decision shall be made by a group of persons, including the parent and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options.

(B) The decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

(2) In determining the educational placement of a gifted child, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision is made by a group of persons, including the child's parent and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and appropriate placement options for gifted children.

F. MEETING TO REVIEW, REVISE OR AMEND THE IEP

1. Annual Review of the IEP

The IEP is to be reviewed at least once every 12 months, to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved and to revise the IEP as appropriate. The review and revision of the IEP is to address: (a) any lack of expected progress toward the annual goals and in the general education curriculum, where appropriate; (b) the results of any reevaluation conducted; (c) information about the child provided by the parents; (d) the child's anticipated needs; or (e) other matters. The IEP team is to consider any of the special factors related to the child's IEP (see Section D.1. of this Chapter). (K.S.A. 72-987(f))

2. Amend the IEP

At an annual IEP team meeting, changes to the IEP are to be made by the entire IEP team. However, between annual IEP reviews, if the parent and school representative agree, changes can be made without an IEP team meeting, by amending the IEP rather than by rewriting the entire IEP. School districts are encouraged to develop and implement a policy indicating who has the authority to amend the IEP without a meeting (K.S.A. 72-987(b)(4)(A)).

In amending a child's IEP, the parent of a child with an exceptionality and the school representative may agree not to convene an IEP team meeting for the purpose of making those changes, and instead may develop a written document to amend or modify the child's current IEP. There are no restrictions on the types of changes that may be made, so long as the parent and the school representative agree to make the changes without an IEP team meeting. If changes are made to the child's IEP without a meeting, the school must ensure that the child's IEP team is informed of those changes (K.S.A. 72-987(b)(4)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.324(a)(4)). Upon request, the parent must be provided with a revised copy of the IEP with the amendments incorporated. (See Figure 4-8 in Appendix A for Agreement to Amend the IEP, also found at www.kansped.org; Federal Register, August 14, 2006, pp. 46685-46686)

Even when using the IEP amendment process, the school must provide Prior Written Notice of any changes in the IEP. If the changes in the IEP constitute a substantial change in placement or a material change in services, the school must request parent consent to implement the change. [See Chapter 5 Services for further details about substantial change in placement and material change in services]

Specific day-to-day adjustments in instructional methods and approaches that are made by either a general or special education teacher to assist a child with an exceptionality to achieve his or her annual goals do not require action by the child's IEP team.

3. Request by Parent or School Staff for IEP Meeting

Although the school is responsible for determining when it is necessary to conduct an IEP meeting, the parents of a child with an exceptionality have the right to request an IEP meeting at any time. The child's teacher or other school staff may also propose an IEP meeting at any time they feel the IEP has become inappropriate for the child and revision should be considered (K.S.A. 72-987(f)).

Kansas Statute:
K.S.A. 72-987

(b)(4) (A) After the annual IEP meeting for a school year, the parent of an exceptional child and an appropriate representative of the agency providing services to the child may agree to develop a written document amending or modifying the child's current IEP, without convening an IEP meeting.

(B) If the parent and agency representative develop a written document amending or modifying a child's current IEP, the document shall be dated and signed by the parent and the agency representative. The parent and the agency shall be provided a copy of the document.

(f) Each agency shall ensure that the IEP team:

(1) Reviews the child's IEP periodically, but not less than annually to determine whether the annual goals for the child are being achieved; and

(2) revises the IEP, as appropriate, to address: (A) Any lack of expected progress toward the annual goals and in the general education curriculum, where appropriate; (B) the results of any reevaluation conducted under this section; (C) information about the child provided by the parents; (D) the child's anticipated needs; or (E) other matters.

Kansas Regulations:
K.A.R. 91-40-16. IEP requirements.

(a) Each agency shall be responsible for initiating and conducting meetings to develop, review, and revise the IEP of each exceptional child served by the agency.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (c), each agency shall ensure that the following conditions are met:

(1) An IEP is in effect before special education and related services are provided to an exceptional child.

(2) Those services to which the parent has granted written consent as specified by law are implemented not later than 10 school days after parental consent is granted unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown.

(3) An IEP is in effect for each exceptional child at the beginning of each school year.

- (4) The child's IEP is accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation.
- (5) Each teacher and provider described in paragraph (4) of this subsection is informed of the following:
- (A) That individual's specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP; and
  - (B) the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP.

G. TRANSFER WITHIN THE STATE AND FROM OUT-OF- STATE

When a student moves into a new school district, the school district must take reasonable steps to promptly obtain the child's records, including the IEP and supporting documents and any other records relating to the provision of special education or related services to the child, from the previous school district in which the child was enrolled. The previous school district in which the child was enrolled must take reasonable steps to promptly respond to the request from the new school district (K.S.A. 72-987(g); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(e)(f)(g)). Since this is a transfer of educational records from the child's old district to the new district no consent for release of documents is required.

1. Within State

When a child with an exceptionality transfers to a new school district in Kansas, with a current IEP in a previous school district in Kansas, the new school district, in consultation with the parents, must provide FAPE to the child, including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous school district. Once the new district receives the current IEP the new school district may adopt the child's IEP from the previous school district or develop and implement a new IEP. When a student moves within the State, eligibility has already been established and a reevaluation is not required.

2. Out-of-State

When a child with an exceptionality, who has a current IEP in another State, transfers to a school district in Kansas, the new school district, in consultation with the parents, must provide the child with FAPE, including services comparable to those described in the child's IEP from the previous school district. Comparable services have the meaning of "similar" or "equivalent" to the services that were described in the child's IEP from the previous school, as determined by the child's newly designated IEP team in the new district (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46681). If there is a dispute between the parent and the school district regarding what constitutes comparable services, the dispute could be resolved through mediation procedures or, as appropriate, the due process hearing procedures. If the parent disagrees with the new school district about the comparability of services, stay-put would not apply (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46682).

The new school district may adopt the current IEP or conduct an initial evaluation to determine eligibility, and develop and implement a new IEP. The evaluation conducted by the new school district would be to determine if the child is a child with an exceptionality and to determine the educational needs of the child. Therefore, the evaluation would be an initial evaluation, which would require parental consent.

Kansas Statute:
K.S.A. 72-987

- (g) (1) If an exceptional child with a current IEP transfers from one Kansas school district to another during the academic year, the new school district, in consultation with the child's parent, shall provide the child a FAPE, including services comparable to those described in the transferred IEP, until the new school district either adopts the transferred IEP, or develops and implements a new IEP for the child.
- (2) If during the academic year, an exceptional child who has a current IEP transfers from a school district in another state to a Kansas school district, the Kansas school district, in consultation with the child's parent, shall provide the child a FAPE, including services comparable to those described in the transferred IEP, until the Kansas school district either adopts the transferred IEP, or conducts an evaluation of the child, if deemed necessary, and develops and implements a new IEP for the child.

H. IMPLEMENTING THE IEP

Once the IEP team has completed developing the initial IEP, Prior Written Notice, describing the proposed action must be provided to the parents and a request made for consent to initiate special education and related services. Services are to be initiated within 10 school days after written parent consent is granted, unless reasonable justification for a delay can be shown. The implementation of initial services must be completed within the 60 school day timeline of initial evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-8(f); K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(2)).

The school must obtain informed consent from the parent of the child before the initial provision of special education and related services to the child. The school must make reasonable efforts to obtain informed consent from the parent. If the parent fails to respond or refuses to consent to the initial provision of services, the school may not use mediation or due process procedures in order to obtain agreement or a ruling that the services may be provided to the child.

However, in such cases, the school will not be considered to be in violation of the requirement to make available FAPE to the child for the failure to provide the child with the services for which the school requests consent. Under these circumstances, the school is not required to convene an IEP team meeting or develop an IEP for the child. In the situation where the parent fails to respond or refuses consent, this would also exclude the child from IDEA discipline protections that are provided to students when a district suspects the child to be a child with a disability.

Once an IEP has been completed and consent for services has been obtained from the parents, the child's IEP must be accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for its implementation. Regardless of whether an individual participates in the IEP meeting or is excused, all individuals who are providing education to the child (regular education teacher, special education teacher, related service provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for implementation of the IEP) must be informed by the IEP team of (1) his or her specific responsibilities related to implementing the child's IEP, and (2) the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the IEP (K.A.R. 91-40-16(b)(5); 34 C.F.R. 300.323(d)(2)).

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-8. Evaluations

(f) Unless an agency has obtained written parental consent to an extension of time and except as otherwise provided in subsection (g) of this regulation, the agency shall complete the following activities within 60 school days of the date the agency receives written parental consent for evaluation of a child:

(1) Conduct the evaluation of the child;

(2) conduct a meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child and, if so, to develop an IEP for the child. The agency shall give notice of this meeting to the parents as required by K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); and

(3) implement the child's IEP in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-16.

(g) The agency shall not be subject to the timeframe prescribed in subsection (f) of this regulation if:

(1) the parent of the child who is to be evaluated repeatedly fails or refuses to produce the child for the evaluation; or

(2) the child enrolls in a different school before the evaluation is completed and the parent and new school agree to a specific time when the evaluation will be completed.

(h) In complying with subsection (f) of this regulation, each agency shall ensure that an IEP is developed for each exceptional child within 30 days from the date on which the child is determined to need special education and related services.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT THE IEP

1. May an IEP be written with no measurable annual goals?

No, IEPs must have at least one measurable annual goal. Measurable annual goals document the child's anticipated progress as the result of special education. Special education is defined in K.A.R. 91-40-1(jjj) as "specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of an exceptional child..." If no measurable annual goals are necessary and no specially designed instruction is necessary, the child's continued need for special education and related services should be reconsidered. If only modifications, accommodations, consultation, or services that don't require specially designed instruction are required, the child's needs may be able to be met through a Section 504 plan or other means.

2. When using short-term objectives for children who take an alternate assessment aligned to alternate achievement standards, can they be demonstrated through the use of graphs, or by simply stating the criteria for progress reporting periods without restating the entire goal multiple times?

No specific format for short-term objectives is prescribed by law. So long as the short-term objectives are measurable intermediate steps that "enable a child's teacher(s), parents, and others involved in developing and implementing the child's IEP to gauge, at intermediate times during the year, how well the child is progressing toward achievement of the annual goal," they are legally compliant.

3. May a teacher develop their own assessments, including rubrics and informal probes, as criteria for the measurable annual goals?

Yes, so long as the assessment contains specific, objective, measurable criteria that are aligned with local curriculum and instruction. Personal opinions and other subjective measures are not appropriate. If a teacher-made assessment is developed to establish baseline data in the PLAAFP and the measurable annual goal, it should be attached to the IEP so that anyone who may become involved in implementing the IEP can use it to develop appropriate instructional plans and assess child progress as necessary.

4. What happens when the IEP team cannot reach an agreement?

The IEP team should work toward consensus. It is not appropriate for an IEP team to make IEP decisions based upon a majority vote. If the IEP team cannot reach agreement the LEA representative at the meeting has the ultimate authority to make a decision and then to provide the parents with appropriate notice and request consent of the proposed action as appropriate.

5. What should the school do if the child's only parent is in jail and will not be released before the IEP annual review date?

If neither parent is able to attend the IEP team meeting, the school must take steps to ensure parent participation, including individual or conference telephone calls. Depending upon the facility, it may even be possible to hold the IEP team meeting at the jail. Incarceration of a parent does not invalidate the parent's right to participate in the development, review, and revision of their child's IEP.

6. Do IEP team members signatures on the IEP constitute consent to the contents of the IEP?

No. IEP team members' signatures on the IEP only indicate who was present and participated in the development, review, and revision of the IEP. Signatures on the IEP do not constitute consent or agreement. For this reason, no one should sign the IEP who did not attend and did not participate in the IEP team meeting. If a member of the IEP team does not agree with a part of the IEP, she/he has the right and obligation to write a minority report and have it attached to the IEP.

7. May parents refuse consent for their child with a disability to participate in State and district-wide assessments, regardless of any decisions the IEP team may have made regarding the child's participation?

Yes, but school officials should encourage the parents to include their child in the State assessments. Any parent may request that their child be exempt from the State assessments. Not allowing parents of children with disabilities to exempt their children would be discrimination based on handicapping condition.

8. Must students incarcerated in adult prisons take State and district-wide assessments?

No. According to 34 C.F.R. 300.324(d) and K.A.R. 91-40-5(c)(2), requirements relating to students with disabilities taking State and district-wide assessments do not apply to students incarcerated in adult prisons. Students in local or state juvenile correctional facilities are not exempted from taking State and district-wide assessments.

9. If a child has many general education teachers or special education teachers and related services personnel, which one must be a member of the IEP team?

Not less than one general education teacher of the child and not less than one special education teacher or related services personnel who is or will be working with the child, must attend the IEP meeting. The school may designate which teacher or teachers will serve as IEP team member(s), taking into account the best interests of the child. The general education teacher who serves as a member of the child's IEP team should be one who is, or may be, responsible for implementing a portion of the IEP. More than one teacher may attend as appropriate.

10. May parents sign a waiver stating that they do not wish to receive additional copies of the Parent Rights Notice this year?

No waiver of the right to receive the Parent Rights Notice is permissible under the law or regulations. It is permissible for the school to send the notice through electronic mail communication if the parent agrees to it and the school makes that option available (34 C.F.R. 300.505). It is permissible for the parents to refuse the Parent Rights Notice after the school has offered it, or to return the document to the school. The school must document that they provided the notice at the required times.

The Parent Rights Notice must be given to parents, at a minimum:

- (1) Only one time in a school year; and
- (2) Upon initial referral or parent request for evaluation;
- (3) Upon receipt of the first formal complaint to the State in a school year;
- (4) Upon receipt of the first due process complaint in a school year;
- (5) Upon initiation of a disciplinary change of placement; and
- (6) Upon parent request.

11. What should the IEP team do if a child moves to the district with no records or IEP, or an unusable IEP?

The IEP team may need to develop an interim IEP for a shorter than normal period of time to allow time to locate the child's records or conduct the assessments necessary to develop a new IEP. The provision of the special education and related services the child needs in order to receive FAPE and progress in the general curriculum should not be withheld pending the receipt of records when the school knows the child has been identified as a child with an exceptionality and has an IEP.

12. Is it necessary to have the parent's signature to document that the parent received the 10-day written Notice of IEP team meetings?

No, the parent's signature is not required. Keeping a copy of the Notice to the parent that indicates that date it was sent is adequate documentation. It is also helpful to document on the 10-day notice any other parent contacts that may have occurred before the date the notice was sent. For example, "As we discussed during our telephone conversation on September 3, your child's IEP meeting has been scheduled for Friday, September 16, 2008, at 3:00 p.m. in room 204 of Southeast Elementary School."

13. If the IEP team does not have adequate information at the time of the IEP team meeting to determine what Extended School Year (ESY) services will be necessary for the child during the summer, what should be written on the IEP?

One of the responsibilities of the IEP team is to consider whether or not ESY services are necessary for each child with a disability. If the IEP team decides that ESY is necessary for the child, they must then determine what those services will be and include them in the IEP.

If the IEP meeting is held in the fall of the school year or if the child is new to the school, the IEP team may not have enough data to determine if the child needs ESY services or what those services should be. In this case, the team should include in the IEP a statement that ESY services were considered and that there was inadequate information at the time of the meeting to make an appropriate decision. The team should also include in this statement a date later in the school year when more information will be available to reconvene and determine if ESY services are needed and amend the IEP as necessary (34 C.F.R. 300.309).

14. If a child turns 21 during the school year, must ESY services be provided the summer after the student's final year of school?

Children continue to be eligible for all necessary special education and related services including ESY until they appropriately exit special education. A student with a disability may be eligible for special education and related services through the school year (ending June 30) in which they turn 21. Thus, it is an IEP team decision whether ESY is necessary for the student until June 30 after their 21st birthday. Some factors in the IEP team's decision may include whether or not the June 30 deadline will give the child time to complete ESY services and whether or not the child will benefit from ESY services.

15. After the child is age 14 or older, is the school required to provide the child with his/her own separate 10-day IEP meeting notice?

No, the school is not required to send the child his/her own separate Notice. However, children ages 14 to 17 must be invited with documentation of their participation in the IEP meeting or input into the IEP. After the age of majority (18 in Kansas), the public agency MUST provide any Notice to BOTH the adult student and the parents. The parents are only notified of the meeting. To attend the meeting, they will have to be invited by their child or the public agency.

16. What happens if the parent does not show up for the IEP meeting?

The school may conduct an IEP meeting without the parents if the school has made repeated attempts (at least 2 contacts by two different methods), but has been unable to secure the parents participation.

If a parent has received notice of the IEP team meeting at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting which includes the meeting date, time and location, and agrees to participate, but does not come to the meeting, the school must contact the parent to reschedule the IEP team meeting and conduct a complete IEP team meeting with all members in attendance. If necessary, other means of parent participation may be used, such as conference calls. Detailed records are to be maintained of attempts to contact the parents.

17. Can the IEP team develop a draft IEP prior to the IEP team meeting?

Yes, a draft IEP may be developed before any IEP meeting. However, in order to ensure parent participation in the development of the IEP, the IEP may not be completed before the IEP team meeting. Members of the IEP team may come with evaluation findings and recommended IEP components, but should make it clear to the parents that these are only suggestions and that the parents' input is required in making any final recommendations. If school personnel bring drafts of some or all of the IEP content to the IEP meeting, there must be a full discussion with the IEP team, including the parents, before the child's IEP is finalized, regarding content, the child's needs and the services to be provided to meet those needs. Parents have the right to bring questions, concerns, and recommendations to an IEP meeting for discussion (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46678).

18. What if the child does not want the parent to attend the IEP meeting? Is it mandatory to send the notice to both?

For children under the age of 18, the parent is a required member of the IEP team and must attend the IEP team meeting. The notice is to be sent to the parent and if the child is invited to the IEP team meeting, the notice may be sent/given to the child, or the child may be invited verbally. Once the child turns age 18, the school is required to send the Notice to both the parent and the adult student. However, the parent has no right to attend the meeting unless invited by the student or the school as a person with knowledge or expertise about the student.

19. What should the remaining IEP team members do if any required member of the IEP team who is invited to attend, and is not excused, does not show up for the meeting?

If a required member, whose area of the curriculum or related services is being discussed or modified, has not been excused from the IEP team meeting, by consent of the parent and the school, and has not provided input into the development of the IEP in writing prior to the meeting, the school shall reschedule the meeting for a time when all required members can be present or can be officially excused, and, if necessary, provide written input into the meeting. To conduct an IEP meeting without all of the required IEP team members present or having the appropriate excusals is not legally compliant.

20. May occupational therapy or physical therapy stand alone on the IEP as a special education service?

Yes, if the child initially qualified for special education and related services under the category of physical impairment or other health impaired. The IEP team must determine the special education and related services needed by the child. If the child does not need specially designed academic instruction, but does need occupational therapy or physical therapy in order to access or progress in the general curriculum or to be educated in the LRE, these services would be listed in the IEP and addressed in the annual goals.

21. If someone is listed on the Notice of IEP Meeting do they have to come?

No, listing a persons name on the Notice of IEP meeting just documents they were invited and does not obligate their attendance unless they are one of the required IEP team members. The IEP may list the role of a team member, such as, general education teacher or speech therapist.

22. Can IEP meetings be recorded with audio or video recorders?

There is no Federal or State statute or regulation that either authorizes or prohibits the recording of an IEP meeting by either a parent or a school official. The local agency has the option to require, prohibit, or regulate the use of recording devices at IEP meetings. If there is a local a policy that prohibits or limits the use of recording devices at IEP meetings, that policy must provide for exceptions if they are necessary to ensure that the parent understands the IEP or the IEP process or to ensure parental rights guaranteed under Part B. If a policy is adopted by a local agency it should also ensure that it is uniformly applied. Additionally, any recording of an IEP meeting maintained by the school is an "educational record" within the meaning of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act ("FERPA"; 20 U.S.C. 1232g), and is subject to the confidentiality requirements of both FERPA and IDEA (Federal Register, march 12, 1999, p. 12477).

23. Who is the general education teacher invited to the IEP meeting of a 3-year old that is in a home setting?

The child who is receiving special education services in a home-based setting would not have a general education teacher unless the early childhood special education teacher is also licensed as an early childhood teacher. Therefore, a general education teacher would not be required to attend the IEP meeting unless it is anticipated that the special education services will provided in a general education setting during the next IEP year. In that case, the school would designate a teacher qualified to teach a child of that age.

24. Can a required IEP team member be excused from more than one IEP meeting at a time?

No, the excusal to attend an IEP meeting is specific to each individual meeting.

25. Can a district choose to not allow the excusal of required IEP team members?

Yes, a district may choose to implement a policy that would not allow any of the required IEP team members from being excused.

26. Do the Notice of the IEP team meeting, evaluation reports and progress reports have to be translated into the parent's native language?

The only legal requirement for providing documents in the parents native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent is for Prior Written Notice (34 C.F.R. 300.503(c)).

27. What is a consultation only IEP?

All IEPs must address all of the same legal requirements. If a student does not need specially designed instruction the IEP team should consider conducting a reevaluation to determine whether the child is still eligible for special education services. However, a child may receive specially designed instruction in a regular education classroom through the consultation of the special education teacher with the regular education teacher. There should be a goal addressing the child's needs on the IEP.

28. Can an attorney come to an IEP meeting on behalf of the parent or school?

Yes, an attorney may attend an IEP meeting if the parents or school officials believe an attorney is needed. However, the presence of an attorney is strongly discouraged as it often sets an adversarial tone for the meeting. If the attorney is coming at the invitation of the school they must be included on the notice of meeting provided to the parents. Parents are encouraged, but are not required, to inform the school of any additional persons they are bringing regardless who they are.

29. If a child was found eligible for special education under emotional disturbance must they have a behavioral goal or may they have only an academic goal?

Measurable annual goals should never be dependent upon the child's label; they should always be related to the individual child's needs. Therefore, some ED students will need behavioral goals, but others may not. The issue with many children with ED is that their behavior has interfered with their learning for so long, that even when their behavior comes under better control, they frequently continue to have academic deficits. The PLAAFP should clearly describe how the child's exceptionality impacts their ability to access and progress in the general education curriculum. Based upon the information the IEP Team has they will need to prioritize needs and identify the goals, accommodations, behavior plans or other services needed to address the impact of the exceptionality. Depending upon the results of the assessment the child may have need for a behavioral goal and/or and academic goal. Either would be appropriate. For children whose behavior has improved, celebrate the achievement, and continue to address the issues around how their disability impacts their ability to access and progress in the general curriculum.

30. Can a teacher or a principal keep a child from attending special education services in an IEP because they have not completed their general education assignments or do not have passing grades?

Each teacher (and administrator) working with the child should be informed about the services on the child's IEP. They are legally responsible to ensure that the child receives the services. If they feel that the IEP is not adequate for the child to participate and make progress in the general education curriculum they can ask for an IEP meeting to see if the IEP should be revised.

32. Do IEP goals for students taking the KAMM need to include benchmarks or short-term objectives?

There are no state requirements that IEP goals for students taking the KAMM include benchmarks or short-term objectives. Benchmarks or short-term objectives are required only for students taking the Kansas Alternate Assessment. However, some local districts and cooperatives do have additional requirements, so check with your local special education administrator.

33. Do students with severe emotional disturbance (SED) labels, who have goals on their IEPs which are focused on behavior, need to have content area goals if they are participating in the KAMM?

For any category of disability, if behavior is a significant issue for a student, then a behavioral goal on the IEP is likely to be appropriate. However, if behavior has interfered with a student's learning to such an extent that the student's academic skill level indicates the need to participate in a KAMM assessment, then the student should also have a goal which addresses the area of academic needs.

CHAPTER 5

SPECIAL EDUCATION AND RELATED SERVICES

INTRODUCTION

One of the most important considerations for IEP teams is the special education, related services, and supplementary aids and services to be provided to the child or on behalf of the child. The IEP team must also consider the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided on behalf of the child. All services and supports are provided to enable the child: (1) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; (2) to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, or appropriate activities for children ages 3-5; (3) to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and (4) to be educated and participate with their nondisabled peers to the maximum extent appropriate, in all of these activities. (See Chapter 4, the Individualized Education Program.)

Federal law emphasizes having high expectations for each child and enabling each child to participate and progress in the general education curriculum. Given those foundations, resulting educational placement decisions must be based upon providing services within the least restrictive environment. (See also Chapter 6, Educational Placement and Least Restrictive Environment.) The IEP team must consider special education and related services required to meet the individual needs of children with exceptionalities (including those who are gifted).

This chapter addresses these services and is organized according to the following headings:

- A. Special Education Services
- B. Related Services
- C. Supplementary Aids and Services
- D. Program Modifications and Supports for School Personnel
- E. Incidental Benefit
- F. Extended School Year/Day Services
- G. Frequency, Location and Duration of Services
- H. Home Schooling
- I. Services In Local Detention Facilities, Juvenile Justice Authority and Department of Corrections Facilities
- J. Facilities
- K. Qualified Special Education Personnel

A. SPECIAL EDUCATION SERVICES

1. Local Authority

Each school district is responsible for ensuring that all children with exceptionalities receive the special education, related services, and supplementary aids and services that are specified in their IEP. State law gives local agencies the authority to provide services in numerous ways:

- In the schools;
- In the home, hospital, or other facilities;
- Through a contract with another district;
- Through a cooperative agreement with other districts; or
- Through a contract with a public or private institution.
(K.S.A. 72-966 and 72-967)

Regardless of the method used for service delivery, providers must meet the standards and criteria set by the Kansas State Board of Education.

Additionally, when a child with an exceptionality is admitted to a hospital, treatment center, or other health care institution or facility, a group boarding home or other care facility, upon a referral by a person licensed to practice medicine and surgery, and the institution or facility is located outside the school district in which the child resides, the district of residence remains responsible for the provision of FAPE for the child. Special education and related services required may be provided pursuant to a contract entered into between the school district of which the child is a resident and the school district in which the child is housed. If a contract is not entered into between the two school districts, the child shall be deemed to be a pupil of the school district which is providing special education and related services to the child (K.S.A. 72-966(b)).

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-966. Duties of boards of education in meeting requirements of law; responsibilities of state board of education and other state agencies; interagency agreements; dispute resolution. (a) (1) Each board shall adopt and implement procedures to assure that all exceptional children residing in the school district, including homeless children, foster care children and children enrolled in private schools, who are in need of special education and related services, are identified, located and evaluated.

(2) Each board shall provide a free appropriate public education for exceptional children enrolled in the school district and for children with disabilities who are placed in a private school or facility by the school district as the means of carrying out the board's obligation to provide a free appropriate public education under this act and for children with disabilities who have been suspended for an extended term or expelled from school.

(3) Each board shall provide exceptional children who are enrolled by their parents in private schools with special education and related services in accordance with state law and federal law.

(b) If an exceptional child, upon referral by a person licensed to practice medicine and surgery, is admitted to a hospital, treatment center, or other health care institution, or to a group boarding home or other care facility, and the institution or facility is located outside the school district in which the child resides, the district in which the institution or facility is located may contract with the district in which a parent of the child resides to provide special education or related services, if such services are necessary for the child. Special education and related services required by this subsection may be provided pursuant to a contract entered into between the board of the school district of which the child is a resident and the board of the school district in which the child is housed. Any such contract shall be subject to the provisions of subsections (a)(3) and (c) of K.S.A. 72-967, and amendments thereto. If a contract is not entered into between the school districts, the child shall be deemed to be a pupil of the school district which is providing special education and related services to the child. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to limit or supersede or in any manner affect or diminish the requirements of compliance by each school district with the provisions of subsection (a), but shall operate as a comity of school districts in assuring the provision of special education services for each exceptional child in the state.

(c) (1) Special education and related services required by this section shall meet standards and criteria set by the state board.

K.S.A. 72-967

(a) Each board, in order to comply with the requirements of this act, shall have the authority to:

- (1) Provide appropriate special education and related services for exceptional children within its schools.
  - (2) Provide for appropriate special education and related services in the home, in a hospital or in other facilities.
  - (3) Contract with another school district for special education and related services. Any such contract may provide for the payment of tuition and other costs by the school district in which the child is enrolled.
  - (4) Enter into cooperative agreements with one or more other school districts for special education and related services.
  - (5) Contract with any private nonprofit corporation or any public or private institution, within or outside the state, which has proper special education or related services for exceptional children. Whenever an exceptional child is educated by a private nonprofit corporation or a public or private institution as provided under this paragraph, such child shall be considered a pupil of the school district contracting for such education to the same extent as other pupils of such school district for the purpose of determining entitlements and participation in all state, federal and other financial assistance or payments to such school district.
  - (6) Furnish transportation for exceptional children, whether such children are residents or nonresidents of such school district, for the provision of special education or related services. In lieu of paying for transportation, the board of the school district in which an exceptional child resides may pay all or part of the cost of room and board for such exceptional child at the place where the special education or related services are provided.
- (b) Special education and related services which are provided for exceptional children shall meet standards and criteria set by the state board and shall be subject to approval by the state board.
- (c) Any contract entered into by a board under the provisions of this section shall be subject to change or termination by the legislature.

2. Provision of Special Education Services

Children with exceptionalities are entitled to receive special education and related services. This term means specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with an exceptionality, and includes physical education, travel training, and vocational education. Special education and related services must be provided at no cost to the parents.

All special education services, related services, and supplementary aids and services are to be based on peer-reviewed research, to the extent practicable (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(4)). Peer-reviewed research is research that is reviewed by qualified and independent reviewers to ensure that the quality of the information meets the standards of the field before the research is published. It may be important to note that OSEP comments state that special education services that are based on "peer-reviewed research" are to be provided to the extent that it is possible, given the availability of the research. If no such research exists, the service may still be provided if the IEP team determines that such services are appropriate. Further, OSEP states that failure to base services on peer reviewed research is not necessarily a violation of FAPE, because the IEP team determines what services the child will receive based on the child's individual needs. The IEP is not required to include specific instructional methodologies unless the IEP team determines that it is necessary for a child to receive FAPE (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, pp. 46664, 46665).

Each IEP team makes decisions about the special education instruction and related services, as well as supplementary aids and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, so that the child will advance appropriately toward meeting his/her annual goals, advance in the general curriculum and be educated with his/her peers.

The IEP must also include any services needed to support school personnel. For example, if the general education teacher needs instruction to learn how to use an assistive technology device that the child will use in the classroom, or if the general education teacher may need training in order to carry out a behavior intervention plan in the classroom, or the teacher is being sent to receiving training to work with a child with autism, these services would be included in the IEP for the child.

The decision about what services, the amount of services, and the setting of services necessary to meet the unique needs of an exceptional child is based on a variety of factors. The IEP team must identify the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (PLAAFPs) and determine the annual goals and, if appropriate, benchmarks/short-term objectives. Once the PLAAFPs and goals are established, the IEP team decides what services are to be provided. The IEP team decides the specific services and the amount of services that will be needed for the child to make the necessary progress to achieve the measurable annual goals. After the IEP team determines which services and the amount of services are necessary the team next needs to decide where those services will be provided, and the amount of time the child will spend in general education settings, special educational settings, or in a combination of settings. All special education and related services must be individually determined in light of each child's unique abilities and needs to meet the annual goals in the IEP and make progress in the general education curriculum.

3. Paraeducator

Paraeducators (para's) must work under the supervision of licensed teachers and must meet the personnel standards determined by the State, found in the "Special Education Reimbursement Guide: State Categorical and Transportation Aid", which is on the KSDE home page at www.kansped.org under Resources/Technical Assistance Guidance Documents. Para's are not to be documented separately from their supervising teachers on the IEP. Para's are included in and reported as part of the supervising teacher's special education service time.

Paraeducators working under the supervision of licensed speech-language pathologists, occupational therapists, and physical therapists must meet additional requirements for training and supervision. Each professional's licensing body maintains strict standards for assistants, which if not followed result in the loss of the professional's license. The Kansas Department of Health and Environment, Health Occupations Credentialing Section, may be contacted for current State regulations for speech language pathologists (785-296-0061). State regulations for occupational therapists and physical therapists may be obtained from the Kansas State Board of Healing Arts (785-296-7413).

3. Related Services As Special Education Services

The IEP team may determine that the only special education service needed for a child with a disability is a related service, if it consists of specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of the child. State regulations identify the following related services as special education services:

"(2) Paraeducator services, speech/language pathology services, and any other related services, if it consists of specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability; (3) occupational or physical therapy and interpreter services for deaf children if, without any of these services, a child would have to be educated in a more restrictive environment" (K.A.R. 91-40-1(kkk)(2)(3))

4. Special Education for Children Identified as Gifted

Each child identified as gifted shall be permitted to test out of, or work at an individual rate, and receive credit for required or prerequisite courses, or both, at all grade levels, if so specified in that child's IEP. Each gifted child may receive credit for college study at the college or high school level, or both. If a gifted child chooses to receive college credit, however, the student shall be responsible for the college tuition costs (K.A.R. 91-40-3(g)(h)).

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-987(c)

(c) The IEP for each exceptional child shall include:

- (4) a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided for the child:
  - (A) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals;
  - (B) to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in accordance with provision (1) and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and
  - (C) to be educated and participate with other exceptional and nonexceptional children in the activities described in this paragraph;
- (5) an explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with nonexceptional children in the regular class and in the activities described in provision (4);
- (6) (A) a statement of any individual appropriate accommodations that are necessary to measure the academic achievement and functional performance of the child on state and districtwide assessments; and (B) if the IEP team determines that the child shall take an alternate assessment on a particular state or district-wide assessment of student achievement or part of such a assessment, a statement of why the child cannot participate in the regular assessment and why the particular alternate assessment selected is appropriate for the child;
- (7) the projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications described in provision (4), and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration of those services and modifications;

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(kkk)

"Special education" (1) means specially designed instruction, at no cost to the parents, to meet the unique needs of an exceptional child, including:

- (A) instruction conducted in the classroom, in the home, in hospitals and institutions, and in other settings; and
  - (B) instruction in physical education; and
- (2) shall include:
- (A) paraeducator services, speech-language pathology services and any other related service, if it consists of specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability;
  - (B) occupational or physical therapy and interpreter services for deaf children, if without any of these services, a child would have to be educated in a more restrictive environment;
  - (C) travel training; and
  - (D) vocational education.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(III)

"Specially designed instruction" means adapting, as appropriate to the needs of each exceptional child, the content, methodology or delivery of instruction for the following purposes:

- (1) To address the unique needs of the child that result from the child's exceptionality; and
- (2) to ensure access of any child with a disability to the general curriculum, so that the child can meet the educational standards within the jurisdiction of the agency that apply to all children.

K.A.R. 91-40-3(g)(h)

(g) Each gifted child shall be permitted to test out of, or work at an individual rate, and receive credit for required or prerequisite courses, or both, at all grade levels, if so specified in that child's individualized education program.

(h) Any gifted child may receive credit for college study at the college or high school level, or both. If a gifted child chooses to receive college credit, however, the student shall be responsible for the college tuition costs.

B. RELATED SERVICES

Related services are developmental, corrective, and supportive services required to assist a child, who has been identified as a child with an exceptionality, to benefit from special education services. Generally, when needed, related services are provided in addition to special education instruction. Once the child has been identified as a child with an exceptionality the child need not meet the eligibility criteria for another area of exceptionality in order to receive related services. The IEP team determines what additional services are necessary for the child to benefit from the special education services. The IEP team must consider each child's goals and the services or supports needed to assist the child to achieve them.

Related services are available for exceptional children; however, not all related services are available to children identified as gifted. To distinguish which related services are or are not available to children identified as gifted refer to the definitions of a particular related services in K.A.R. 91-40-1.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(ccc) includes the following as related services, which is not an all-inclusive list. Where additional definitions appear in State regulations, citations are provided with the term.

22. Other developmental, corrective or supportive services

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(ccc)

(ccc) "Related services" means developmental, corrective, and supportive services that are required to assist an exceptional child to benefit from special education.

(1) Related services shall include the following:

- (A) Art therapy;
- (B) assistive technology devices and services;
- (C) audiology;
- (D) counseling services;

- (E) dance movement therapy;
- (F) early identification and assessment of disabilities;
- (G) interpreting services;

(2) Related services shall not include the provision of any medical device that is surgically implanted, including a cochlear implant, the optimization of the device's functioning, including mapping and maintenance of the device, and replacement of the device.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(kkk) (2)(3) "Special education" means the following:

(2) paraeducator services, speech-language pathology services, and any other related service, if the service consists of specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability;

(3) occupational or physical therapy and interpreter services for deaf children if, without any of these services, a child would have to be educated in a more restrictive environment;

1. Surgically Implanted Devices

Related services do not include a medical device that is surgically implanted, including cochlear implants. They also do not include the optimization of that device's functioning (e.g., mapping), maintenance, or the replacement of that device. However, the child with a surgically implanted device may receive any of the related services that the IEP team determines is necessary for the child to receive FAPE (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ccc)(2)).

The school must appropriately monitor and maintain medical devices that are needed to maintain the health and safety of the child, including breathing, nutrition, or operation of other bodily functions, while the child is transported to and from school or is at school. The school must also routinely check external components of a surgically implanted device to make sure it is functioning properly. (K.A.R. 91-40-3(f)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.34(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.113(b)(c))

2. Medical Services and School Health Services

There is an important distinction between "medical services" and "school health services." According to regulation K.A.R. 91-40-1(nn) (34 C.F.R. 300.34(c)(5)), medical services are defined as "services provided by a licensed physician to determine a child's medically related disability that results in the child's need for special education and related services." Schools are required to provide medical services only for diagnostic or evaluation purposes (34 C.F.R. 300.34(a)).

On the other hand, school health services are to be specified on the IEP of a child with a disability and are provided by a school nurse or other qualified person (K.A.R. 91-40-1(fff)). School nurse services are services provided by a qualified school nurse (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ggg)). School health services and school nurse services are related services, which must be provided whenever needed to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ccc); 34 C.F.R. 300.34(a)).

The United States Supreme Court has clarified the distinction between medical services and health services. According to the Supreme Court, medical services are services that must be performed by a physician. It is only those services that require the skills of a physician, therefore, that are limited to diagnostic or evaluation purposes. Health services that may be performed by persons who are not physicians (nurses or other qualified persons) are related services which must be provided by the school when needed to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education. In so holding, the Court stated that Clean Intermittent Catheterization, a procedure involving the insertion of a catheter into the urethra to drain the bladder, was a related service the school must provide to a student who needs it to benefit from special education (Irving Independent School Dist. V. Tatro, 468 U.S. 883 (1984)).

The US Supreme Court reviewed the Tatro decision in 1999. See Cedar Rapids Community Sch. Dist. V. Garret F., Sp. Ct. No. 96-1793 (1999). In Garret F., the Supreme Court reaffirmed its decision in Tatro. The Garret F. Court stated Clean Intermittent Catheterization, continuous one-on-one nursing services, and operation of a ventilator for life support were not medical services because they did not "demand the training, knowledge, and judgment of a licensed physician." The Court found these services to be related services, and that the school was required to provide these services to Garret because he needed such services in order to benefit from his special education services.

In summary, medical services may be a related service only when it involves a procedure requiring the training, knowledge, and judgment of a licensed physician. Even then it is limited to diagnostic or evaluation purposes. Federal regulations and US Supreme Court cases indicate any health-related procedure that does not require the services of a physician is a related service (school health service), which must be provided by the school when needed to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education.

The Kansas Nurse Practice Act addresses the need for appropriate supervision and training for personnel providing services such as medication administration. Some procedures may not be delegated to personnel other than a nurse under any circumstances. For additional information, please consult the Guidelines for Serving Students with Special Health Care Needs, July 1996. This document is available through the Kansas Department of Health and Environment School Nurse Consultant (785-296-7433 or 800-332-6262) or on the KDHE home page: www.kdhe.state.ks.us.

IDEA 2004 has clarified that parents cannot be required to obtain a prescription for medication for a child as a condition of attending school, receiving an evaluation or receiving special education and related services (K.S.A. 72-966(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.174a)).

Supreme Court Decision:

When a school district refused to provide certain services to a medically fragile student, the parent requested a due process hearing. The disputed services were: urinary bladder catheterization, suctioning of tracheotomy, ventilator setting checks, ambu bag administrations as a back up to the ventilator, blood pressure monitoring, observation to determine if the student was in respiratory distress or autonomic hyperreflexia, and disimpation in the event of autonomic hyperreflexia. At due process, an administrative law judge [ALJ] ruled that the district was required to furnish the disputed health care services, as the services were related services. The school district appealed, and a federal district Court agreed with the ALJ that the district was required to provide the disputed services under the IDEA. On appeal to the 8th Circuit, the circuit court concluded the services were necessary for the student to attend school. Since the disputed services were not for diagnostic or evaluative reasons and did not need to be administered by a physician, the district was obligated by the "bright-line" test to furnish them, according to the circuit court. The school district appealed to the Supreme Court.

HELD: for the parent.

The Supreme Court agreed with the lower courts, finding the district was obligated to provide the disputed services. Looking to the IDEA definition of "related services" first, the court noted that the district admitted the disputed services were incorporated within the statutory definition of related services. The disputed services were deemed supportive services, as they were necessary for the student to attend school. In examining whether the medical services exclusion applied, the court noted that medical services are not explicitly defined within the statute, but an exclusion exists which limits the required medical services to services for "diagnostic and evaluation purposes." The scope of this exclusion was addressed by the Supreme Court in the Tatro decision, which held medical services are those services that must be performed by a physician. Applying the reasoning from Tatro to the current dispute, because the requested services did not have to be provided by a physician, the district was required to provide them. The court rejected the proposed multi-factor approach favored by the district as unsupported by the applicable judicial and statutory precedent. Neither the IDEA nor the IDEA regulations enumerate any type of multi-factor approach. The district's assertion that the continuous nature of the services required by the student made them medical services was also rejected. The cost factor, which the district claimed would result in an undue burden, was deemed inconsistent with the purposes of the IDEA. The purpose of the IDEA was to ensure access to public schools for students with disabilities. The court stated that if it adopted the district's cost-based standard it would be engaging in inappropriate judicial rule making. For these reasons, the court concluded the IDEA, Tatro, and the intent behind the IDEA, all supported the conclusion that the district was required to furnish the student with the requested services.

Cedar Rapids Community Sch. Dist. V. Garret F., Sp. Ct. No. 96-1793 1999)

Kansas Statute:

K.S.A. 72-966(e)

(e) Each school board and state agency is prohibited from requiring any child to obtain a prescription for a substance covered by the federal controlled substances act, 21 U.S.C. 801 et seq., as a condition for the child to attend school or be evaluated or receive special education services under this act.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R.91-40-1(nn)(fff)(ggg)

(nn) "Medical services" means services provided by a licensed physician to determine a child's medically related disability that results in the child's need for special education and related services.

(fff) "School health services" means health services that are specified in the IEP of a child with a disability and that are provided by a school nurse or other qualified person.

(ggg) "School nurse services" means nursing services that are provided by a qualified nurse in accordance with the child's IEP.

K.A.R. 91-40-3(f) (1) Each agency shall ensure that hearing aids worn in school by children with hearing impairments or deafness are functioning properly.

(2) Each agency shall ensure that the external components of surgically implanted medical devices of children with disabilities are functioning properly. However, an agency shall not be responsible for the maintenance, programming, or replacement of any surgically implanted medical device or any external component of the device.

3. Transportation

Transportation is a related service when it is needed in order for the child to benefit from special education. Each situation is considered individually, and if for a particular child, transportation is required, then the school must provide it or make other arrangements for the child to be transported. In addition to travel to and from school, transportation, as a related service, also includes travel between schools as well as travel in and around school buildings. Thus, the IEP team may need to also assess a child's ability to access school facilities. Like all related services, when an IEP team determines it is needed, transportation services will be included on the child's IEP.

State law is clear that a school district is not required to transport a child to a location out of the district of residence. This would apply if a child attends a child care, preschool program, or after school program that is located in another district or if the child is attending a private school located in another district and requires special education and related services from the district of residence. (K.A.R. 91-40-47(c))

If the IEP team determines that the parent will provide transportation that should be indicated on the IEP. For some children, special considerations for transportation may be necessary. For example, if a child uses a wheelchair, a bus with a lift may be needed. The IEP for a child with severe asthma who requires air conditioning may need to specify an air-conditioned bus. A child may need a paraeducator on the bus for his/her safety and well-being. In determining who should attend the IEP meeting, the IEP team may consider the need to invite the bus driver, if there are special transportation needs. Behavioral considerations could be an example. Certainly, if a driver was included in a behavioral intervention plan, s/he could be involved in the development of that plan.

A service somewhat related to transportation is Driver's Education, which is a course some secondary schools provide for students. If the class is offered for students in the general education curriculum, it must be available for students receiving special education services, if appropriate. A student with physical disabilities may require an adapted car to drive. The IEP team should consider what transportation services and supports are needed for each individual child. If schools need help locating resources for special circumstances, staff is encouraged to call Special Education Services at 1-800-203-9462.

4. Interpreting Services

If a child is deaf or hard of hearing and the IEP team determines that s/he needs a sign language interpreter to receive a free appropriate public education, then that service is required and must be written in the IEP as a special education service or a related service. The IEP team should also address the need for a sign language interpreter in nonacademic and extracurricular activities.

Interpreting services include oral transliteration services, cued language transliteration services, sign language transliteration and interpreting services, and transcription services, such as communication access real-time translation (CART), C-Print, and TypeWell. Interpreting services would also include special interpreting services for children who are deaf-blind (K.A.R. 91-40-1(kk); 34 C.F.R. 300.34(c)(4)).

As any other special education service provider, sign language interpreters must be qualified to provide the related service. KSDE has determined that to be considered a professional (and access professional-level categorical aid), the sign language interpreter must be assessed at either Level 4 or 5 of the Educational Interpreter Performance Assessment (EIPA), or certified at either Level 4 or 5 of the Quality Assurance Screening Test through the Kansas Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing. See the "Special Education Reimbursement Guide: State Categorical and Transportation Aid", available on the KSDE home page, www.kansped.org under Resources/Technical Assistance Guidance Documents.

C. SUPPLEMENTARY AIDS AND SERVICES

The IEP team determines what supplementary aids and services and other supports, are to be provided to the child with a disability or on behalf of the child in general education classes or other education-related settings, and in extracurricular and nonacademic settings, to enable children with disabilities to be educated with children without disabilities to the maximum extent appropriate (the least restrictive environment) (K.A.R. 91-40-1(tt)). The supplementary aids and services are to be based on peer-reviewed research to the extent that they are available. Examples of supplementary aids and services include paraeducator services, assistive technology devices and services, and other accommodations as appropriate.

1. Assistive Technology Devices and Services

An example of a supplementary aid or service is assistive technology, which may also be considered as a related service. An IEP team may determine an evaluation is needed to assess the need for assistive technology devices and services. If a child needs assistive technology to remain in the general education class or other education-related setting to enable him/her to be educated with children without exceptionalities to the maximum extent appropriate, then assistive technology must be listed as a supplementary aid or service on the IEP including the frequency, location, and duration. (See Appendix A, Figure 5-1, Assistive Technology Checklist)

Questions may arise about the responsibility for maintaining, servicing, repairing, or insuring an assistive technology device. The Federal definition makes it clear that the school is responsible for maintaining, repairing, and replacing these devices identified on the IEP. The school may want to revise the district's insurance to cover such equipment, both on and off campus. If a device is used in the child's home or another location away from the school, the home insurance, school insurance, or other coverage may be used. In some cases, it may be worthwhile to purchase special insurance for some devices. For example, if the school has purchased an augmentative communication device or a hearing aid for a preschool-aged child, the nominal insurance fee may be worth considering, especially if the child is very active.

Another issue to consider is the need for the assistive technology device at home or in other settings (K.A.R. 91-40-3(d)(2)). Federal and State regulations make it clear that if the child needs access to the device at home or in other settings in order to receive a free appropriate public education, then it must be allowed and the IEP should state that the device is necessary in the non-school setting(s). An important consideration by the IEP team regarding this issue is that homework and extracurricular activities are an important component of the child's educational experiences.

The school is required to provide the needed assistive technology in a timely manner. Other resources may be available to loan devices or to help pay for them. Medicaid, the Program for Children with Special Health Care Needs, private health insurance, service clubs, and other funding sources may be able to pay for equipment. The Regional Access Sites may also be helpful to schools in locating evaluation and funding resources; call 800-KAN-DOIT to reach the office nearest your school.

If a child who needs an assistive technology device is covered by Medicaid insurance, and Medicaid pays for the device, the device is owned by the child and family. This ownership requirement is consistent with Medicaid rules. Likewise, if other resources (Special Health Services, civic groups, other organizations) have purchased the assistive technology device, it belongs to the child and family. Member districts may access The Kansas Infnitec Coalition at <http://www.ks.myinfnitec.org/MyInfnitec/>.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(c). Assistive technology device

(c) "Assistive technology device" means any item, piece of equipment, or product system, whether acquired commercially off the shelf, modified, or customized, that is used to increase, maintain, or improve the functional capabilities of a child with a disability. The term shall not include any medical device that is surgically implanted or the replacement of the device.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(d). Assistive technology service

Assistive technology service means any service that directly assists a child with a disability in the selection, acquisition, or use of an assistive technology device. This term shall include the following:

- (1) Evaluating the needs of a child with a disability, including a functional evaluation of the child in the child's customary environment;
- (2) purchasing, leasing, or otherwise providing for the acquisition of assistive technology devices by children with disabilities;
- (3) selecting, designing, fitting, customizing, adapting, applying, maintaining, repairing, or replacing assistive technology devices;
- (4) coordinating and using other therapies, interventions, or services with assistive technology devices, such as those associated with existing education and rehabilitation plans and programs;
- (5) providing training or technical assistance for a child with a disability or, if appropriate, that child's family; and
- (6) providing training or technical assistance for professionals including individuals providing education or rehabilitation services, employers, or other individuals who provide services to, employ, or are otherwise substantially involved in the major life functions of a child.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(kk). Interpreting services

(kk) "Interpreting services" means the following:

- (1) For children who are deaf or hard of hearing, oral transliteration services, cued language transliteration services, sign language transliteration and interpreting services, and transcription services, including communication access real-time translation (CART), C-Print, and TypeWell; and
- (2) special interpreting services for children who are deaf-blind.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(ttt). Supplementary aids and services.

(ttt) "Supplementary aids and services" means aids, services, and other supports that are provided in regular education classes, ~~or~~ other education-related settings, and extracurricular and nonacademic settings to enable children with disabilities to be educated with nondisabled children to the maximum extent appropriate.

K.A.R. 91-40-3(d). Ancillary FAPE requirements

- (1) Each agency shall ensure that assistive technology devices or assistive technology services, or both, are made available to a child with a disability if required as a part of the child's special education or related services, or the child's supplementary aids and services.
- (2) Each agency, on a case-by-case basis, shall allow the use of school-purchased assistive technology devices in a child's home or in other settings is required if the child's IEP team determines that the child needs access to those devices at home or in other settings in order to receive FAPE.

2. Nonacademic and Extracurricular Services

The IEP team must determine whether the child requires supplementary aids and services, that are appropriate and necessary, to afford the child an equal opportunity for participation in nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities. These are nonacademic and extracurricular activities that are school sponsored during the regular school year.

Nonacademic and extracurricular services may include counseling services, athletics, transportation, health services, recreational activities, referrals to agencies that provide assistance to individuals with exceptionalities, and employment of students, including employment by the school (K.A.R. 91-40-3(b)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.107).

Nonacademic and extracurricular activities may include meals, recess, counseling services, athletics, transportation, health services, recreational activities, special interest groups or clubs sponsored by the school district, referrals to agencies that provide assistance to individuals with exceptionalities, both employment by the school and assistance in making outside employment available. Some other school-sponsored events or activities include Student Council, school dances, school sporting events, school newspaper or yearbook, school plays and musicals, school music concerts, academically related events like spelling or math bees, and nonacademic events like pep rallies. This list is not all-inclusive; many options exist within each school. Appropriate involvement in such activities and events can enrich the lives of children with disabilities, just as they do for children without disabilities.

In providing or arranging for the provision of nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities, including meals, recess periods, field trips and the services specified above, the school must ensure that each child with a disability participates with nondisabled children in the extracurricular services and activities to the maximum extent appropriate and to the needs of the child (K.A.R. 91-40-3(b)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.117).

For example, the IEP team might consider if the child could attend an after-school activity, a club, or group meetings in which other students would participate. Another example might be a football game. If the school district is sponsoring the freshman class to go to a school football game on a bus, then the IEP team needs to provide an equal opportunity for that student to participate in that school-sponsored activity. However, if a child simply wishes to attend a football game in which there is no school-sponsored activity for the class, then that child would not necessarily require any accommodations provided through the IEP. If a child's IEP states that the child needs a sign language interpreter and if this school-sponsored event is after school or on the weekend, then the school needs to arrange for an interpreter to be available.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-3(a)(b). Ancillary FAPE requirements.

(a) Each agency shall ensure that children with disabilities have available to them the same variety of educational programs and services that are available to nondisabled children served by the agency, including art, music, industrial arts, consumer and homemaking education, and vocational education.

(b) (1) Each agency shall provide nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities in the manner necessary to afford children with disabilities an equal opportunity for participation in those services and activities, including the provision of supplementary aids and services as determined to be necessary by the child's IEP team.

(2) Nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities shall include the following:

(A) Counseling services;

(B) athletics;

(C) transportation;

(D) health services;

(E) recreational activities;

(F) special interest groups or clubs sponsored by the agency;

(G) referrals to agencies that provide assistance to individuals with disabilities; and

(H) employment of students, including both employment by the agency and assistance in making outside employment available.

(c) (1) Each agency shall make physical education services, specially designed if necessary, available to every child with a disability, unless the agency does not provide physical education to any children who are enrolled in the same grade.

3. Access to Instructional Materials

States must adopt the National Instructional Materials Accessibility Standard (NIMAS), for the purposes of providing instructional materials to blind persons, or other persons with print disabilities, in a timely manner. All public agencies, including the school, shall provide children with disabilities who need instructional materials in accessible formats, but are not included in the definition of blind, or other persons with print disabilities, or who need materials that cannot be produced from NIMAS files, receive those instructional materials in a timely manner. The school shall take reasonable steps to provide instructional materials at the same time as other children receive instructional materials (34 C.F.R. 300.172(a)(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.210). More information on how to access the National Instructional Materials Center can be found at www.kansped.org.

D. PROGRAM MODIFICATIONS AND SUPPORTS FOR SCHOOL PERSONNEL

Each IEP for a child with an exceptionality must include a statement of the program modifications, or supports for school personnel that will be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, to enable the child to participate with nonexceptional peers to the maximum extent appropriate and to enable the child to advance appropriately toward the annual goals. The modifications may address various areas including environmental and structural changes, how the child will participate in direct instruction, learning activities, collaborative work groups, large-group discussions, and other events occurring in their general education classroom. Necessary modifications for children with exceptionalities must be documented on the child's IEP. (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(4); 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(4)(i))

The IEP should also include a statement of the supports for school personnel that need to be provided for each child to enable him/her to advance appropriately toward attaining their measurable annual goals and to be involved and progress in the general education curriculum. These supports may include specialized staff development (e.g., learn sign language, learn a software program the child will use), consultation by a special teacher, or materials or modifications to the environment.

The program modification and/or supports for school personnel in the IEP must indicate the projected date for the beginning of the services or supports, including the frequency, location, and duration.

E. INCIDENTAL BENEFIT

Incidental benefit refers to the benefits one or more children with or without exceptionalities receives from the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services that are provided to a child with an exceptionality in inclusive settings in a general education classroom. This situation may also apply to other education-related settings, such as community-based job sites, the school bus, and other settings. Schools may deliver special education services in the general education classroom with nonexceptional children even if one or more children without exceptionalities benefit from such services.

Federal Law:

20 USC 1413(a)(4)(A) 300.208(a)(1)

(4) ...Funds provided to the local education agency under this part may be used for the following activities:

- (A) Services and aids that also benefit nondisabled children for the costs of special education and related services and supplementary aids and services provided in a regular class or other education-related setting to a child with a disability in accordance with the individualized education program of the child, even if one or more nondisabled children benefit from such services.

F. EXTENDED SCHOOL YEAR/DAY SERVICES

When the IEP is developed initially or reviewed annually, the IEP team shall consider the need for extended school year (ESY) services for children with disabilities. Children identified as gifted are not eligible for extended school year services. ESY services are different than general education summer school. ESY may or may not be provided in conjunction with the general education summer school. ESY may be needed by a child even though summer school is not offered for general education children. In fact, for certain children, services over winter or spring breaks may be needed. The reason for these services is to ensure the provision of FAPE so that the child can make progress toward the goals specified on the child's IEP and to prevent regression, which would impede such progress.

However, if a child with a disability is attending a summer school program for general education purposes, (not extended school year) the school shall consider what reasonable accommodations/modifications may be necessary for the child to have an equal opportunity to participate in the general education environment and curriculum. The necessary supports can be provided through a 504 plan.

The need for ESY is to be decided individually. Therefore, a district shall not have a policy that no ESY services will be provided, that they are only available to a certain group or age of children, or that services are only provided for a set amount of time or a specified number of days.

The IEP Team may use the following methods to decide if a student with a disability (not students who are gifted) needs ESY services. Note that each is not mutually exclusive and consideration of all of these factors may be warranted. These reasons are not all-inclusive.

1. Is a significant regression anticipated if ESY services are not provided? The school is not required to provide ESY services merely because the student will benefit from them. Instead, the IEP Team should determine if the regression experienced by the student would significantly affect his/her maintenance of skills and behaviors.

2. What is the nature and severity of the disability(ies)? Each student's needs must be considered individually.
3. Are instructional areas or related services needed that are crucial in moving toward self-sufficiency and independence? Particular consideration for ESY services should be given to students who need instruction in such self-help skills as dressing or eating, or who need continued structure to develop behavioral control.
4. The IEP Team could use the following information and data in determining the need for ESY services:
  - a. Teacher assessment of the student's success with various instructional interventions;
  - b. Criterion-referenced and standardized test data;
  - c. Health and health-related factors, including physical and social/emotional functioning;
  - d. Past educational history, as appropriate, including any ESY services;
  - e. Direct observation of the student's classroom performance;
  - f. IEP goals and objectives;
  - g. Student performance (pretest and posttest data);
  - h. Behavior checklists; and
  - i. Parent interviews and student interviews where appropriate.

It is important for the IEP Team to address the educational needs of each student and how they might be addressed, such as:

- Scope of the special education instructional services including the duration and content of the program;
- Which current goals and objectives will be addressed to maintain present skills and behaviors;
- Implementer(s) of the ESY services;
- What related services will be made available; and
- If contracting with other schools or private agencies is needed.

See Appendix A, Figure 5-2, for a sample documentation of ESY. State regulations set forth the following stipulations for ESY:

State Regulations:
K.A.R. 91-40-1(x). Extended school year services

Extended school year services means special education and related services that are provided to a child with a disability under the following conditions:

- (1) Beyond the school term provided to nondisabled children;
- (2) in accordance with the child's IEP; and
- (3) at no cost to the parents of the child.

K.A.R. 91-40-3(e). Ancillary FAPE requirements

- (1) Each agency shall ensure that extended school year services are available as necessary to provide FAPE to a child with a disability.
- (2) An agency shall be required to provide extended school year services only if a child's IEP team determines, on an individual basis, that the services are necessary for the provision of FAPE to the child.
- (3) An agency shall neither limit extended school year services to particular categories of disability nor unilaterally limit the type, amount, or duration of those services.

1. Extended School Day Services

In addition to services provided outside the typical school year (number of specified days), children may also need more hours per day than are typically provided. Such decisions must be made by the IEP team, based upon the decision making process described in Section F.

G. FREQUENCY, LOCATION, AND DURATION OF SERVICES

Each IEP shall indicate the projected beginning date and the anticipated frequency, location, and duration for the special education and related services, supplementary aids and services, and modifications. It is possible that beginning and ending service dates may vary throughout the year and should be indicated as such on the IEP.

For data collection purposes KSDE requires that the frequency of the services and modifications be reported as minutes/days/weeks. This would indicate how many minutes per day, how many days per week and how many weeks per school year the services would be provided. This information would be determined at the IEP team meeting when decisions are being made about what services will be provided.

Sometimes it is difficult to be precise in determining just how much service will be required throughout the year. Sometimes services are provided on an "as needed" basis, such as "reading the math test to the child". The IEP should not indicate the services are "as needed". The provider has to describe when and how the service would be provided throughout the year. For example, the IEP might say that the math teacher gives a weekly math test over work covered each week, gives a chapter test at the end of each chapter, and the student is taking the State math assessment during the year. The student will go to the resource room to have the math tests read to him/her. For reporting purposes you might estimate based on historical events or current information (use of existing data) that the total anticipated amount of time would be 1.5 hours per week over 36 weeks—or 90 minutes 1 day per week for 36 weeks.

The location of services would be the school building or other facility and the setting where the services will be provided. This should be described in the IEP so that the parents and the IEP team members will know where the child is to receive services, including the building and the extent of the child's participation with children who are nondisabled. KSDE requires the use of specific building codes and placement settings for reporting purposes. (For information on reporting frequency, location and duration of services see the "Data Dictionary" (revised annually) at www.kansped.org/.)

The amount of services to be provided must be stated in the IEP so that the level of the school's commitment of resources will be clear to parents and other IEP team members. The amount of time to be committed to each of the various services to be provided must be (1) appropriate to the specific service, and (2) stated in the IEP in a manner that is clear to all who are involved in both the development and implementation of the IEP (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46667). In addition, the IEP team addresses the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with children without disabilities in the general education curriculum and nonacademic activities.

H. HOME SCHOOLING

Public schools are not required to provide special education and related services for home-schooled children. School districts are required through Child Find to locate, identify, and evaluate all children residing in the school district, including those who are home schooled. Further, the school must make a free appropriate public education (FAPE) available to all home-schooled children if their parents choose to enroll them in the public schools.

Under the definition in State law, home schools are not elementary or secondary schools or "educational institutions." Home schools also do not fit the definition of a private school, which means "an organization which regularly offers education at the elementary or secondary level, which is exempt from federal income taxation under section 501 of the federal internal revenue code of 1954, as amended, which conforms to the civil rights act of 1964, and attendance at which satisfies any compulsory school attendance laws of this state" (K.S.A. 72-5392(c)). However, if a home-schooled child is found to be a child with an exceptionality, parents should be informed, in writing, that special education and related services are available if the child is enrolled in the public schools and that the school district "stands ready, willing, and able to provide a free appropriate public education" to the child.

If the child has been identified as a child with an exceptionality, the district must document that the parents have been informed of the child's need for services and their availability at the public school. If the school district is aware that an eligible child is not receiving needed special education and related services due to the parents' refusal to provide or accept the services identified, the school must determine if it is necessary to report the child as a child in need of care to the Kansas Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (SRS), if the child is under age 13, and to the District or County Attorney if the child is between the ages of 13-18.

I. SERVICES IN LOCAL DETENTION FACILITIES, JUVENILE JUSTICE AUTHORITY AND DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS FACILITIES

The local school district is required to provide FAPE according to an IEP that meets the requirements of federal and state laws and regulations to each student with a disability detained or incarcerated in a local juvenile or adult detention facility located within its jurisdiction. The requirements concerning placement and LRE may be modified in accordance with the student's detention or incarceration.

If a student is in a juvenile correctional facility, the Commissioner of the Juvenile Justice Authority (JJA) is obligated to make FAPE available according to an IEP that meets the requirements of federal and state laws and regulations for each student with a disability. Requirements concerning parental rights, placement, and LRE may be modified in accordance with state and federal laws and the student's conditions of detention or incarceration.

If a student is in a State adult correctional facility, the Secretary of the Department of Corrections (DOC) is obligated to make FAPE available according to an IEP that meets the requirements of federal and state laws and regulations for each student with a disability. However, the correctional institution or facility may modify the student's IEP or placement if it can demonstrate a bona fide security or compelling penological interest that cannot otherwise be accommodated. The following laws and regulations are not required for students in adult correctional facilities:

- participation of students in state or local assessments; and
- transition planning and services with respect to any disabled student whose eligibility for special education services will end, because of the student's age, before the student is eligible to be released from the correctional facility based on consideration of the student's sentence and eligibility for early release.

A student previously identified as gifted only is not entitled to receive special education services while incarcerated. A student age 18 or over, who is incarcerated in an adult correctional institution or facility and was not identified as a student with a disability and did not have an IEP in their educational placement prior to incarceration, is not entitled to FAPE (K.A.R. 91-40-5).

K.A.R. 91-40-5 FAPE for detained or incarcerated children with disabilities.

(a) Local detention facilities.

- (1) Subject to the provisions of K.S.A. 72-1046 and amendments thereto, each board shall provide FAPE to each child with a disability detained or incarcerated in a local juvenile or adult detention facility located within its jurisdiction.
- (2) The requirements in this article concerning placement and LRE may be modified in accordance with the child's detention or incarceration.

(b) State juvenile correctional facilities.

- (1) The commissioner of the juvenile justice authority shall make provision for FAPE for each child with a disability detained or incarcerated in any state juvenile correctional facility or other facility at the direction of the commissioner.
- (2) The requirements in this article concerning parental rights, placement, and LRE may be modified in accordance with state and federal laws and the child's conditions of detention or incarceration.

(c) State adult correctional facilities.

- (1) Except as otherwise provided in this regulation, provision for FAPE shall be made by the secretary of corrections for each child with a disability incarcerated in any state correctional institution or facility.
- (2) In making provision for FAPE under paragraph (1) of this subsection, compliance with state or federal laws or regulations relating to the following shall not be required of the secretary of corrections:
  - (A) Participation of children with disabilities in state or local assessments; and
  - (B) transition planning and services with respect to any disabled child whose eligibility for special education services will end, because of the child's age, before the child is eligible to be released from the secretary's custody based on consideration of the child's sentence and eligibility for early release.
- (3) Provision of FAPE to any person incarcerated in a state correctional institution or facility shall not be required by the secretary of corrections if the person meets both of the following criteria:
  - (A) The incarcerated person is at least 18 years of age.
  - (B) The incarcerated person, in the person's last educational placement before incarceration, was not identified as a child with a disability.
- (4)(A) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (4)(B) of this subsection, the IEP team of a child with a disability incarcerated in a state adult correctional institution or facility may modify the child's IEP or placement if personnel of the correctional institution or facility demonstrate a bona fide security or compelling penological interest that cannot otherwise be accommodated.
  - (B) An IEP team of a child with a disability incarcerated in a state adult correctional institution or facility shall not modify the following requirements:
    - (i) That any decision regarding modifications to, and reviews and revisions of, any IEP shall be made by the IEP team; and
    - (ii) that, except as otherwise expressly provided in paragraph (c)(2), each IEP shall have the content specified in K.S.A. 72-987 and amendments thereto.

J. FACILITIES

The State Regulations, K.A.R. 91-40-52(d), include specific provisions regarding the facilities provided for the education of children with exceptionalities. This regulation requires each agency to provide facilities for children with exceptionalities that are comparable to those for nonexceptional children. This could be within the same school building as children without exceptionalities or in a separate facility solely for children with exceptionalities. All facilities must be age-appropriate environments and be appropriate for the instructional program being provided.

91-40-52. School district eligibility for funding; facilities.

- (d) Each agency shall ensure that all of the following requirements concerning facilities are met:
- (1) All facilities for exceptional children shall be comparable to those for non-exceptional children within the same school building.
  - (2) If an agency operates a facility solely for exceptional children, the facility and the services and activities provided in the facility shall be comparable to those provided to nonexceptional children.
  - (3) All facilities for exceptional children shall be age-appropriate environments, and each environment shall be appropriate for the instructional program being provided.

K. QUALIFIED SPECIAL EDUCATION PERSONNEL

Each school district must ensure that all personnel necessary to carry out the requirements of IDEA are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained. All special education personnel, as appropriate, shall have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with exceptionalities. This includes special education teachers, related services personnel and paraeducators. School districts must take steps to actively recruit, hire, train, and retain qualified personnel to provide special education and related services to children with disabilities. (34 C.F.R. 300.156; 34 C.F.R. 300.207).

Related services personnel must meet the qualifications of the Kansas licensing agency that apply to the professional discipline in which those personnel are providing special education or related services. Paraeducators must meet the requirements outlined in the "Special Education Reimbursement Guide: State Categorical and Transportation Aid," which is on the KSDE home page at www.kansped.org, under Resources/ Technical Assistance Guidance Documents.

Each teacher employed by a public school as a special education teacher must meet the requirements as highly qualified (34 C.F.R. 300.156(c)). This requirement does not apply to teachers hired by private elementary schools and secondary schools including private school teachers hired or contracted by the school to provide equitable services to parentally-placed private school children with exceptionalities (34 C.F.R. 300.18(h)).

Special education teachers who provide "direct instruction" in one or more core content areas will need to meet the highly qualified teacher (HQT) requirements for the content area(s). The content requirements pertain only to individuals who are coded as "special education" teachers in the Licensed Personnel Report and who provide direct instruction in a core content area(s) (English Language Arts, Science, Social Studies or Math) for one or more children. Direct instruction is defined as being either the teacher of record or the teacher responsible for introducing new content material and providing initial instruction.

Special education teachers who provide "direct instruction" in English Language Arts, Science, Social Studies or Math have three different options available to use when demonstrating subject matter competency:

1. appropriate content endorsement on teaching license has been designated "HQ", or
2. pass the appropriate content test (PRAXIS II), or
3. document eleven or more checks on the Kansas HOUSSE document for special education teachers.

For additional information, and to obtain a copy of the Kansas HOUSSE document, go to the Teacher Education and Licensure website at www.ksde.org.

Federal Regulations

§ 300.18 Highly qualified special education teachers.

(a) Requirements for special education teachers teaching core academic subjects. For any public elementary or secondary school special education teacher teaching core academic subjects, the term highly qualified has the meaning given the term in section 9101 of the ESEA and 34 CFR 200.56, except that the requirements for highly qualified also—

(1) Include the requirements described in paragraph (b) of this section; and

(2) Include the option for teachers to meet the requirements of section 9101 of the ESEA by meeting the requirements of paragraphs (c) and (d) of this section.

(b) Requirements for special education teachers in general.

(1) When used with respect to any public elementary school or secondary school special education teacher teaching in a State, highly qualified requires that—

(i) The teacher has obtained full State certification as a special education teacher (including certification obtained through alternative routes to certification), or passed the State special education teacher licensing examination, and holds a license to teach in the State as a special education teacher, except that when used with respect to any teacher teaching in a public charter school, highly qualified means that the teacher meets the certification or licensing requirements, if any, set forth in the State's public charter school law;

(ii) The teacher has not had special education certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency temporary, or provisional basis; and

(iii) The teacher holds at least a bachelor's degree.

(2) A teacher will be considered to meet the standard in paragraph (b)(1)(i) of this section if that teacher is participating in an alternative route to special education certification program under which—

(i) The teacher—(A) Receives high-quality professional development that is sustained, intensive, and classroom-focused in order to have a positive and lasting impact on classroom instruction, before and while teaching; (B) Participates in a program of intensive supervision that consists of structured guidance and regular ongoing support for teachers or a teacher mentoring program; (C) Assumes functions as a teacher only for a specified period of time not to exceed three years; and (D) Demonstrates satisfactory progress toward full certification as prescribed by the State; and (ii) The State ensures, through its certification and licensure process, that the provisions in paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section are met.

(3) Any public elementary school or secondary school special education teacher teaching in a State, who is not teaching a core academic subject, is highly qualified if the teacher meets the requirements in paragraph (b)(1) or the requirements in (b)(1)(iii) and (b)(2) of this section.

(c) Requirements for special education teachers teaching to alternate achievement standards.

When used with respect to a special education teacher who teaches core academic subjects exclusively to children who are assessed against alternate achievement standards established under 34 CFR 200.1(d), highly qualified means the teacher, whether new or not new to the profession, may either—

(1) Meet the applicable requirements of section 9101 of the ESEA and 34 CFR 200.56 for any elementary, middle, or secondary school teacher who is new or not new to the profession; or

(2) Meet the requirements of paragraph (B) or (C) of section 9101(23) of the ESEA as applied to an elementary school teacher, or, in the case of instruction above the elementary level, meet the requirements of paragraph (B) or (C) of section 9101(23) of the ESEA as applied to an elementary school teacher and have subject matter knowledge appropriate to the level of instruction being provided and needed to effectively teach to those standards, as determined by the State.

(d) Requirements for special education teachers teaching multiple subjects.

Subject to paragraph (e) of this section, when used with respect to a special education teacher who teaches two or more core academic subjects exclusively to children with disabilities, highly qualified means that the teacher may either—

(1) Meet the applicable requirements of section 9101 of the ESEA and 34 CFR 200.56(b) or (c);

(2) In the case of a teacher who is not new to the profession, demonstrate competence in all the core academic subjects in which the teacher teaches in the same manner as is required for an elementary, middle, or secondary school teacher who is not new to the profession under 34 CFR 200.56(c) which may include a single, high objective uniform State standard of evaluation (HOUSSE) covering multiple subjects; or

(3) In the case of a new special education teacher who teaches multiple subjects and who is highly qualified in mathematics, language arts, or science, demonstrate, not later than two years after the date of employment, competence in the other core academic subjects in which the teacher teaches in the same manner as is required for an elementary, middle, or secondary school teacher under 34 CFR 200.56(c), which may include a single HOUSSE covering multiple subjects.

(e) Separate HOUSSE standards for special education teachers.

Provided that any adaptations of the State's HOUSSE would not establish a lower standard for the content knowledge requirements for special education teachers and meets all the requirements for a HOUSSE for regular education teachers—

(1) A State may develop a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers; and

(2) The standards described in paragraph (e)(1) of this section may include single HOUSSE evaluations that cover multiple subjects.

(f) Rule of construction.

Notwithstanding any other individual right of action that a parent or student may maintain under this part, nothing in this part shall be construed to create a right of action on behalf of an individual student or class of students for the failure of a particular SEA or LEA employee to be highly qualified, or to prevent a parent from filing a complaint under §§ 300.151 through 300.153 about staff qualifications with the SEA as provided for under this part.

(g) Applicability of definition to ESEA; and clarification of new special education teacher.

(1) A teacher who is highly qualified under this section is considered highly qualified for purposes of the ESEA.

(2) For purposes of § 300.18(d)(3), a fully certified regular education teacher who subsequently becomes fully certified or licensed as a special education teacher is a new special education teacher when first hired as a special education teacher.

(h) Private school teachers not covered.

The requirements in this section do not apply to teachers hired by private elementary schools and secondary schools including private school teachers hired or contracted by LEAs to provide equitable services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities under § 300.138.

§ 300.146 Responsibility of SEA.

Each SEA must ensure that a child with a disability who is placed in or referred to a private school or facility by a public agency—
(a) Is provided special education and related services—

- (1) In conformance with an IEP that meets the requirements of §§ 300.320 through 300.325; and
- (2) At no cost to the parents;

(b) Is provided an education that meets the standards that apply to education provided by the SEA and LEAs including the requirements of this part, except for § 300.18 and § 300.156(c); and

(c) Has all of the rights of a child with a disability who is served by a public agency.

§ 300.156 Personnel qualifications.

(a) General.

The SEA must establish and maintain qualifications to ensure that personnel necessary to carry out the purposes of this part are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained, including that those personnel have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities.

(b) Related services personnel and paraprofessionals.

The qualifications under paragraph (a) of this section must include qualifications for related services personnel and paraprofessionals that—

- (1) Are consistent with any State-approved or State-recognized certification, licensing, registration, or other comparable requirements that apply to the professional discipline in which those personnel are providing special education or related services; and

(2) Ensure that related services personnel who deliver services in their discipline or profession—

- (i) Meet the requirements of paragraph (b)(1) of this section; and
- (ii) Have not had certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis; and
- (iii) Allow paraprofessionals and assistants who are appropriately trained and supervised, in accordance with State law, regulation, or written policy, in meeting the requirements of this part to be used to assist in the provision of special education and related services under this part to children with disabilities.

(c) Qualifications for special education teachers.

The qualifications described in paragraph (a) of this section must ensure that each person employed as a public school special education teacher in the State who teaches in an elementary school, middle school, or secondary school is highly qualified as a special education teacher by the deadline established in section 1119(a)(2) of the ESEA.

(d) Policy. In implementing this section, a State must adopt a policy that includes a requirement that LEAs in the State take measurable steps to recruit, hire, train, and retain highly qualified personnel to provide special education and related services under this part to children with disabilities.

(e) Rule of construction.

Notwithstanding any other individual right of action that a parent or student may maintain under this part, nothing in this part shall be construed to create a right of action on behalf of an individual student or a class of students for the failure of a particular SEA or LEA employee to be highly qualified, or to prevent a parent from filing a complaint about staff qualifications with the SEA as provided for under this part.

§ 300.207 Personnel development.

The LEA must ensure that all personnel necessary to carry out Part B of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared, subject to the requirements of § 300.156 (related to personnel qualifications) and section 2122 of the ESEA.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT SPECIAL EDUCATION AND RELATED SERVICES

1. Once a child is determined eligible as gifted, what services is s/he entitled to?

As with all children with exceptionalities, services for children who are gifted are determined on an individual basis by the IEP team. The IEP team will determine the special education, related services and supplementary aids and services necessary for the child to advance appropriately toward meeting his/her annual goals. There may be a need to expand, enrich, or accelerate the curriculum. Children may test out of certain required classes or prerequisites in order to enroll in more advanced subjects if so specified in their IEP. Advanced placement or honors classes may be appropriate. In many areas, high school students are allowed to enroll in classes at a nearby community college or university. If a gifted student chooses to receive college credit for such classes the student is responsible for tuition costs (K.A.R. 91-40-3(h)). Students identified as gifted only are not entitled to extended school year or services in a correctional facility

2. Depending on the individual situation, could a school be required to provide a computer or other assistive technology for a child with a disability in order to allow that child to remain in the least restrictive environment?

Yes. Children with disabilities are entitled to special education and related services, as well as supplementary aids and services. As such, if an assistive technology evaluation demonstrated that the child needs an assistive technology device (e.g., software, computer, writing aids, prone stander, etc.) to remain in the least restrictive environment, the IEP team would list that service on the IEP, and the school must provide it or ensure that it is provided.

3. May an IEP include only related services?

Yes, if the child is identified as a child with a disability and needs OT, PT, or Interpreter services to participate in the least restrictive environment. An IEP may include only related services if the related services consist of specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of a child with a disability.

4. If the school has a school-wide Title I program (part of Improving America's School Act (NCLB)), and the whole school is teaching reading during first hour, is it permissible for the special education teacher to teach reading during first hour?

Yes. This is permitted under IDEA-04, either in the special education class (no incidental benefit), or in the general education setting (with incidental benefit). In either situation, the IEP goals of children with disabilities must be addressed appropriately. A proportionate share of Federal flow-through funds may be allocated toward schoolwide programs, and should be indicated in the LEA application for Special Education Federal funds. According to Federal regulation 34 C.F.R. 300.206(b)(2), this proportionate share of funds may be used without regard for the requirements for expenditures for children with disabilities in the Act. This would include special education and related services and supplementary aids and services provided in a general education class or other education-related setting to a child with a disability, in accordance with the IEP of the child, even if one or more children without disabilities benefit from these services.

5. May special education paraeducators provide services to children outside of the classroom? For example, may they assist during recess, lunch, and other school activities?

Yes. The IEP team is to determine and address needs of the child during nonacademic and extracurricular activities, as appropriate. If paraeducator services are needed at recess, lunch, club activities, and other times identified by the IEP team, they would be included on the child's IEP.

6. May special education paraeducators be assigned to general school duties such as parking lot, recess, lunch, etc.?

The answer to this question would depend on individual job requirements and district policy and expectations. This is also a funding issue. It may mean that the paraeducator working with general education for a period of time may not be reimbursed from special education funds for that period. The district may have State special education funds prorated. Categorical aid reimbursement is based on 100% of the paraeducator's time being devoted to support activities that are directly related to implementing the child's IEP.

7. May special education paraeducators be asked by their supervising teacher or other professional to assist with bulletin boards, duplication of materials, clerical duties, and the like?

Again, the answer would depend on the activities related to the child's IEP, individual job requirements, and district policy and expectations. There may be funding considerations as in Question #6.

8. May the IEP of a child include transition services at a job located outside of district boundaries?

Yes, however, this would only apply if the child was placed in that job through a specific provision in the IEP. The district would need to provide support for the child on-the-job if it was indicated on the child's IEP. The district could contract with another entity for the support needed by the child. The district would not be required to provide job support outside of its district if the job placement was made by individuals other than school personnel and it was not a part of the IEP team decision.

9. The law says that each child with an exceptionality must have an IEP in effect at the beginning of each school year. Does that mean that the child must begin to receive the special education and related services specified in the IEP on the very first day of school?

It depends on the frequency, location, and duration of services documented in the child's IEP. The IEP team must make an individual determination regarding when special education and related services will begin and end for each child. Some services may not be provided to the child until the 2nd quarter or second semester of the school year. Some children with exceptionalities may benefit from having the first week of school in general education in order to acclimate to new general education teachers, classrooms, expectations, and routines. Other children, such as children with autism, may need services beginning the very first day of school. Decisions regarding when special education and related services will begin for a new school year are not to be based on convenience of school staff, but the individual needs of each child. If the IEP is silent regarding provision of services during the first and last weeks of a school year, parents often presume that services will be provided during that time. The IEP is to indicate when services begin and the frequency, location and duration of the services. This is to be clear to the parents and the providers.

10. Do special education and related services missed due to events beyond the control of the school (e.g., school closure due to weather, mandatory emergency drills, or absence of the child) have to be made up at a later date?

As discussed within this chapter, the IEP team must consider the services needed for the child to address IEP goals, access the general curriculum, and participate in extracurricular and nonacademic activities with children without disabilities. In this context, the team should also discuss what is to be done when services are missed. For example, if a child with learning disabilities needs help taking tests, that service isn't needed if the school is closed. However, if regular, ongoing physical therapy is needed to maintain mobility, the team must find a way for the service to be provided if school is closed.

Another consideration for the IEP team is whether a number of missed services would constitute a denial of FAPE. Again, the team would create a plan for those circumstances.

11. What level of involvement is allowed of the special education teacher in the general education classroom?

A certified special education teacher cannot be the teacher of a general education classroom and be considered a special education teacher for full categorical aid reimbursement just because there are children with exceptionalities in the classroom. In addition, children without exceptionalities are not to be removed from the general education classroom to receive services from a special education teacher unless the nature and severity of the exceptionality is such that education in the general education class cannot be achieved satisfactorily with supplementary aids and services. Special education teachers and related services personnel may co-teach with a general education teacher, or be in the general education classroom working with children with exceptionalities. The other children in the general education classroom could receive incidental benefit from the instruction of the special education teacher when provided to exceptional children.

12. What if the IEP team determines that a student is eligible for ESY services and the parent indicates the student will not be participating due to other summer commitments?

If ESY is in the child's IEP and the parent refuses the services, then the parent may be in violation of the State's special education compulsory attendance statute (K.S.A. 72-977). The school district should consider whether a truancy report is in order, or if another IEP meeting should be held. School districts should anticipate far enough in advance so that parents can be informed and plan activities around these service times.

CHAPTER 6

EDUCATIONAL PLACEMENT AND LEAST RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT

INTRODUCTION

Educational placement refers to the educational environment for the provision of special education and related services rather than a specific place, such as a specific classroom or school (K.A.R. 91-40-1(t)). The IEP team makes the decision about the child's educational placement. For children with disabilities, the special education and related services must be provided in the environment that is least restrictive, with the general education classroom as the initial consideration. The teams' decision must be based on the child's needs, goals to be achieved, and the least restrictive environment for services to be provided. Least restrictive environment (LRE) means the child is provided special education and related services with peers who are not disabled, to the maximum extent appropriate (K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)). The IEP Team must consider how the child with a disability can be educated with peers without disabilities to the maximum extent appropriate, and how he/she will participate with children without disabilities in other activities such as extracurricular and nonacademic activities.

Placement decisions for all children with disabilities, including preschool children with disabilities, must be determined annually, be based on the child's IEP, and be as close as possible to the child's home. Additionally, each child with a disability is to be educated in the school the child would attend if the child did not have a disability, unless the child's IEP requires some other arrangement (K.A.R. 91-40-21(e)(f)). LRE does not require that every child with a disability be placed in the general education classroom regardless of the child's individual abilities and needs. The law recognizes that full time general education classroom placement may not be appropriate for every child with a disability. School districts are to make available a range of placement options, known as a continuum of alternative placements, to meet the unique educational needs of children with disabilities. This requirement for a continuum reinforces the importance of the individualized inquiry, not a "one size fits all" approach, in determining what placement is the LRE for each child with a disability. The continuum of alternative educational placements include instruction in general education classes, special classes, special schools, home instruction, and instruction in hospitals and institutions (K.A.R. 91-40-21(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.115(b)(1)).

This chapter includes Federal and State requirements for determining educational placement and the following topics are discussed:

- A. Parent Participation
- B. Determining Educational Placement
- C. Least Restrictive Environment
- D. Early Childhood Least Restrictive Environment
- E. Recent Case Law

A. PARENT PARTICIPATION

Parents have the right to be part of the decision-making team for determining their child's educational placement and have input into that decision. In Kansas, placement decisions are made by the IEP team. The parent must be provided notice of the IEP team meeting at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting to ensure that parents have the opportunity to participate. When conducting IEP meetings addressing placement, if neither parent can participate, the parents and the school may agree to use alternative means of participation in the meeting, such as video conferences and conference calls. Schools must ensure that parents understand and are able to participate in any discussions concerning the educational placement of their child. The school must provide an interpreter if parents have a hearing impairment, or whose native language is other than English (K.A.R. 91-40-21(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.501(b)(c)(1)(2)(3)).

The team may hold the IEP meeting to determine placement without the parents if the school has made multiple attempts to contact them and the parent did not respond, or the school is unable to convince them to participate. The school district is required to have documentation of the attempts made to contact the parents to provide them notice of the meeting and to secure their participation. The record must have at least two of the following methods: telephone calls, visits to parents' home, copies of correspondence sent to the parents, and detailed records of other methods. (K.A.R. 91-40-17(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.501(c)(4)).

Once the IEP team has made the decision on the initial placement of a child with an exceptionality, the parents must be provided Prior Written Notice about the placement decision and requested to provide consent before initial provision of special education and related services in the proposed placement. Within the notice requirements, parents must be informed about the placement options that were considered and the reasons why those options were rejected. Additionally, for subsequent changes in the IEP, parents must provide consent for any substantial change in placement (more than 25% of the child's school day) or material change in services (increase or decrease of 25% or more of the duration or frequency of a special education service, a related service, or a supplementary aid or a service) (K.S.A. 72-988(b)(6)). (Chapter 1 of this Handbook includes additional information about Prior Written Notice requirements.)

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-962

- (aa) "Substantial change in placement" means the movement of an exceptional child, for more than 25% of the child's school day, from a less restrictive environment to a more restrictive environment or from a more restrictive environment to a less restrictive environment.
- (bb) "Material change in services" means an increase or decrease of 25% or more of the duration or frequency of a special education service, a related service, or a supplementary aid or a service specified on the IEP of an exceptional child."

K.S.A. 72-988(b)(6)

(6) consent, or refuse to consent, to the evaluation, reevaluation or the initial placement of their child and to any substantial change in placement of, or a material change in services for, their child, unless a change in placement of their child is ordered pursuant to the provisions of section 17, and amendments thereto, or the agency can demonstrate that it has taken reasonable measures to obtain parental consent to a change in placement or services, and the child's parent has failed to respond. If the parent fails to respond to the request for parental consent to a substantial change in placement or a material change in services, the agency must maintain detailed records of written and verbal contacts with the parent and the response, if any, received from the parent;

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-21(d)

(d)(1) Each agency shall give notice to the parent of any meeting to discuss the educational placement of the child. The notice shall meet the requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-17.

- (2) If a parent cannot participate in person at a meeting relating to the educational placement of the child, the agency shall offer to use other methods to allow the parent to participate, including conference calls and video conferencing.
- (3) An agency may conduct a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child with a disability without participation of the child's parent if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate.
- (4) If an agency conducts a meeting to determine the appropriate educational placement of a child without the participation of the child's parent, the agency shall have a record, as prescribed in K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2), of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent.
- (5) An agency shall take action to ensure that parents understand and are able to participate in, any discussions concerning the educational placement of their children, including arranging for an interpreter for parents who are deaf or whose native language is other than English.

K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)

- (1) An agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parents or to convince the parents that they should participate.
- (2) If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parents to provide them notice of the meeting and to secure the parents' participation. The record shall include at least two of the following:
- (A) Detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls;
  - (B) detailed records of visits made to the parents' home or homes, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit;
  - (C) copies of correspondence sent to the parents and any responses received; and
  - (D) detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parents and the results of that attempt.

B. DETERMINING EDUCATIONAL PLACEMENT

In determining the educational placement of a child with an exceptionality (including gifted and preschool children with disabilities), each school district must ensure that the placement decision is made by a group of persons, including the parents, and other persons knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options. IEP Teams, including the parents, must make each child's educational placement decisions on an individual basis for each child with exceptionalities (K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)). Placement decisions must be based on the child's IEP and must be determined at least annually. For children with disabilities, the placement should as close to the child's home as possible, and be in the school the student would normally attend, unless other factors determine this is not possible (K.A.R. 91-40-21(e)).

The team must consider each child's unique educational needs and circumstances, rather than the child's category of disability. Placement decisions should allow the child with a disability to be educated with nondisabled children to the maximum extent appropriate. The first placement option considered for each child with a disability is the general education classroom in the school that the child would attend if not disabled, with appropriate supplementary aids and services to facilitate this placement. Therefore, before a child with a disability can be placed outside of the general education environment, the full range of supplementary aids and services that could be provided to facilitate the child's placement in the general education classroom setting must be considered. Following that consideration, if a determination is made that the child with a disability cannot be educated satisfactorily in the general educational environment, even with the provision of appropriate supplementary aids and services, that child could be placed in a setting other than the general education classroom (K.S.A. 72-976(a)). (See Section D of this chapter for how these requirements apply to preschool-aged children.)

Federal and State regulations also preclude removing a child from a general education class just because the general curriculum must be modified to meet his or her individual needs (34 C.F.R. 300.116(e)). If an entirely different curriculum is needed for the child's alternate goals, it needs to be determined if appropriate special education supports (for both the child and teacher) can be appropriately provided within the context of the general education classroom. It is not the intent to have the general education teacher devote all or most of his/her time to the child with a disability or to modify the general education curriculum beyond recognition. A child's removal from the general education environment cannot be based solely on the category of disability, configuration of the delivery system, availability of special education and related services, availability of space or administrative convenience. (See Appendix A, Figure 6-1, LRE Decision Tree and Figure 6-2, LRE Decision Tree Support.)

1. Continuum of Placement Options

Schools are required to ensure that a continuum of placement options is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities for special education and related services in the least restrictive environment (LRE). Although, each school is not required to establish or maintain all options on the continuum, it must make an option available if the individual needs of a child require a specific placement option. The continuum includes various educational settings, such as general education class, special classes, special schools, home instruction, instruction in hospitals, and instruction in institutions (K.A.R. 91-40-21(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.115(b)(1)). This continuum of various types of classrooms and settings in which special education is provided is intended to ensure that a child with a disability is served in a setting where the child can be educated successfully with other children without disabilities to the maximum extent appropriate.

In addition, although each school building is not required to be able to provide all the special education and related services for all types and severities of disabilities at the school, the school district has an obligation to make available a full continuum of alternative placement options that maximize opportunities for its children with disabilities to be educated with nondisabled peers to the extent appropriate. In all cases, placement decisions must be individually determined on the basis of the child's abilities and needs and on each child's IEP; and not solely on factors such as category of disability, severity of disability, availability of special education and related services, configuration of the service delivery system, availability of space, or administrative convenience. (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46588.) To help schools make the full continuum available, K.S.A. 72-967 identifies and authorizes the options that districts have for meeting the LRE requirement by providing services within its schools; in the home, hospital, or other facilities; through a contract with another district; through a cooperative agreement with one or more districts; or through a contract with a private nonprofit or a public or private institution. Facilities where special education services are provided must be equivalent to those where general education classes are held.

2. Harmful Effects

The IEP Team must also consider possible harmful effects in determining the educational placement, both in terms of the general education setting and a more restrictive setting. The language in 34 C.F.R. 300.116(d) and (K.A.R. 91-40-21(g)) mentions "possible harmful effects on the child or on the quality of services that he or she needs." For example, the team must consider the distance that the child would need to be transported to another school, if not in the home school (e.g., length of bus ride, importance of neighborhood friendships, and other such considerations). In addition, potential disadvantages of being removed from the general education setting must be assessed (such as, what curriculum content will the child miss when out of the classroom, etc.). Parents and other team members, including the child's general education teacher, should discuss openly the possibility of supplementary aids and services, and other supports, that would allow the child to remain in the general education setting. A part of this discussion must include what is needed for the child to be able to participate and progress in the general education curriculum.

The IEP Team must also consider other harmful effects such as those that may exist when it may be inappropriate to place a child in a general education classroom. For example, the IEP Team may consider the well-being of the other children in the general classroom (e.g., would being in the classroom impede the child's or the ability of other children to learn). Courts have generally concluded that, if a child with a disability has behavioral problems that are so disruptive in a general education classroom that the education of other children is significantly impaired, the needs of the child with a disability generally cannot be met in that environment. However, before making such a determination, schools must ensure that consideration has been given to the full range of supplementary aids and services that could be provided to the child in the general education educational environment to accommodate the unique needs of the child with a disability. If the group making the placement decision determines, that even with the provision of supplementary aids and services, the child's IEP could not be implemented satisfactorily in the general education environment, that placement would not be the LRE placement for that child at that particular time, because her or his unique educational needs could not be met in that setting.

State Statute: K.S.A. 72-976(a)

(a) Each school district shall be required, to the maximum extent appropriate, to educate children with disabilities with children who are not disabled, and to provide special classes, separate schooling or for the removal of children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature or severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily.

State Regulation: K.A.R. 91-40-1(t)

(t) "Educational placement" and "placement" mean the instructional environment in which special education services are provided.

K.A.R. 91-40-21(a)(b)(c). Educational placement. (a) Each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE.

(b) Each agency shall ensure that a continuum of alternative educational placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall meet the following criteria:

- (1) Include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools; instruction in a child's home; and instruction in hospitals and other institutions; and
- (2) make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement.

(c)(1) In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, including a preschool child with a disability, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision meets the following requirements:

- (A) The decision shall be made by a group of persons, including the child's parent or parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options.
- (B) The decision shall be made in conformity with the requirement of providing services in the LRE.

(2) In determining the educational placement of a gifted child, each agency shall ensure that the placement decision is made by a group of persons, including the child's parent or parents and other persons who are knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and appropriate placement options for gifted children.

Federal Regulation:
Sec. 300.116. Placements

In determining the educational placement of a child with a disability, including a preschool child with a disability, each public agency shall ensure that--

- (a) The placement decision--
- (1) Is made by a group of persons, including the parents, and other persons knowledgeable about the child, the meaning of the evaluation data, and the placement options; and
  - (2) Is made in conformity with the LRE provisions of this subpart, including Secs. 300.550-300.554;
  - (3) Is as close as possible to the child's home;
- (b) The child's placement--
- (1) Is determined at least annually;
  - (2) Is based on the child's IEP; and
- (c) Unless the IEP of a child with a disability requires some other arrangement, the child is educated in the school that he or she would attend if nondisabled.
- (d) In selecting the LRE, consideration is given to any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services that he or she needs; and
- (e) A child with a disability is not removed from education in age-appropriate regular classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general curriculum.

C. LEAST RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT

The process for determining the least restrictive environment (LRE) must be individualized for each child with a disability, including preschool age children, children in public schools, private schools, or other care facilities. The IEP team must ensure that children with disabilities are educated with children who do not have disabilities, to the maximum extent appropriate. Removing a child from the general education classroom must not occur unless the nature or severity of the disability is such that education in general education classes with the use of supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily (K.S.A. 72-976(a)). The IEP must include an explanation of the extent, if any, that the child will NOT participate with children without disabilities in general education classes AND in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(5)). The general education environment encompasses general education classrooms, and other settings in schools such as lunchrooms and playgrounds in which children without disabilities participate.

When determining the least restrictive environment, IEP teams must consider:

- Whether the child's IEP can be implemented in the regular educational environment with the use of supplementary aids and services (34 C.F.R. 300.114(a)(2)(ii)).
- Whether placement in the regular classroom will result in any potential harmful effect on the child or on the quality of services that he needs (34 C.F.R. 300.116(d)).
- Whether placement in the regular classroom, even with appropriate behavioral interventions, will significantly impair the learning of classmates (34 C.F.R. 300.324(a)(2)(i)).

The IEP Team must discuss what program modifications or supports for teachers and staff may need to be provided to enable the child: (1) to advance appropriately in attaining the annual goals listed on the IEP, (2) be involved in and make progress in the general curriculum and participate in extracurricular and nonacademic activities, and (3) be educated and participate with other children with and without disabilities in these activities, as appropriate (K.S.A. 72-987(c)(4)).

LRE requirements do NOT apply to children who are identified as gifted (K.A.R. 91-40-21(c)(2)). Children who are gifted must have an educational placement determined by the IEP Team, based on their individual needs and to ensure that the child receives FAPE.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-976. Requirements for education of children with disabilities in regular classes, exception; admission to state institutions.

(a) Each school district shall be required, to the maximum extent appropriate, to educate children with disabilities with children who are not disabled, and to provide special classes, separate schooling or for the removal of children with disabilities from the regular education environment only when the nature or severity of the disability of the child is such that education in regular classes with supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily.

K.S.A. 72-987(c)(4)(5)

(4) a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided for the child:

(A) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals;

(B) to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum in accordance with provision (1) and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and

(C) to be educated and participate with other exceptional and nonexceptional children in the activities described in this paragraph;

(5) an explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with nonexceptional children in the regular class and in the activities described in provision (4);

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(II)

(II) "Least restrictive environment" and "LRE" mean the educational placement in which, to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are not disabled, with this placement meeting the requirements of K.S.A. 72-976, and amendments thereto, and the following criteria:

(1) Determined at least annually;

(2) based upon the student's individualized education program; and

(3) provided as close as possible to the child's home.

K.A.R. 91-40-21. Educational placement

(f) Unless the IEP of a child with a disability requires some other arrangement, the agency shall ensure that the child is educated in the school that the child would attend if nondisabled.

1. Supplementary Aids and Services

IEP Teams must consider the supplementary aids and services, and other supports, that may be needed for the child to be in the general education class, other education-related settings, and in extracurricular and nonacademic settings to enable children with disabilities to be educated with nondisabled children to the maximum extent appropriate (K.A.R. 91-40-1(ttt); 34 C.F.R. 300.42). Examples of supplementary aids and services may include paraeducator or interpreter services, assistive technology devices and services, resource room and itinerant services to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement (K.A.R. 91-40-21(b)(2)). (See also Chapter 5, Special Education and Related Services.)

In the case of a child who is deaf or hard-of-hearing, a sign language interpreter may be needed to enable the child to participate in the general education classroom. The sign language interpreter would sign what the teacher and children say, and if necessary voice what the child who is deaf or hard-of-hearing signs. The teacher and children may need training about communicating through an interpreter, how best to communicate with the child, and the interpreter's role on the educational team. Assistive technology needs of the child may also require training and ongoing technical assistance for teachers and other staff members (K.A.R. 91-40-1(d); 34 C.F.R. 300.9). For example, if a communication device is used, school personnel and parents may need training to be able to use the system initially and thereafter when the device is updated with new vocabulary. The IEP team should identify these needs for teacher training under supports for school personnel.

2. Nonacademic and Extracurricular Services and Activities

In order to receive FAPE, children are to be included in more than just classroom activities. The school must ensure that each child with a disability has the supplementary aids and services determined by the child's IEP team to be appropriate and necessary for the child to participate in school sponsored nonacademic and extracurricular settings. Children with disabilities are to participate with children without disabilities in nonacademic settings and extracurricular activities, to the maximum extent appropriate. Again, these services or activities must be considered based on the child's individual needs. This requirement also applies to children who are being educated solely with others who have disabilities, including those in public schools, private institutions or other care facilities (K.A.R. 91-40-3(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.107; 34 C.F.R. 300.117).

The IEP Team is responsible for considering how the child with a disability can participate with children who do not have a disability in a wide range of possible nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities to the maximum extent appropriate. Parents and others close to the child should consider what would benefit the child and promote the achievement of IEP goals and objectives as well as the provision of access to other children without disabilities. It is difficult to make general statements about such activities as senior trips, activities sponsored by the Student Council (technically not school-sponsored), and other such nonacademic activities. Again, such decisions would need to be made individually by the IEP Team. (See Chapter 5, Special Education and Related Services.)

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(d)

- (d) "Assistive technology service" means any service that directly assists a child with a disability in the selection, acquisition, or use of an assistive technology device. This term shall include the following:
- (1) Evaluating the needs of a child with a disability, including a functional evaluation of the child in the child's customary environment;
  - (2) purchasing, leasing, or otherwise providing for the acquisition of assistive technology devices by children with disabilities;
  - (3) selecting, designing, fitting, customizing, adapting, applying, maintaining, repairing, or replacing assistive technology devices;
  - (4) coordinating and using other therapies, interventions, or services with assistive technology devices, including those associated with existing education and rehabilitation plans and programs;
  - (5) providing training or technical assistance for a child with a disability or, if appropriate, that child's family; and
  - (6) providing training or technical assistance for professionals including individuals providing education and rehabilitation services, employers, or other individuals who provide services to, employ, or are otherwise substantially involved in the major life functions of a child.

K.A.R. 91-40-1(ttt)

(ttt) "Supplementary aids and services" means aids, services, and other supports that are provided in regular education classes, ~~or~~ other education-related settings, and extracurricular and nonacademic settings to enable children with disabilities to be educated with nondisabled children to the maximum extent appropriate.

K.A.R. 91-40-3(b)(d)

- (b) (1) Each agency shall provide nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities in the manner necessary to afford children with disabilities an equal opportunity for participation in those services and activities, including the provision of supplementary aids and services as determined to be necessary by the child's IEP team.
- (2) Nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities shall include the following:
- (A) Counseling services;
  - (B) athletics;
  - (C) transportation;
  - (D) health services;
  - (E) recreational activities;
  - (F) special interest groups or clubs sponsored by the agency;
  - (G) referrals to agencies that provide assistance to individuals with disabilities; and
  - (H) employment of students, including both employment by the agency and assistance in making outside employment available.
- (d) (1) Each agency shall ensure that assistive technology devices or assistive technology services, or both, are made available to a child with a disability if required as a part of the child's special education or related services, or the child's supplementary aids and services.
- (2) Each agency, on a case-by-case basis, shall allow the use of school-purchased assistive technology devices in a child's home or in other settings if the child's IEP team determines that the child needs access to those devices at home or in other settings in order to receive FAPE.

Federal Regulations:

Sec. 300.117. Nonacademic settings

In providing or arranging for the provision of nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities, including meals, recess periods, and the services and activities set forth in § 300.107, each public agency must ensure that each child with a disability participates with nondisabled children in the extracurricular services and activities to the maximum extent appropriate to the needs of that child. The public agency must ensure that each child with a disability has the supplementary aids and services determined by the child's IEP Team to be appropriate and necessary for the child to participate in nonacademic settings.

3. Policies of the Kansas State Board of Education

The Kansas State School Board issued a policy on Least Restrictive Environment on May 20, 1994 (Appendix A, Figure 6-2). All provisions of this policy remain in effect, because they are consistent with current laws and regulations.

In addition, the Kansas State Board of Education has developed a policy regarding the Kansas State Schools for the Deaf and Blind (See Appendix A, Figure 6-3, KSBE Policy). According to this policy, when a student is to be placed at one of the State schools, the local district AND the parents are jointly responsible for applying for admission to the school. However, the steps preceding the admissions application require the local district and parents to:

1. Complete the initial evaluation or reevaluation;
2. Conduct an IEP meeting;

3. Determine the educational placement;
4. If a representative from the State school was not in attendance, hold a placement meeting with the representative(s) from the State school to finalize the IEP;
5. Obtain informed parent consent for services and placement; and
6. Initiate the admissions application with the parents.

In developing the IEP, the team must also plan opportunities for access to educational programs in local school districts near the State school, either part- or full-time. Under K.A.R. 91-40-4, Conditions for Admission, the following requirements are included:

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-4. FAPE for exceptional children housed and maintained in certain state institutions.

- (a) Subject to K.S.A. 72-1046 and amendments thereto, each state agency shall provide FAPE to exceptional children housed and maintained at any facility operated by the agency. All educational programs shall comply with the requirements of state special education laws and regulations.
- (b) State schools.
- (1) The procedures for placing Kansas residents into the Kansas state school for the blind and the Kansas state school for the deaf shall meet the following requirements:
- (A) Admission procedures shall be initiated by the child's home school district and by the child's parent or parents.
- (B) Placement of any child in a state school shall be made only after the local school district and the child's parent or parents have considered less restrictive placement options.
- (C) Placement shall be based on a child's IEP, which shall indicate a need for educational services provided at the state school.
- (D) Any agency may refer a child to a state school for a portion or all of the child's evaluation. In such a case, a representative or representatives from the agency shall be included in any meeting at which the child's eligibility for services or placement is determined.
- (E) If the initial evaluation and staffing are conducted by any local school district and if one of the state schools is proposed as a placement for the child, a representative or representatives from the state school shall be included in the meeting at which placement for the child is determined.
- (2) Personnel from the child's home school district, as well as personnel from the state school and the child's parent or parents, shall be afforded an opportunity to participate in any IEP meeting for the child. Placement of the child in the home school district shall be considered at each annual IEP meeting.
- (3) Each state school shall attempt to make arrangements so that each child enrolled in the state school has access to the educational programs in the local school districts near the location of the school, on either a part-time or full-time basis.
- (4) If a state school determines that its program is not appropriate for a student and it can no longer maintain the student in its program, the state school shall give the district of residence of the student at least 15-day notice of this determination.

4. Children in Other Educational Placements

Schools are responsible to ensure that LRE requirements are being applied to children who have been placed by the public school in private institutions or other care facilities. As IEP teams make educational placement decisions about children for whom they do not have an appropriate program at the public school, they must consider all LRE requirements carefully. (See Chapter 14 in this Handbook, Children in Private Schools.)

The LRE requirement may be modified for students who are incarcerated in local detention facilities, a state juvenile correctional facility or an adult correctional institution (K.A.R. 91-40-5).

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-5(b)(2)

(b) State juvenile correctional facilities.

- (1) The commissioner of the juvenile justice authority shall make provision for FAPE for each child with a disability detained or incarcerated in any state juvenile correctional facility or other facility at the direction of the commissioner.
- (2) The requirements in this article concerning parental rights, placement, and LRE may be modified in accordance with state and federal laws and the child's conditions of detention or incarceration.

K.A.R. 91-40-21(a)(b)

Educational placement.

- (a) Each agency shall ensure that the children with disabilities served by the agency are educated in the LRE.
- (b) Each agency shall ensure that a continuum of alternative educational placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities. These alternative educational placements shall meet the following criteria:
- (1) Include instruction in regular classes, special classes, and special schools; instruction in a child's home; and instruction in hospitals and other institutions; and
  - (2) make provision for supplementary services, including resource room and itinerant services, to be provided in conjunction with regular class placement.

K.A.R. 91-40-22

Agency placement in private schools or facilities. (a) If an agency places a child with a disability in a private school or facility as a means of providing FAPE to the child, the agency shall remain responsible for ensuring that the child is provided the special education and related services specified in the child's IEP and is afforded all the rights granted by the law.

(b)(1) Before an agency places a child with a disability in a private school or facility, the agency shall initiate and conduct a meeting to develop an IEP for the child.

(2) The agency shall ensure that a representative of the private school or facility attends the meeting. If a representative cannot attend, the agency shall use other methods to ensure participation by the private school or facility, including individual or conference telephone calls.

(c)(1) After a child with a disability enters a private school or facility, the agency responsible for providing FAPE to the child may allow any meetings to review and revise the child's IEP to be initiated and conducted by the private school or facility.

(2) If the private school or facility initiates and conducts these meetings, the agency shall ensure that the parent and an agency representative are involved in any decision about the child's IEP and shall agree to any proposed changes in the IEP before those changes are implemented.

5. Support for Staff

Schools must ensure that all teachers and administrators know their responsibilities in ensuring LRE, and that they are provided with the needed technical assistance and training. Considerations might include: providing written information to staff; offering ongoing in-service training, professional development, results-based staff development; individual technical assistance; or mentoring by experienced teachers and administrators.

Schools must consider the supports that all general and special education teachers and related services personnel need to maintain a child in the LRE. Such support might include training for the general education teacher, paraeducators and other personnel. Special educators or related services personnel might provide this training regarding supports that are required. Other examples would be the supports that staff need to implement a child's behavioral intervention plan, such as training regarding modeling, providing positive feedback, and offering peer interactions as appropriate. (34 C.F.R. 300.119 and 300.320(a)(4))

Federal Regulations:

Sec. 300.119. Technical assistance and training activities

Each SEA shall carry out activities to ensure that teachers and administrators in all public agencies--

- (a) Are fully informed about their responsibilities for implementing Sec. 300.550; and
- (b) Are provided with technical assistance and training necessary to assist them in this effort.

Sec. 300.320(a)(4)

- (4) A statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided for the child--
  - (i) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals;
  - (ii) To be involved and progress in the general curriculum in accordance with paragraph (a)(1) of this section and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and
  - (iii) To be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children in the activities described in this section;

D. EARLY CHILDHOOD LEAST RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT

For preschool children ages 3-5 with disabilities, placement and LRE requirements are the same as for school-aged children (K.A.R. 91-40-21(b)(c)). This means that preschool children with disabilities are to have a continuum of placement options available and have the right to be educated with their peers without disabilities to the maximum extent appropriate. As with school-aged children, the needs of preschoolers are to be considered individually, and the individual needs of the child would determine the most appropriate setting for services to be provided. Most preschoolers benefit from placement in a preschool program with typically developing peers.

School districts that do not operate programs for preschool children without disabilities are not required to initiate general education programs solely to satisfy the LRE requirements. However, many school districts provide early childhood services to children without disabilities in programs such as 4-year-old at-risk preschools, child care centers, Parents as Teachers, and various other early childhood settings all constituting general education environments. School districts that do not operate early childhood programs for children without disabilities may seek alternative means to provide inclusive options for young children through collaborative relationships with private preschool programs or other community-based settings. If a preschool child with a disability is already attending a general education preschool program, the IEP team should consider whether special education and related services can be provided in that setting with the use of supplementary aids and services, or supports for school personnel (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46589).

Various educational placement options are possible, both within the community and at the school. The key question for the IEP Team to consider is where this child would be if s/he did not have a disability. The full continuum of placement options at K.A.R. 91-40-21(b), including integrated placement options with typically developing peers, must be available to preschool children with disabilities. Examples include Head Start, community-based preschools (may be in churches, whether or not religiously affiliated), child care centers or family child care homes, mothers'-day-out programs, Title I programs, at-risk 4-year-old preschools, migrant or bilingual programs, Even Start, play groups, and other such early childhood programs. For children who are age 5 by August 31, kindergarten would be the least restrictive environment, to the extent appropriate. Note that children with IEPs cannot be counted for general fund reimbursement in the 4-year-old at-risk preschool program, but they may participate in the program.

The regulations allow school districts to choose an appropriate option to meet the LRE requirements. Schools are encouraged to explore and use community resources to provide comprehensive services. Paying for the placement of preschool children with disabilities in a private preschool with children without disabilities is one, but not the only, option available to school districts to meet the LRE requirements. However, if a school district determines that placement in a private preschool program is necessary as a means of providing special education and related services to a child with a disability, the program must be at no cost to the parent of the child.

E. RECENT CASE LAW

For the first time, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit, adopted a legal standard (the "Daniel R.R." test) for determining least restrictive environment in L.B. and J.B v. Nebo Sch. Dist., 379 F3d 966, 41 IDELR 206 (10th Cir. 2004). Subsequently, in T.W. v. United Sch. Dist. No 259, Wichita, Kansas, 136 Fed. Appx. 122, 43 IDELR 187, (10th Cir. 2005), the 10th Circuit affirmed that the "Daniel R.R." test would continue to be the legal standard for determining the least restrictive environment for children with disabilities in the 10th Circuit—which includes Kansas. The Daniel R.R. test has two parts:

Part 1: In determining whether a particular placement is the least restrictive environment for a particular child, the court first determines whether education in a regular education classroom, with the use of supplemental aids and services, can be achieved satisfactorily. If the court determines that a child can be satisfactorily educated in a regular education classroom with the use of supplemental aids and services, then the regular education classroom is the least restrictive environment for that child and there is no further analysis.

Part 2: However, if the court determines that the child cannot be satisfactorily educated in the regular education classroom, even with the use of supplemental aids and services, the court then proceeds to the second part of the test by determining whether the school district has mainstreamed the child to the maximum extent appropriate. In other words, the court looks to see if the placement selected by the IEP team enables the child to have contact with nondisabled students to the maximum extent appropriate. If the placement selected by the IEP team does mainstream the child to the maximum extent appropriate, then the placement is the least restrictive environment for that child.

In applying these two parts of the Daniel R.R. test to a particular placement, the court considers the following non-exhaustive factors:

1. Steps the school district has taken to accommodate the child in the regular education classroom, including the consideration of a continuum of placement and support services;
2. Comparison of the academic benefits the child will receive in the regular classroom with those he/she will receive in the special education classroom;

3. The child's overall educational experience in regular education, including nonacademic benefits; and
4. The effect on the regular classroom of the disabled child's presence in that classroom.

The 10th Circuit has instructed that this list of considerations is not exhaustive, and that other considerations may also be appropriate in a particular case. For example, some courts have considered the cost of mainstreaming a child in the analysis. The 10th Circuit did not consider the cost of mainstreaming the child in either of the cases in which it used the Daniel R.R. standard because costs were not presented as an issue in either case. However, the 10th Circuit did not rule out consideration of the costs of a particular placement if it was presented as an issue in a case regarding least restrictive environment.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT EDUCATIONAL PLACEMENT AND LEAST RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT

1. Does the school have to provide aids and services to assist the child to be in a general education classroom? What if the school says that providing those aids and services is too expensive?

The district must provide supplementary aids and services to accommodate the special educational needs of children with disabilities in the general curriculum in the least restrictive environment. In a Federal appellate court decision, Roncker v. Walter, 700 F. 2d 1058 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 864 (1983), the court made the following statements about LRE:

The Roncker Court also noted that:

“Cost is a proper factor to consider since excessive spending on one child with a disability deprives other students with disabilities. Cost is no defense, however, if the school district has failed to use its funds to provide a proper continuum of placement options for students with disabilities. The provision of such placement options benefits all children with disabilities.”

In other words, the law, regulations, and court decisions all presume in favor of maximum appropriate contact with children without disabilities.

2. What if the school says the child cannot be included because s/he cannot benefit academically from instruction in the general education class?

The school should not make such an assertion. The Federal District Court in Sacramento City Unified School District v. Holland (1992), said the law requires educating a child with disabilities in a general education classroom if the child can receive a satisfactory education there, even if it is not the best academic setting for the child. The court looked at whether the child's IEP goals and objectives could be met in the classroom by adapting the curriculum, or by providing supplementary aids and services. The school district in Holland argued that a general education classroom would not be appropriate for a student if that would require significant changes to the general curriculum for the child. However, the court rejected the school's view. It said that students with disabilities may require and be entitled to substantial curriculum changes to be sure they benefit from being in the general education class. The court stated that “modification of the curriculum for a student with a disability, even dramatic modification, has no significance in and of itself. The IDEA, in its provision for the IEP process, contemplates that the academic curriculum may be modified to accommodate the individual needs of students with disabilities.”

“[IDEA] does not require states to offer the same educational experience to a student with disabilities as is generally provided for students without disabilities.... To the contrary, states must address the unique needs of a child with disabilities, recognizing that the student may benefit differently from education in the regular classroom than other students.... In short, the fact that a child with disabilities will learn differently from his or her education within the regular classroom does not justify exclusion from that environment” Oberti v. Board of Education of the Borough of Clementon School District (3rd Cir. 1993).

If an entirely different curriculum is needed for the child's alternate goals, it needs to be determined if appropriate special education supports (for both the child and teacher) can be most appropriately provided within the context of the general education classroom. It is not the intent to have the general education teacher devote all or most of his/her time to the child with a disability nor to modify the general education curriculum beyond recognition.

3. What are supplementary aids and services that would help the child in the general education classroom?

The law is very broad and includes: "aids, services, and other supports that are provided in regular education classes or other education-related settings to enable children with disabilities to be educated with nondisabled children to the maximum extent appropriate..." Supplementary aids and services might include paraeducator services, assistive technology devices and services, and other accommodations, as appropriate.

4. If the child is not placed in a general education classroom, does the district have any other LRE responsibilities?

Even if the child is not placed in a general education classroom, the school district must still find ways for the child to be with children without disabilities in noneducational and extracurricular activities as much as is appropriate to the child's needs. Where the district suggests a placement other than a general education classroom, the Prior Written Notice form for informed written consent must list other placement ideas that were considered and the reasons they were rejected. Also, according to 34 C.F.R. 300.320(a)(5), the IEP Team must document in the IEP the extent to which the child will not participate with nondisabled children in the regular class and in other school activities. The IEP Team may also address the potential for moving to a less restrictive environment in the future. The LRE for each child must be considered annually to determine whether the current placement is appropriate.

5. Is there anything that the district may not consider in deciding LRE?

The district may not make placement decisions based only on such things as the category or severity of the child's disability, convenience of staff, the choices for placement options currently available, the availability of educational or related services, space availability, availability of staff, bus routes, or administrative convenience.

6. If a child is not placed in the general education classroom, can s/he participate in other school activities or services?

Yes. The law is clear that children with disabilities have the right to participate in nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities with children who do not have disabilities to the maximum extent appropriate to their needs (34 C.F.R. 300.117). Also, school districts must provide these activities in a way that gives children with disabilities an equal opportunity to participate (34 C.F.R. 300.107). Such services and activities include:

- lunch
- recess
- athletics
- health services
- employment opportunities
- counseling services
- transportation
- recreational activities
- special interest groups or clubs

7. May the nature or severity of a child's disability be used to justify a segregated educational setting?

All children with disabilities have the right to an education in the least restrictive environment based on their individual educational needs, not the "label" that describes their disability. Schools must ensure that to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in public or private institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are nondisabled.

Special classes, separate schooling, or other removal of children with disabilities from the general education environment occurs only if the nature or severity of the disability is such that education in general education classes with the use of supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily (34 C.F.R. 300.114(2)).

8. What responsibility does the general education staff have in serving children in the least restrictive environment?

Both general and special educators are required to be members of IEP Teams who make decisions about services needed by eligible children and where they should be provided. This is a mutual responsibility for general and special education staff. The IEP Team is required to consider the supplementary aids and services needed for a child to be successfully educated in the general education classroom. Some examples are:

- Aids to assist the child
- Adaptive equipment
- Co-teaching staff
- Assistive technology
- Class/environmental accommodations
- Adapted/modified/enriched curriculum
- Classroom tests modified or accommodated
- Training or supports for the teacher.

These strategies can be used in any class, including classes like physical education, art, music, and vocational education. Teacher-made tests can include any accommodations the child needs; with regard to State and district-wide assessments, however, IEP teams should be careful to avoid specifying accommodations that would invalidate the tests.

The IEP Team must include at least one of the child's general education teachers, if the child is or may be participating in general education classes. The general education teacher must, as much as is appropriate, help develop the IEP. This includes helping to decide things like appropriate positive behavioral interventions and strategies, supplementary aids and services, program modifications, and support for school staff in providing the supplementary aids and services and program modifications. After the initial IEP has been developed, the general education teacher must also help review and revise the IEP. The IEP Team must also have a school person who is knowledgeable about the general curriculum and what resources are available in the district. The school is responsible for providing the services on the IEP. That means both special and general education teachers must assist in determining the services and ensuring that appropriate services are provided.

9. What if the school district has a policy that related services are available only at a segregated location?

A policy of this nature is against the law. The school cannot legally have a policy that predetermines placement for related services. The district must provide the needed related services to meet individual needs of the child in the least restrictive environment. Decisions about location of services is determined by the IEP Team.

The Office of Special Education Programs says:

"The determination of appropriate program placement, related services needed, and curriculum options to be offered is made by the IEP team based upon the unique needs of the child with a disability rather than the label describing the disabling condition or the availability of programs."

10. Does LRE apply to preschool?

Yes, LRE requirements apply to children who are ages 3 through 5. Some settings for LRE for preschool to serve children where they would be if not disabled include:

- Public school preschools
- Head Start
- Play groups
- Community preschool
- Child care
- Kindergarten for 5 year old

11. Does LRE apply to children who are gifted, or just to those with disabilities?

According to K.A.R. 91-40-21, LRE and the continuum of services do not apply to children who are gifted. However, individual placement decisions must be made according to the unique needs of each child and to ensure that the child receives FAPE.

12. If services are needed during an extracurricular activity, do we need a goal that addresses it?

No. The IEP Team is required to address how children will participate with others who do not have disabilities during nonacademic and extracurricular activities. Services may be listed to meet those needs, without having a specific goal.

13. Is parent consent required when moving a child from placement in a neighboring district back to the home district?

No, if the placement in both districts is the same place on the continuum and the child has the same opportunity to participate with peers without disabilities. If the IEP specifies a certain classroom in a certain school, then consent would be required. Placement is not determined by the name of the building, rather it is the place on the continuum of service environments. For example, if the IEP reads "services will be provided in Mrs. Jones' 4th grade class at Eisenhower Elementary School," then parent permission would be needed to move the student from Mrs. Jones's classroom. However, if the IEP reads "services will be provided in a regular 4th grade classroom," then parent permission would not be needed, if everything else stayed the same. Placement is not the same as location.

14. Is moving a child from a regular bus to a special education bus a change of placement?

Yes, since a special education bus is a more restrictive setting than a regular education bus (34 C.F.R. 300.107). Nonacademic services, lists transportation as a service (34 C.F.R. 300.117). Nonacademic settings, ties transportation to ensuring a child with disabilities participates with children without disabilities. If the change is made, the IEP Team would need to provide Prior Written Notice, and if it is a material change in services the district would need to obtain consent from the parent.

REEVALUATION

INTRODUCTION

An evaluation that is conducted at any time after an initial evaluation and initial determination of eligibility as a child with an exceptionality, is considered a reevaluation. Schools must ensure that a reevaluation of each child with an exceptionality is conducted if conditions warrant a reevaluation, or if the child's parents or teacher requests a reevaluation, but at least once every three years. Reevaluations may not occur more than once a year, unless the parent and the school agree otherwise. New requirements also allow the parent and the school to agree that a three year reevaluation is not necessary (K.S.A. 72-986(h)(2)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2)).

Most components of the reevaluation process are identical to those required for initial evaluation. See Chapter 3, Initial Evaluation and Eligibility, for a complete explanation of the evaluation process. However, there may also be some differences from the initial evaluation. The specific individuals on the reevaluation team may be different than they were for the initial evaluation. The roles are the same, but the people themselves may be different. A report of the reevaluation must be written and provided to the parents. Under certain circumstances the reevaluation may be conducted without parent consent. This chapter includes a discussion of the following topics:

- A. Purpose of the Reevaluation
- B. Need for the Reevaluation
- C. Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent
- D. Members of the Reevaluation Team
- E. Conducting the Reevaluation
- F. Determining Continued Eligibility
- G. Reevaluation for A Child Identified as Developmentally Delayed

A. PURPOSE OF THE REEVALUATION

The reevaluation process is required every three years, or more often, if needed, to determine:

1. If the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality;
2. the educational needs of the child;
3. the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child;
4. whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and
5. whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

The information gathered as a result of the reevaluation provides valuable information about child progress and needs. In addition to using the information to determine whether the child continues to be eligible for special education and related services, this information should be used to review the IEP, revising it if necessary, in accordance with K.S.A. 72-986(h)-(l), as well as 34 C.F.R. 300.301 through 300.311:

Kansas Statute:
K.S.A. 72-986(h)-(l)

- (h) (1) Each agency shall ensure that a reevaluation of each exceptional child is conducted:
  - (A) If the agency determines that the educational or related services needs of the child, including academic achievement or functional performance, warrant a reevaluation; or
  - (B) if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation.
- (2) An agency shall conduct a reevaluation of a child:
  - (A) Not more frequently than once a year, unless the parent and the agency agree otherwise; and
  - (B) at least once every three years, unless the parent and the agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary.
- (i) As part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as part of any reevaluation under this section, the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, shall:
  - (1) Review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher and related services providers' observations; and
  - (2) on the basis of that review, and input from the child's parents, identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine:
    - (A) Whether the child is an exceptional child and the educational needs of the child, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the current educational needs of the child;
    - (B) the present levels of academic and related needs of the child;
    - (C) whether the child needs special education and related services; or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and
    - (D) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.
- (j) Each agency shall obtain informed parental consent prior to conducting any reevaluation of an exceptional child, except that such informed consent need not be obtained if the agency can demonstrate that it took reasonable measures to obtain such consent and the child's parent failed to respond.
- (k) If the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, determine that no additional data are needed to determine whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the child's educational needs, the agency:
  - (1) Shall notify the child's parents of:
    - (A) That determination and the reasons for it; and
    - (B) the rights of such parents to request an assessment to determine whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the child's educational needs; and
  - (2) shall not be required to conduct such an assessment unless requested by the child's parents.
- (l) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), an agency shall reevaluate a child in accordance with this section before determining that the child is no longer an exceptional child.
  - (2) A reevaluation of a child shall not be required before termination of a child's eligibility for services under this act due to graduation from secondary school with a regular diploma, or due to exceeding the age for eligibility for services under this act.

B. NEED FOR THE REEVALUATION

A reevaluation must be conducted if the school determines that the education or related services needs, including improved academic achievement and functional performance of the child, warrant a reevaluation, or, if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation. A reevaluation must be conducted before a school determines a child is no longer a child with an exceptionality. However, a reevaluation shall not occur more than once a year, unless the parent and the school agree otherwise (K.S.A. 72-986(h)(1)(2)(A); 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(1)).

If a parent requests a reevaluation, or more than one reevaluation per year, and the school disagrees that a reevaluation is needed, the school must provide Prior Written Notice to the parent that explains, among other things, why the school refuses to do the reevaluation and the parent's right to pursue the reevaluation through mediation or due process.

A reevaluation is to occur at least once every 3 years, unless the parent and the school agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary (K.S.A. 72-986(h)(2)(B); 34 C.F.R. 300.303(b)(2)). Prior to conducting a reevaluation the parent and the school shall determine whether a reevaluation is needed. They must consider the child's educational needs, which may include whether the child is participating in the general education curriculum and being assessed appropriately. The parent and the school will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of conducting a reevaluation, as well as what effect a reevaluation might have on the child's educational program (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46640, 46641). Documentation of this agreement must be maintained (See Appendix A, Figure 7-1, Reevaluation Not Needed form.).

There are circumstances when a reevaluation is not required:

1. before the termination of a child's eligibility due to graduation with a regular diploma, however, Prior Written Notice and informed consent are required for the change of placement; or
2. due to exceeding the age of eligibility for FAPE, which would be the end of the school year in which the student becomes 21 years of age. (K.S.A. 72-986(l)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300-305(e)(2))
3. when the school and parent agree that a reevaluation is not needed.

C. PRIOR WRITTEN NOTICE AND REQUEST FOR CONSENT

Whenever a school proposes to conduct a reevaluation, the school must provide Prior Written Notice to the parents of the child that describes any evaluation procedures the school proposes to conduct (K.S.A. 72-986(b); K.S.A. 72-988; 34 C.F.R. 300.304(a)). In addition, there are standard components of content the notice must also contain. The purpose of providing notice to the parents is so they understand what action the public agency is proposing (in this case, to conduct a reevaluation) and the basis used for determining the action is necessary. The Prior Written Notice must include:

1. A description of the action proposed by the agency.
2. An explanation of why the agency proposes the action.
3. A description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed action.
4. A statement that the parents have protection under the procedural safeguards and how a copy of the procedural safeguards can be obtained.
5. Sources for parents to contact to obtain assistance in understanding their procedural safeguards.
6. A description of other options considered and the reasons why those options were rejected.
7. A description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal. (K.S.A. 72-990; 34 C.F.R. 300.503(b))

Additionally, if the notice is to propose to conduct a reevaluation, the notice must describe any evaluation procedures that the school proposes to conduct (K.S.A. 72-986(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(a)(1)).

The notice must be written in language understandable to the general public and provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so. If the native language or other mode of communication of the parent is not a written language, the LEA must take steps to ensure that the notice is translated orally or by other means to the parent in his or her native language or other mode of communication, that the parent understands the content of the notice and that there is written evidence that this has been done (K.A.R. 91-40-26(a)(b)(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.503(c)).

1. Preparing the Prior Written Notice

The team must plan to administer the assessments and other evaluation measures as may be needed to produce the data required to meet the requirements of the continuation of eligibility (K.A.R. 91-40-8(e)(1); 34 CFR 300.305(c)). Every reevaluation should be approached and designed individually based on the specific concerns of the child to be evaluated. Thoughtful planning is required to insure that the team will use appropriate tools to collect the data needed, while eliminating time spent collecting information that is either unnecessary or overly time consuming for no clear purpose. It would be inappropriate to use the same battery of assessments for all children or to rely on any single tool to conduct an evaluation.

The first activity the reevaluation team is to conduct is a review of existing data. The reevaluation team needs to consider all data that is currently available including evaluations and information provided by the parents, current classroom-based, local, or State assessments, and classroom-based observations; and observations by teachers and related service providers; and the child's response to scientifically, research-based interventions, if implemented. The review of existing data, as part of the evaluation, may be conducted without a meeting and without consent from the parents (K.A.R. 91-40-8(c)(d); K.A.R. 91-40-27(e); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(b); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d)(1)).

The purpose of reviewing existing data is to identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine:

- if the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality and needs special education;
- whether the child needs special education and related services;
- the educational needs of the child;
- the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child; and
- whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable goals set out in the IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. (K.S.A. 72-986(i)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(a)(2))

a. Requirements if No Additional Data is Needed

If the team has determined that no additional data is needed to determine whether the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality, and to determine the child's educational needs, the school must notify the parents

- i. of that determination and the reasons for it; and
- ii. the right of the parents to request an assessment to determine whether the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality, and to determine the educational needs of the child (K.A.R. 91-40-8(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(d)).

The school district is not required to conduct the assessment described in (ii) above unless requested to do so by the child's parents. In addition, if the parents request an assessment of their child, the school district may refuse to do so, but it must provide the parents with Prior Written Notice of the refusal to conduct the assessment and the reasons for the refusal. The parents may request mediation or due process if they want the assessment conducted. (See Appendix A, Figure 3-3, No Additional Data Needed form, and www.kansped.org.)

b. Requirements if Additional Data Are Needed

If the team has determined that additional data are needed, the team should plan who will collect it and plan to insure all data will be collected within the evaluation timeline. The procedures to be used to collect the data should be described on the Prior Written Notice for the reevaluation and provided to the parents for their consent.

2. Request for Consent

The school must obtain informed consent from the parent of the child before conducting any reevaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(c)). In determining that informed consent is obtained, the following must be insured (K.A.R. 91-40-1(l); 34 C.F.R. 300.9):

- a. The parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is being sought, in his or her native language, or other mode of communication.
- b. The parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which his or her consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records (if any) that will be released and to whom.
- c. The parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time.
- d. If a parent revokes consent, that revocation is not retroactive (i.e., it does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked).

3. Failure to Respond or Refusal to Consent

The school must make reasonable attempts to obtain consent from the parents to conduct the reevaluation. Reasonable attempts are defined as at least 2 contacts by 2 different methods (phone calls, letters, visits, email, etc.) and such attempts should be documented, including detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted and the results, copies of written correspondence sent to the parents and their response if any, and visits made to the parents home or place of employment, and the response, if any, from the parents (K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.322(d)(1)).

If the school can demonstrate that it has made reasonable efforts (i.e. minimum 2 contacts by 2 different methods) and parents have failed to respond, informed parental consent need NOT be obtained for the reevaluation.

If the parent refuses consent for the reevaluation the school may, but is not required to, pursue the reevaluation of the child by utilizing the procedural safeguards, including mediation. The school does not violate its obligation for child find or to conduct a reevaluation of the child if it declines to pursue the reevaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-27(f)(1)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(c)(1)).

If a parent of a child who is home schooled or voluntarily placed in a private school by the parents does not provide consent for the reevaluation, or the parent fails to respond, the school may not use mediation or request a due process hearing (K.A.R. 91-40-27(f)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d)(4)).

During reevaluation, like initial evaluation, the school is required to inform parents of their right to an independent educational evaluation, according to 34 C.F.R. 300.502. Chapter 3 includes a full discussion of independent educational evaluations.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-986

(b) An agency shall provide notice to the parents of a child that describes any evaluation procedures such agency proposes to conduct. In conducting the evaluation, the agency shall:

- (1) Use a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child and the content of the child's individualized education program, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress, in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities;
- (2) not use any single measure or assessment as the sole criterion for determining whether a child is an exceptional child or determining an appropriate educational program for the child;
- (3) use technically sound instruments that may assess the relative contribution of cognitive and behavioral factors, in addition to physical or developmental factors; and
- (4) in determining whether a child has a specific learning disability, not be required to take into consideration whether the child has a severe discrepancy between achievement and intellectual ability, and may use a process that determines if the child responds to scientific, research-based intervention as part of the child's evaluation.

(h) (1) Each agency shall ensure that a reevaluation of each exceptional child is conducted:

- (A) If the agency determines that the educational or related services needs of the child, including academic achievement or functional performance, warrant a reevaluation; or
- (B) if the child's parent or teacher requests a reevaluation.

(2) An agency shall conduct a reevaluation of a child:

- (A) Not more frequently than once a year, unless the parent and the agency agree otherwise; and
- (B) at least once every three years, unless the parent and the agency agree that a reevaluation is unnecessary.

(i) As part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as part of any reevaluation under this section, the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, shall:

- (1) Review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher and related services providers' observations; and
- (2) on the basis of that review, and input from the child's parents, identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine: (A) Whether the child is an exceptional child and the educational needs of the child, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the current educational needs of the child; (B) the present levels of academic and related needs of the child; (C) whether the child needs special education and related services; or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and (D) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

(i) As part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as part of any reevaluation under this section, the IEP team and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, shall:

- (1) Review existing evaluation data on the child, including evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child, current classroom-based assessments and observations, and teacher and related services providers'

observations; and

(2) on the basis of that review, and input from the child's parents, identify what additional data, if any, are needed to determine: (A) Whether the child is an exceptional child and the educational needs of the child, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to be an exceptional child and the current educational needs of the child; (B) the present levels of academic and related needs of the child; (C) whether the child needs special education and related services; or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and (D) whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum.

(l) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), an agency shall reevaluate a child in accordance with this section before determining that the child is no longer an exceptional child.

(2) A reevaluation of a child shall not be required before termination of a child's eligibility for services under this act due to graduation from secondary school with a regular diploma, or due to exceeding the age for eligibility for services under this act.

72-988. Parental rights. (a) The rights of parents of exceptional children shall include, but not be limited to, the rights specified in this section.

(b) The parents of exceptional children shall have the right to:

(2) written prior notice in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990, and amendments thereto, whenever an agency:

(A) Proposes to initiate or change; or

(B) refuses to initiate or change, the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child;

72-990. Notice of parental rights; contents. The notice required by subsection (b)(2) of K.S.A. 72-988, and amendments thereto, shall include:

(a) A description of the action proposed or refused by the agency;

(b) an explanation of why the agency proposes or refuses to take the action;

(c) a description of other options that the agency or IEP team considered and the reasons those options were rejected;

(d) a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as a basis for the proposed or refused action;

(e) a description of any other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal;

(f) a statement that the parents have protection under the procedural safeguards of this act and, if the notice is not an initial referral for evaluation, the means by which a copy of the procedural safeguards can be obtained; and

(g) sources for parents to contact to obtain assistance in understanding the provisions of the federal law and this act.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)

(l) "Consent" means all of the following:

(1) A parent has been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought, in the parent's native language or other mode of communication.

(2) A parent understands and agrees in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records, if any, that will be released and to whom.

(3) A parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time, but if the parent revokes consent, that the revocation is not retroactive and does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked.

K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2)

(e)(1) An agency may conduct an IEP team meeting without parental participation if the agency, despite repeated attempts, has been unable to contact the parent or to convince the parent to participate.

(2) If an agency conducts an IEP team meeting without parental participation, the agency shall have a record of the attempts that the agency made to contact the parent to provide notice of the meeting and to secure the parent's participation. The record shall include at least two of the following:

(A) Detailed records of telephone calls made or attempted, including the date, time, and person making the calls and the results of the calls;

(B) detailed records of visits made to the parent's home or homes, including the date, time, and person making the visit and the results of the visit;

(C) copies of correspondence sent to the parent and any responses received; and

(D) detailed records of any other method attempted to contact the parent and the results of that attempt.

K.A.R. 91-40-26(a)(b)(c)

(a) In providing any notice to the parents of an exceptional child in accordance with K.S.A. 72-990 and amendments thereto, regarding action proposed or refused by an agency, an IEP team meeting shall ensure that the notice includes the following descriptions:

(1) a description of other options the agency considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; and

(2) a description of other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal.

(b) The notice shall be written in a language understandable to the general public and is provided in the native language of the parent or other mode of communication used by the parent, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so.

(c) If the native language or other mode of communication of a parent is not a written language, the agency shall take steps to ensure all of the following:

(1) The notice is translated orally or by other means to the parent in the parent's native language or other mode of communication.

(2) The parent understands the content of the notice.

(3) There is written evidence that the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection have been met.

K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(1), (f), (g) Add New

- (a) Except as otherwise provided in this regulation, an agency shall obtain written parental consent before taking any of the following actions:
- (1) Conducting an initial evaluation or any reevaluation of an exceptional child;
  - (2) initially providing special education and related services to an exceptional child; or
  - (3) making a material change in services to, or a substantial change in the placement of, an exceptional child, unless the change is made under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-33 through 91-40-38, or is based upon the child's graduation from high school or exceeding the age of eligibility for special education services.
- (e) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent before taking either of the following actions:
- (1) Reviewing existing data as part of an evaluation, reevaluation, or functional behavioral assessment; or
  - (2) administering a test or other evaluation that is administered to all children, unless before administration of that test or evaluation, consent is required of the parents of all children.
- (f) (1) If the parent of an exceptional child who is enrolled or is seeking to enroll in a public school does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or any reevaluation, or for a proposed material change in services or a substantial change in the placement of the parent's child, an agency may, but is not required to, pursue the evaluation or proposed change by initiating due process or mediation procedures.
- (2) If the parent of an exceptional child who is being home schooled or has been placed in a private school by the parent does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or a reevaluation, or fails to respond to a request to provide consent, an agency may not pursue the evaluation or reevaluation by initiating mediation or due process procedures.
  - (3) An agency shall not be in violation of its obligations for identification, evaluation or reevaluation if the agency declines to pursue an evaluation or reevaluation, because a parent has failed to provide consent for the proposed action.
  - (4) Each agency shall document its attempts to obtain parental consent for action proposed under this regulation.
- (g) An agency shall not be required to obtain parental consent for a reevaluation or a proposed change in services or placement of the child if the agency has made attempts, as described in K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2), to obtain consent but the parents have failed to respond.
- (h) An agency shall not use a parent's refusal to consent to an activity or service to deny the parent or child other activities or services offered by the agency.

D. MEMBERS OF THE REEVALUATION TEAM

The membership of the team that conducts the reevaluation and determines continued eligibility is the same as the IEP Team with the addition of other qualified professionals if a child is suspected of having a specific learning disability, as appropriate. The additional professionals that would participate are based on the identified concerns to be addressed in the reevaluation process. The actual team members on each reevaluation team may differ; however, there are specific members and skills that must be represented on the team. The make up of this team would include:

- The parents of the child.
- Not less than one regular education teacher of the child (if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment).
  - If the child does not have a regular teacher, a regular classroom teacher qualified to teach a child of his or her age; or if the child is less than school age, an individual qualified to teach a child of his or her age;
- Not less than one special education teacher of the child, or where appropriate, not less than one special education service provider of the child.
- A representative of the local education agency who:
  - Is qualified to provide, or supervise the provision of, specially designed instruction to meet the unique needs of child with disabilities,
  - Is knowledgeable about the general education curriculum, and
  - Is knowledgeable about the availability of resources of the public agency;
- An individual who can interpret the instructional implications of reevaluation results.
- At least one person qualified to conduct individual diagnostic examinations of children.
- At the discretion of the parent or agency, other individuals who have knowledge or special expertise regarding the child, including related services personnel as appropriate. (K.S.A. 72-962(u); K.A.R. 91-40-11(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.321; 34 C.F.R. 300.308)

E. CONDUCTING THE REEVALUATION

The reevaluation must include a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child continues to be an exceptional child, the educational needs of the child, and the content of the child's IEP, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress, in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(1)). In addition, the procedures must also lead to the determination of the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance of the child. The public agency must administer such assessments and other evaluation measures as may be needed to produce the data to determine:

1. if the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality;
2. the educational needs of the child;
3. the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child;
4. whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and
5. whether any additions or modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable goals set out in the IEP and to participate, as appropriate, in the general education curriculum. (K.S.A. 72-986(i)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(a)(2))

As stated previously, the data collected is critical not only for the purpose of determining whether a child continues to be eligible for special education services, but also to assist in the development of present levels of academic achievement and functional performance. Regulations clearly state that the reevaluation must result in determining the content of the child's IEP (if still eligible) including information related to enabling the child to be involved in and progress in the general curriculum (or for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities) (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.304(b)(ii)). However, the reevaluation should also assist in the development of an instructional plan for the child if the child is not found to be eligible.

Every reevaluation should be approached and designed individually based on the specific concerns of the child being evaluated. Thoughtful planning is required to insure that the team will use appropriate tools to collect the data needed, while eliminating time spent collecting information that is unnecessary or for no clear purpose. It would be inappropriate to use the same battery of assessments for all children or to rely on any single tool to conduct a reevaluation.

1. Procedures for Conducting the Reevaluation

The school shall ensure that a reevaluation meets all of the same requirements for an initial evaluation as described in Section E, of Chapter 3, in this Handbook. The reevaluation team members must utilize a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental, and academic information about the child, including information from the parents, and information related to enabling the child to be involved in and progress in the general curriculum (or for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities). The tools and strategies must yield relevant information that directly assists in determining the educational needs of the child.

Collecting relevant functional, developmental and academic information related to enabling the child to be involved in, and progress in, the general curriculum (or for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities) requires that data be collected not only about the child, but about the curriculum, instruction, and environment as well. Every evaluation should be approached and designed individually based on the specific concerns for the child and the selection of assessment tools based on the information needed to answer the eligibility questions. It would be inappropriate to use the exact same battery of assessments for all children or to rely on any single tool to conduct an evaluation. (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(c); K.A.R. 91-40-9)

Data should be collected from the five sources referred to in Kansas as GRIOT. GRIOT represents five sources of data that teams need to collect and use as appropriate. The following is a discussion of each of the five sources of data:

G – General Education Curriculum Progress: During the reevaluation, the team should thoroughly examine the child's progress in the general education curriculum. The team needs to understand how the child is progressing in general education curriculum across settings with the available supports. To do this they must understand the outcomes of the general education curriculum and how the skills represented in those outcomes relate to the needs of each child. Are the skills needed for this child's progress different than the skills that general education children need? Is the instruction required for the child to learn those skills different? The general education curriculum outcomes and the supports available through general education are unique to each school. Gaining an understanding of what support is available and the level of support needed by the child is one of the most important parts of the reevaluation.

- R – Record Review: The evaluation team should also include as part of the reevaluation a review of records. These records would include such things as information provided by the parents, current classroom-based assessments, State assessments, information from previous services providers, screenings, previous evaluations, reports from other agencies, portfolios, discipline records, cumulative file, and other records.
- I – Interview: It is important to understand the perceptions of significant adults in the child's life and of the child himself. Parents, teachers, and the child can all typically provide insight into areas of strengths and needs. Interviews can also provide information about significant historical events in the child's life as well as about his performance in the classroom and other settings.
- O – Observation: A district must ensure the child is observed in the child's learning environment (including the regular education classroom setting) to document the child's academic performance and behavior in the areas of difficulty (K.A.R. 91-40-11(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.310). In the case of a child of less than school age or out of school, a group member must observe the child in an environment appropriate for a child of that age. If the child is already in an educational setting the observation should be done in that setting opposed to bringing them into a different setting just for observation. These observations could include structured observations, rating scales, ecological instruments (e.g., EBASS, TIES-II), behavioral interventions, functional analysis of behavior and instruction, anecdotal, and other observations (conducted by parents, teachers, related services personnel, and others). The purpose of the observation is to help the evaluation team understand the extent to which the child's skills are impacting their ability to participate and progress in a variety of settings. Observations allow you to see first hand how a child is functioning in naturally occurring settings. Observation data can also allow you to compare the child's behavior to that of peers in the same setting. Observation data helps us to understand not only the child's current functional performance but also the level of independence demonstrated which can help determine necessary supports.
- T – Test: A wide range of tests or assessments may be useful in determining an individual child's skills, abilities, interests, and aptitudes. Typically, a test is regarded as an individual measure of a specific skill or ability, while assessment is regarded as broader way of collecting information that may include tests and other approaches to data collection. Standardized norm-referenced tests are helpful if the information being sought is to determine how a child compares to a national group of children of the same age or grade. Criterion-reference tests are helpful in determining if the child has mastered skills expected of a certain age or grade level. Tests typically provide specific information but are never adequate as a single source of data to determine eligibility for special education. Because tests require a controlled testing environment, the result is that children are removed from their learning environments to participate. This is a very intrusive way of gathering data and the value of the data obtained should always be weighed carefully against the cost of missed class time. For this reason, tests should be thoughtfully selected and be used for specific purposes when data cannot be obtained through other sources. Some test information may already have been collected, especially if the child attends a school that uses school-wide benchmark assessment. However, additional information may need to be collected during the reevaluation. This might include curriculum-based assessments (e.g., CBA, CBM, or CBE), performance-based assessments (i.e., rubric scoring), or other skill measures such as individual reading inventories. The testing that needs to be done will vary depending on what information already has been collected and the needs of the individual child. Diagnostic testing might include measures of reading, math, written language, or other academic skills, or tests of motor functioning, speech/language skills, adaptive behavior, self-concept, or any domain of concern. As with all types of data collection, the information from testing needs to be useful for both diagnostic and programmatic decision-making.

GRIOT offers a framework in which to organize and structure data collection. It is not that any data source or assessment procedure is inherently good or bad. All procedures and tools are appropriate as long as they are selected thoughtfully and for the appropriate purposes. A team will not necessarily use all data sources every time an evaluation is conducted, but it does mean that thoughtful planning will need to be given for each child to ensure that the team is collecting the appropriate data using the appropriate tools to ensure the correct information to make the continued eligibility determination.

The instruments utilized in the reevaluation must meet all of the requirements as described in Section E. of Chapter 3 in this Handbook. Federal and State laws and regulations specify requirements for evaluation and reevaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-8(e)(f)(g); 34 C.F.R. 300.304)

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-8(c)(d)(e) (f)(g)

- (c) As a part of an initial evaluation, if appropriate, and as a part of any reevaluation, each agency shall ensure that members of an appropriate IEP team for the child and other qualified professionals, as appropriate, comply with the following requirements:
- (1) The evaluation team shall review existing evaluation data on the child, including the following information:
    - (A) Evaluations and information provided by the parents of the child;
    - (B) current classroom-based, local, and state assessments and classroom-based observations; and
    - (C) observations by teachers and related services providers.
  - (2) On the basis of that review and input from the child's parents, the evaluation team shall identify what additional data, if any, is needed to determine the following matters:
    - (A) Whether the child has a particular category of exceptionality or, in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to have such an exceptionality;
    - (B) what the present levels of academic performance and educational and related developmental needs of the child are;
    - (C) whether the child needs special education and related services, or in the case of a reevaluation of a child, whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and
    - (D) whether, in the case of a reevaluation of the child, any additions or modifications to the special education and related services currently being provided to the child are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate, in the general curriculum.
- (d) The team described in subsection (e) of this regulation may conduct its review without a meeting.
- (e) (1) If the team described in subsection (c) of this regulation determines that additional data is required to make any of the determinations specified in paragraph (2) of subsection (c), the agency, after giving proper written notice to the parent and obtaining parental consent, shall administer those tests and evaluations that are appropriate to produce the needed data.
- (2) If the team described in subsection (c) of this regulation determines that no additional data is needed to make any of the determinations specified in paragraph (2) of subsection (c), the agency shall give written notice to the child's parent of the following information:
    - (A) The determination that no additional data is needed and the reasons for this determination; and
    - (B) the right of the parent to request an assessment.
  - (3) The agency shall not be required to conduct any additional assessments unless requested to do so by the child's parent.
- (f) Unless an agency has obtained written parental consent to an extension of time and except as otherwise provided in subsection (g), the agency shall complete the following activities within 60 school days of the date the agency receives written parental consent for evaluation of a child:
- (1) Conduct the evaluation of the child;
  - (2) conduct a meeting to determine whether the child is an exceptional child and, if so, to develop an IEP for the child. The agency shall give notice of this meeting to the parent as required by K.A.R. 91-40-17(a); and
  - (3) implement the child's IEP in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-16.
- (g) An agency shall not be subject to the time frame prescribed in subsection (f) if either of the following conditions is met:
- (1) The parent of the child who is to be evaluated repeatedly fails or refuses to produce the child for the evaluation.
  - (2) The child enrolls in a different school before the evaluation is completed, and the parent and new school agree to a specific date by which the evaluation will be completed.
- (h) In complying with subsection (f), each agency shall ensure that an IEP is developed for each exceptional child within 30 days from the date on which the child is determined to need special education and related services.

K.A.R. 91-40-9. Evaluation procedures. (a) If assessment instruments are used as a part of the evaluation or reevaluation of an exceptional child, the agency shall ensure that the following requirements are met:

- (1) The assessment instruments or materials shall meet the following criteria:
  - (A) Be selected and administered so as not to be racially or culturally discriminatory; and
  - (B) be provided and administered in the child's native language or other mode of communication and in the form most likely to yield accurate information on what the child knows and can do academically, developmentally, and functionally, unless this is clearly not feasible.
- (2) Materials and procedures used to assess a child with limited English proficiency shall be selected and administered to ensure that they measure the extent to which the child has an exceptionality and needs special education, rather than measuring the child's English language skills.
- (3) A variety of assessment tools and strategies shall be used to gather relevant functional and developmental information about the child, including information provided by the parent, and information related to enabling the child to be involved and progress in the general curriculum or, for a preschool child, to participate in appropriate activities that could assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child and what the content of the child's IEP should be.

- (4) Any standardized tests that are given to a child shall meet the following criteria:
  - (A) Have been validated for the specific purpose for which they are used; and
  - (B) be administered by trained and knowledgeable personnel in accordance with any instructions provided by the producer of the assessment.
- (5) If an assessment is not conducted under standard conditions, a description of the extent to which the assessment varied from standard conditions shall be included in the evaluation report.
- (6) Assessments and other evaluation materials shall include those that are tailored to assess specific areas of educational need and not merely those that are designed to provide a single general intelligence quotient.
- (7) Assessments shall be selected and administered to ensure that if an assessment is administered to a child with impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills, the ~~test~~ results accurately reflect the child's aptitude or achievement level or whatever other factors the assessment purports to measure, rather than reflecting the child's impaired sensory, manual, or speaking skills, unless those skills are the factors that the assessment purports to measure.
- (8) A single procedure shall not be used as the sole criterion for determining whether a child is an exceptional child and for determining an appropriate educational program for the child.
- (9) Each agency shall use assessment tools and strategies that provide relevant information that directly assists persons in determining the educational needs of the child.
- (b) (1) Each child shall be assessed in all areas related to a suspected exceptionality, including, if appropriate, the following:
  - (A) Health;
  - (B) vision;
  - (C) hearing;
  - (D) social and emotional status;
  - (E) general intelligence;
  - (F) academic performance;
  - (G) communicative status; and
  - (H) motor abilities.
- (2) Each evaluation shall be sufficiently comprehensive to identify all of the child's special education and related services needs, whether or not commonly linked to the disability category in which the child has been classified.
- (c) If a child is suspected of having a specific learning disability, the agency also shall follow the procedures prescribed in K.A.R. 91-40-11 in conducting the evaluation of the child.

K.A.R. 91-40-11(b)(c)

- (b)(1) A group evaluating a child for a specific learning disability may determine that the child has that disability only if the following conditions are met:
  - (A) The child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or meet state-approved grade-level standards, if any, in one or more of the following areas, when the child is provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age and grade level:
    - (i) Oral expression;
    - (ii) listening comprehension;
    - (iii) written expression;
    - (iv) basic reading skill;
    - (v) reading fluency skills;
    - (vi) reading comprehension;
    - (vii) mathematics calculation; and
    - (viii) mathematics problem solving; and
  - (B)(i) The child does not make sufficient progress to meet age or state-approved grade-level standards in one or more of the areas identified in paragraph (b)(1)(A) when using a process based on the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention; or
  - (ii) the child exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, grade-level standards, or intellectual development that is determined by the group conducting the evaluation to be relevant to the identification of a specific learning disability, using appropriate assessments.
- (2) A child shall not be determined to be a child with a specific learning disability unless the group evaluating the child determines that its findings under paragraphs (b)(1)(A) and (B) are not primarily the result of any of the following:
  - (i) A visual, hearing, or motor disability;
  - (ii) mental retardation;
  - (iii) emotional disturbance;
  - (iv) cultural factors;
  - (v) environmental or economic disadvantage; or
  - (vi) limited English proficiency.
- (c) (1) The group evaluating the child shall ensure that the child is observed in the child's learning environment, including the regular classroom setting, to document the child's academic performance and behavior in the areas of difficulty.
- (2) In conducting the observation, the group may employ either of the following procedures:
  - (A) Use information from an observation in routine classroom instruction and monitoring of the child's performance that was done before the child was referred for an evaluation; or
  - (B) have at least one member of the group conduct an observation of the child's academic performance in the regular classroom after the child has been referred for an evaluation and parental consent is obtained.

F. DETERMINING CONTINUED ELIGIBILITY

Upon completion of the reevaluation, the team should compile all data (that which previously existed and/or was collected as part of the reevaluation) into a format that will be useful when the team convenes to make the continued eligibility determination. It is important that all the information be in an understandable format that allows the team, including the parent, to understand the child's strengths and weaknesses and how the child is progressing in the general curriculum in addition to information about the child's exceptionality and needs for special education.

At the time the reevaluation is completed, the team should schedule a time to convene in order to make the determination of continued eligibility. Parents are to be provided an opportunity to participate in the eligibility meeting, which can be conducted at the same time as the IEP team meeting. The school must provide a notice of the meeting at least 10 calendar days prior to the meeting date that includes the requirements in K.A.R. 91-40-17(b)(1).

When the meeting is convened, the reevaluation team, including the parents, review the results of the reevaluation to determine:

- if the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality;
- the educational needs of the child;
- the present levels of academic achievement and the functional performance (related developmental needs) of the child;
- whether the child continues to need special education and related services; and
- whether any additions of modifications to the special education and related services are needed to enable the child to meet the measurable annual goals set out in the IEP of the child and to participate, as appropriate in the general education curriculum.

As is the case in all reevaluations, when making the determination of whether the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality and whether the child continues to need special education and related services, teams must take into account that the child has made progress since the time he/she was initially evaluated and determined to be eligible for services. The fact that the child's performance gap may be less than at the time of the initial evaluation would not necessarily mean that the child is no longer a child with an exceptionality and no longer in need of special education services.

The data collected at the time of the reevaluation should assist the team in decision making. Teams should thoroughly discuss the child's present levels of educational performance and consider the child's rate of progress. Teams should also consider what level of support is needed in order for the child to access and progress in the general curriculum and whether that level of support would continue to require specially designed instruction. If at the time of reevaluation, a student needs only general accommodations, then the student is no longer eligible for special education, but should be referred for consideration of eligibility for a 504 plan. These careful considerations should drive the determination of continued eligibility.

Documenting Continued Eligibility

After completion of appropriate reevaluation procedures, the team of qualified professionals and the parent of the child shall prepare a written reevaluation report. A copy of the reevaluation report and documentation of whether or not the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality must be given to the parents. See Section F, of Chapter 3, in this Handbook for a complete discussion of the requirements for determination of continuing eligibility and a description of the reevaluation and continued eligibility report. (See Appendix A, Figure 3-5, Evaluation/Eligibility Report Checklist.)

G. REEVALUATION FOR A CHILD IDENTIFIED AS DEVELOPMENTALLY DELAYED

Special considerations impacting reevaluation are needed for children who have been determined eligible for special education services under the category of developmental delay (DD). These considerations must be made in accordance with regulations regarding a child's continuing eligibility for services.

State Statute and regulations (K.S.A. 72-962(z)(2); K.A.R. 91-40-1(k)) allow schools to identify children ages three through nine as a child with a developmental delay(DD). Federal regulations clarify that the use of the category of developmental delay is optional for the school and may be used for children ages three through nine or any subset of that age range (i.e., 3-5, 6-9. etc.) (34 C.F.R. 300.111(b)).

If a child ages 3-9 was determined eligible as a child with DD, a reevaluation must be conducted before the child turns age 10 to determine whether the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality as defined by any of the categorical areas under the law and whether the child continues to have a need for special education and related services. The reevaluation to determine continued eligibility as a child with an exceptionality may take place anytime prior to the child's 10th birthday, or if the child's 10th birthday is after December 1, the reevaluation must be completed by the end of the school year in which the child turns 10 years of age.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-1

(k) "Child with a disability" means the following:

- (1) A child evaluated as having mental retardation, a hearing impairment including deafness, a speech or language impairment, a visual impairment including blindness, emotional disturbance, an orthopedic impairment, autism, traumatic brain injury, any other health impairment, a specific learning disability, deaf-blindness, or multiple disabilities and who, by reason thereof, need special education and related services; and
- (2) for children from ages three through nine, a child who is experiencing developmental delays and, by reason thereof, needs special education and related services.

(q) "Developmental delay" means such a deviation from average development in one or more of the following developmental areas that special education and related services are required: (A) Physical; (B) cognitive; (C) adaptive behavior; (D) communication; or (E) social or emotional development. The deviation from average development shall be documented and measured by appropriate diagnostic instruments and procedures.

K.A.R. 91-40-2. FAPE

- (c)(1) Each agency shall make FAPE available to any child with a disability even though the child is advancing from grade to grade.
- (2) The determination of whether a child who is advancing from grade to grade is a child with a disability shall be made on an individual basis in accordance with child find activities and evaluation procedures required by this article.

K.A.R. 91-40-10(h)

(h)With regard to children from ages six through nine who are determined to need special education and related services, an agency may elect to use the term "developmental delay" or one or more of the categories of disabilities described in the definition of the term "child with a disability."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT REEVALUATION

1. What does the school do if parents refuse consent for a reevaluation?

The school must try to obtain consent from the parents. The school may, but is not required to seek to mediate the dispute or file for a due process hearing to pursue the reevaluation. The school would not violate the requirement to conduct a reevaluation if it declines to pursue the reevaluation when the parent refuses to provide consent. The school would continue to serve the child according to the IEP.

2. What does the school do to document reasonable measures were taken to obtain consent, if parents do not respond to the request to reevaluate?

If the parent does not respond the school must keep detailed records of its attempts to obtain parental consent including written correspondence sent to the parents, phone calls made or attempted and visits made to the parent's home or place of employment, and the response, if any, from the parent. At a minimum schools must make two attempts, using at least two different methods. If the school is not successful after repeated reasonable measures, then the school may continue with the reevaluation procedures. (K.A.R. 91-40-17(e)(2)(A); 34 C.F.R. 300.303(d)(5); 34 C.F.R. 300.300(d))

3. What does the school do if parents want a specific test conducted, but the rest of the reevaluation team believes no additional data are needed? Must the school conduct the test?

The school would have the option of conducting the test, or providing Prior Written Notice to the parents of refusal to test and the reason they do not think the testing is necessary. If the parents do not agree, they may request mediation or due process.

4. If no additional data are needed, does the reevaluation team need to write a report just to determine continued eligibility and need?

Yes. Upon the completion of the reevaluation (which may include only existing data) and determination of continued eligibility, the team develops a reevaluation and eligibility report as described in Chapter 3. The report includes what data were examined and their reasons for determining continued eligibility for special education and related services. The parents are to receive a copy of this report.

6. May staff discuss information related to a child's instruction without the parents?

Yes, Kansas regulations clarify that, "a meeting does not include informal or unscheduled conversations involving public agency personnel and conversations on issues such as teaching methodology, lesson plans, or coordination of service provision if those issues are not addressed in the child's IEP. A meeting also does not include preparatory activities that public agency personnel engage in to develop a proposal or response to a parent proposal that will be discussed at a later meeting." (K.A.R. 91-40-25(e)).

7. Once a child has been exited from special education services, must you complete an initial evaluation upon a referral to determine need for special education?

Once the child has been identified as a child with an exceptionality, even though s/he may have been exited, any subsequent evaluation would be a "reevaluation." The reevaluation must include all the same requirements for an initial evaluation and a review of existing data. If there is enough current data available the team may determine there does not need to be any further assessments conducted.

8. When a student with an exceptionality is graduating and exiting from special education services, must the school conduct a reevaluation to determine post-school program eligibility?

Schools are not required to conduct a reevaluation for a child to meet the entrance or eligibility requirements of a post-school institution or agency because to do so would impose a significant cost on the school that is not required by the law (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46644).

CHAPTER 8

DISCONTINUING SPECIAL EDUCATION SERVICES

INTRODUCTION

There are times when a child's eligibility for special education and related services ends or when the parent or student chooses to end the provision of special education services. This chapter discusses several instances in which students currently receiving special education services "discontinue" or exit from their special education program. Such circumstances include the following:

- A. No Longer Eligible for Services
- B. Graduation
- C. Services to Age 21
- D. Summary of Performance
- E. Revocation of Consent for Special Education Services
- F. Student Drops Out of School
- G. Prior Written Notice and Request for Consent

A. NO LONGER ELIGIBLE FOR SERVICES

When a parent or school personnel suspect that a child is no longer eligible for special education and related services, a reevaluation must be conducted to determine if the child is no longer a child with an exceptionality (K.S.A. 72-986(l)(1)). As part of the reevaluation, the IEP team will review existing data and determine whether they need to conduct any additional assessments (See Chapter 7, Reevaluation.).

If it is determined by the IEP team through a reevaluation that the child is no longer a child with an exceptionality (no longer has a disability or is gifted and needs special education and related services), the district will provide the parents with Prior Written Notice of this decision and obtain parent consent before discontinuing services (See Appendix A, Figure 1-6, Prior Written Notice, and www.kansped.org ). Typically, if the IEP Team determines that a child is no longer eligible, the reason is that the child no longer has a need for special education and related services. For example, a child who was identified with speech and language delays as a young child has benefited from speech/language services, met the exit criteria determined by the IEP Team, and no longer needs such services. Services may be discontinued, with parent consent, if the IEP team determines that the data support that the child no longer has a need for special education services.

B. GRADUATION

All students receiving special education services will receive a regular high school diploma at the completion of their secondary program if they meet graduation requirements of the state and school district, or as specified on their IEP. A regular high school diploma does not include an alternative diploma that is not fully aligned with the State's academic standards, such as a certificate or GED (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46580). If a modified or differentiated diploma or certificate is used for students receiving special education services; however, such diplomas or certificates do not end eligibility for special education services.

When the student enters high school, progress toward graduation must be monitored annually and recorded on an official transcript of credits. If the student has completed the required courses for graduation, but the IEP team determines the student still needs additional special education and related services, graduation would be delayed and the student can continue to receive the needed special education services on the IEP through the school year in which the student turns 21. Some students may require services until age 21 to meet IEP goals. The district's obligation to provide special education services ends (a) when the student meets graduation requirements and receives a regular high school diploma, (b) at the end of the school year in which the child reaches age 21, or (c) an evaluation shows that the child is no longer eligible for special education services(K.A.R. 91-40-2(f)).

Students with exceptionalities who meet graduation criteria must be afforded the same opportunity to participate in graduation ceremonies as students without exceptionalities, even if the IEP team determines that services will continue after the student has met all of the required credits (but an official diploma has not been awarded). A student may require services until age 21 to meet IEP goals, or because he or she has not obtained all of the required credits for graduation. In either case, however the student may be allowed to participate in graduation ceremonies with his/her classmates. Schools may have a policy regarding participation in graduation ceremonies; however it must apply equally to all students in the district, not just for students with exceptionalities.

No reevaluation is required prior to exiting a student due to graduation (K.S.A. 72-986(l)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e)(2)). However, before the student completes the last semester of high school in which she/he is expected to graduate, the district must provide the student (if over age 18) and the parents with Prior Written Notice of the discontinuation of services at the end of the school year. The Prior Written Notice will clearly state that the student will no longer be entitled to receive special education services from the district after graduation. Parental consent is not required when a child graduates with a regular diploma (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.102(a)(3)(iii)).

Figure 8-1 in Appendix A is a letter from the Federal Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) about criteria for grading, graduation, and diplomas for students with disabilities. This OSEP letter (often referred to as the "Runkel letter") provides additional guidance.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-986(l)(2)

(2) A reevaluation of a child shall not be required before termination of a child's eligibility for services under this act due to graduation from secondary school with a regular diploma, or due to exceeding the age for eligibility for services under this act.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-2(f)

- (1) An agency shall not be required to provide FAPE to any exceptional child who has graduated from high school with a regular high school diploma.
- (2) Each exceptional child shall be eligible for graduation from high school upon successful completion of state and local board requirements and shall receive the same graduation recognition and diploma that a nonexceptional child receives.
- (3) The IEP of an exceptional child may designate goals other than high school graduation.
- (4) When an exceptional child enters high school, progress toward graduation shall be monitored annually and recorded on an official transcript of credits.
- (5) As used in this subsection, the term "regular high school diploma" means the same diploma as is awarded to nonexceptional students and shall not include certificates of completion or other certificates, or a general educational development credential (GED).

C. SERVICES TO AGE 21

The district must make FAPE available to any student who has not graduated with a regular high school diploma until the end of the school year in which the student turns 21 (the school year ends on June 30.). The IEP team may determine that the student needs extended school year services, which would be available through June 30 of the school year in which the student turns 21. The school must provide the student age 18 and over, and the parents with Prior Written Notice that the services will be discontinued at the end of the school year, however, parental consent is not required. A reevaluation is also not required when a student ages out of eligibility for services upon turning age 21 (K.S.A. 72-986(l)(2); (K.A.R. 91-40-27(a)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e)(2)).

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-986(l)

(1) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), an agency shall reevaluate a child in accordance with this section before determining that the child is no longer an exceptional child.

(2) A reevaluation of a child shall not be required before termination of a child's eligibility for services under this act due to graduation from secondary school with a regular diploma, or due to exceeding the age for eligibility for services under this act.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-10(g)

(g)(2) An agency shall not be required to conduct a reevaluation of a child with an exceptionality before terminating special education or related services to the child if the reason for termination of services is due to either of the following:

- (A) The child has graduated from high school with a regular high school diploma.
- (B) The child has reached the age of 21 years.

D. SUMMARY OF PERFORMANCE

A Summary of Performance (SOP) is required under the reauthorization of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act of 2004 for a child whose eligibility under special education terminates due to graduation with a regular diploma, or due to exceeding the age of eligibility. The local education agency must provide the child with a summary of the child's academic achievement and functional performance, which must include recommendations on how to assist the child in meeting the child's postsecondary goals (K.S.A. 72-986(m); 34 C.F.R. 300.305(e)(3)). This requirement applies only to children with disabilities, therefore, an SOP does not need to be completed for students identified as gifted.

The purpose of the SOP is to transfer critical information that leads to the student's successful participation in postsecondary settings. It includes a summary of the achievements of the student with current academic, personal and career/vocational levels of performance. Information may be included as part of the summary based on assessment findings and team input. Assessment data and accommodations included in the summary should be written in functional terms easily understood by the student. Any supporting documents are to be appropriately referenced and included with the summary. Signatures by the student and IEP team members are encouraged as verification that the contents of the summary have been explained, but are not required.

The SOP must, at a minimum, address the following:

- Academic achievement: Information on reading, math, and language grade levels, standardized scores, or strengths.
- Functional performance: Information on learning styles, social skills, independent living skills, self-determination, and career/vocational skills.
- Recommendations: Team suggestions for accommodations, assistive services, compensatory strategies for post-secondary education, employment, independent living, and community participation.

The Summary of Performance is intended to assist the student in transition from high school to higher education, training and/or employment. This information is helpful under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) in establishing a student's eligibility for reasonable accommodations and supports in postsecondary settings. It is also useful for the Vocational Rehabilitation Comprehensive Assessment process. However, recommendations in a student's SOP do not assure that an individual who qualified for special education in high school will automatically qualify for accommodations in a postsecondary education or employment setting. Post secondary settings will continue to make ADA and Section 504 eligibility decisions on a case-by-case basis based on their criteria.

Since the SOP must be provided to the student with a disability whose eligibility terminates due to graduation or age, it is reasonable to conclude that the SOP must be completed and provided to the student by the end of the final year of a student's high school education. That does not mean that it cannot be completed and provided to the student prior to graduation. The timing of completion of the SOP may vary depending on the student's postsecondary goals. If a student is transitioning to higher education, the SOP may be necessary as the student applies to a college or university. Likewise, this information may be necessary as a student applies for services from state agencies such as vocational rehabilitation. In some instances, it may be most appropriate to wait until the spring of a student's final year to provide an agency or employer the most updated information on the performance of the student. (See Appendix A, Figure 8-2, Summary of Performance form, and www.kansped.org .)

State Statute:
K.S.A. 72-986(m)

(m) For a child whose eligibility for services under this act terminates under either of the circumstances described in subsection (l), the agency shall provide the child with a summary of the child's academic achievement and functional performance, which shall include recommendations on how to assist the child in meeting the child's postsecondary goals.

E. REVOCATION OF CONSENT FOR SPECIAL EDUCATION SERVICES

Parent consent is voluntary, and may be revoked by the parents at any time. If a parent revokes consent for existing services, the LEA should meet with the parent to attempt to resolve the difficulty, seek mediation, or possibly initiate a due process proceeding to override the parent's objection. If the parent cannot be convinced to continue the services, the LEA also may honor the parent's objection and cease provision of the services. In this case, the LEA should send written notice to the parent stating that it stands ready, willing, and able to provide appropriate services to the child, if the parent reconsiders his or her objection to those services.

If the parents or an adult student revokes consent for special education services, no reevaluation is needed. The student continues to have a right to FAPE, despite the adult students' or the parents' decision to withdraw from special education services. Schools ultimately have the burden to provide FAPE, and should recognize the potential legal ramifications if they do not pursue mediation and/or due process when the parents and/or adult student revokes consent to continue services. A student or his/her parents could come back later and ask for compensatory education.

Additionally, K.S.A. 72-977 states that:

"...it shall be the duty of the parent of each exceptional child to require such child to attend school to receive the special education and related services which are indicated on the child's IEP or to provide for such services privately. (b) The provisions of subsection (1) do not apply to gifted children or to parents of gifted children."

Therefore, the parent can provide the services privately. The requirement for parent responsibility for mandatory special education services applies only to parents of children with disabilities, not to parents of children who are gifted.

When parents revoke their consent for a specific special education action, the revocation is not retroactive but becomes effective on the date that it was revoked (K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.9). Therefore, the revoking of consent does not negate any action that has occurred after the previous consent was given and before the consent was revoked.

If the parent refuses or revokes consent for one service or activity the school cannot deny the parent or child any other activity or service on the child's IEP (K.A.R. 91-40-27(h)). In addition, because consent for services must be in writing, revocation of consent must be in writing.

State Regulations:
K.A.R. 91-40-1(l)(3)

(3) A parent understands that the granting of consent is voluntary on the part of the parent and may be revoked at any time, but if the parent revokes consent, that the revocation is not retroactive and does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked.

F. STUDENT DROPS OUT OF SCHOOL

Under K.S.A. 72-1111, students without disabilities are allowed to drop out of school at age 16, and may at some point obtain a General Education Diploma (GED). However, as discussed previously, K.S.A. 72-977 gives parents of a child with a disability the responsibility to provide for the special education services for their child, either within the public school or through private means. If for some reason a student with a disability drops out of school, documentation to that effect must be placed in the student's confidential file. The school must inform the parents that special education services continue to be available to the student. KSDE recommends that the school send a letter to the parents, stating that the school remains ready to provide special education services to their child. If the student reenrolls, the previous IEP must be implemented until a new IEP is developed.

If a student drops out of school, the school is obligated to consider the student's FAPE entitlement very carefully. The school has an obligation to report the student's truancy to the District Attorney or County Attorney if the student is younger than age 18. The school may want to consult with the school's attorney on this issue as well.

If a student drops out of school, no Prior Written Notice, consent, or reevaluation is required. However, reevaluation may be needed if the student was to reenroll and a new IEP may need to be developed.

G. PRIOR WRITTEN NOTICE AND REQUEST FOR CONSENT

For some situations discussed within this chapter, parents must receive Prior Written Notice, and sometimes the school must obtain informed parent consent. (See Appendix A, figures 1-5 and 1-6, Prior Written Notice and Consent forms and www.kansped.org.)

The following chart may be useful to districts in determining when a reevaluation, Prior Written Notice and parent consent, as well as a Summary of Performance (SOP) are needed:

Reason for Discontinuing Services	Reevaluation Required	Prior Written Notice Required	Parent or Adult Student Consent Required	SOP Required
No longer eligible for special education and related services	Yes	Yes	Yes	No
Graduation	No	Yes	No	Yes

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT DISCONTINUING SPECIAL EDUCATION SERVICES

1. What if the student no longer requires special education services?

The IEP Team must determine whether the student no longer requires special education services based on data from a reevaluation. If, after a reevaluation, the team determines that the student is no longer eligible for special education it must give parents Prior Written Notice of that determination and that the team is proposing to end services. The school must also request that the parent give written consent for the end of services. The IEP Team may also determine that the student qualifies as a student with a disability under Section 504 and refer the student to the Section 504 team, which would write a Section 504 plan for him/her. (See Appendix G.)

2. What is required when the student graduates from high school?

The school must provide the student, if age 18, and the parents with Prior Written Notice of exiting special education. The Prior Written Notice will clearly state that the student will no longer be entitled to receive special education services from the district after graduation. Informed parent consent is not required. Additionally, the school must provide the student with a Summary of Performance (See Appendix A, Figure 8-2.).

3. May a student participate in graduation exercises with his or her classmates, if s/he is not actually graduating?

Yes, the student may participate in graduation exercises unless a local policy would not allow it. However, if there is such a policy, it must apply to all students and not just students receiving special education services. This would apply even if a student has met all of the credits for graduation, but the IEP team determines that additional services are needed. Some students may require services until age 21 to meet IEP goals, which should be addressed within the student's transition plan. In either case, the student could participate in graduation exercises with his/her class, but not actually receive a diploma at that time.

4. Are students who drop out of school and later begin working on a General Education Diploma (GED) eligible for special education and related services?

The student must be enrolled in the public school in order to receive special education and related services. A student who drops out of school and later enrolls in a program to obtain a General Education Diploma (GED) would not have special education services available to him/her. However, if there are IEP goals that were not completed before the student dropped out of school, the student may reenroll in the public school. The student may be entitled to receive services until June 30 following the student's 21st birthday. Obtaining a GED does not end a student's eligibility for special education services (34 C.F.R. 300.102(a)(3)(iv)).

5. What if the team decides that the child is no longer eligible for special education services, but the parents refuse to consent to the child exiting from services?

Services must continue. However, the team could continue to try to reach consensus with the parent. If parents continue to refuse to provide consent, then the school could request mediation and/or due process.

6. What if a child who has exited from special education services is referred again?

A reevaluation would be conducted to reestablish whether the child continues to be a child with an exceptionality and has a need for special education and related services, thus making the child eligible once again for special education services. See Chapter 7, Reevaluation. The school would provide Prior Written Notice and request consent from the parents or adult student before beginning the reevaluation.

7. A student who becomes 21 years of age during the school year would no longer be eligible for services after June 30 following the end of that school year. What if the student's birthday is July 1?

Technically, if the student reaches 21 during the new school year (even for one day) and would be entitled to services until the following June 30, which would be just before the student's 22nd birthday on July 1.

8. What is the school's responsibility if the parents of a child want the child dismissed from special education, but the school representatives on the team feel this is inappropriate?

Parents always have the right to rescind their written informed consent to the provision of special education and related services for their child. If the parents unilaterally withdraw their child from special education and the remaining members of the child's IEP Team feel that the child continues to need special education, the school will have to consider its options to request mediation, initiate due process, or inform SRS or the District Attorney, depending on the circumstances and the age of the child.

CHAPTER 9

CONFIDENTIALITY

INTRODUCTION

Confidentiality of educational records is a basic right shared by all students in public schools and their parents. These fundamental rights are described in the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) of 1974, as amended (2006). Appendix F and www.kansped.org includes a copy of the federal regulations relating to FERPA, which applies to all students, not only those with exceptionalities. Kansas Special Education Regulations, K.A.R. 91-40-50 has adopted by reference provisions in 34 C.F.R. 300.612-300.624, as effective on January 1, 2007, which concern parental access to educational records and confidentiality of those records, are adopted by reference.

Confidentiality regulations apply to the State, to all public schools and private schools that accept federal funds. In addition, all school personnel (including contracted employees) are governed by confidentiality requirements of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), which apply to students with exceptionalities. Confidentiality is one of the rights afforded to parents and is included in the Parent Rights document (See Appendix A, Figure 1-2.). Chapter 1 in this Handbook includes additional information about parent rights. All people involved in special education should be aware of the laws and regulations ensuring that all records and information will be kept secure and remain confidential.

This chapter provides specific information about confidentiality requirements for schools:

- A. Federal and State Requirements
- B. Access to Records
- C. Transfer of Records
- D. Release of Information
- E. Amendment of Records
- F. Destruction of Records
- G. Age of Majority
- H. Test Protocols
- I. Discipline Records
- J. Child in Need of Care

A. FEDERAL AND STATE REQUIREMENTS

Each school shall annually notify parents of their rights under FERPA. The notice must inform parents or adult students that they have the right to:

1. Inspect and review the student's education records;
2. Seek amendment of the student's education records that the parent or eligible student believes to be inaccurate, misleading, or otherwise in violation of the student's privacy rights;
3. Consent to disclosures of personally identifiable information contained in the student's education records, except to the extent that FERPA and Sec. 99.31 authorize disclosure without consent; and
4. File a complaint under Sec. 99.63 and 99.64 concerning alleged failures by the educational agency or institution to comply with the requirements of FERPA.

Additionally, the notice must include all of the following:

- The procedure for exercising the right to inspect and review education records.
- The procedure for requesting amendment of records.

The school district may provide this notice by any means that are reasonably likely to inform the parents or eligible students of their rights. The school shall effectively notify parents who have a primary or home language other than English. (34 C.F.R. 99.7) This notice should adequately inform parents prior to any identification, location, or evaluation activity taking place. A sample of an annual notice regarding FERPA requirements is in Appendix A, Figure 9-1.

Definitions of terms used are as follows (K.A.R. 91-40-50; 34 C.F.R. 300.32):

- Personally identifiable means information includes information such as the name of the child, child's parents, or other family member; address; personal identifier such as the child's social security number or student number; or list of personal characteristics or other information that would make it possible to identify the child.
- Destruction means physically destroying the medium on which information is recorded or removing all personal identifiers from the information so no one can be identified.
- Educational records means any document or medium on which information directly related to one or more students is maintained by a participating agency.
- Participating agency means any educational agency or institution that collects maintains or uses personally identifiable student information to provide special education and related services to children with disabilities.

In addition to these Federal requirements, the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) is obligated to establish policies and procedures to ensure that confidentiality requirements are in place at every participating agency. KSDE does this by having each public agency accessing funds sign assurances and adopt or establish local policies and procedures consistent with confidentiality requirements.

Federal Regulations: Sec. 300.32 Personally identifiable means that information includes-- <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>(i) The name of the child, the child's parent, or other family member;</li><li>(ii) The address of the child;</li><li>(iii) A personal identifier, such as the child's social security number or student number; or</li><li>(iv) a list of personal characteristics or other information that would make it possible to identify the child with reasonable certainty.</li><li>(v)</li></ul> Sec. 300.612. ## B. ACCESS TO RECORDS

FERPA and Federal and State special education laws and regulations require schools to have reasonable policies in place to allow parents to review and inspect their child's records. An education record means those records that are directly related to a student and maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a party acting for the agency or institution. Educational records may include, but not limited to:

- academic work completed and level of achievement
- attendance data
- scores and test protocols of standardized intelligence, aptitude, and psychological tests
- interest inventory results
- health data
- family background information
- information from teachers or counselors
- observations and verified reports of serious or recurrent behavior patterns
- IEPs
- documentation of notice and consent

Under certain circumstances, a teacher's working file would not be considered to be part of the child's record. FERPA regulation 34 C.F.R. 99.3, states that the term "education records" does not include records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record."

The district must prevent the disclosure to any unauthorized person of personally identifiable information pertaining to all students. Disclosure is the release, transfer or other communication of records, or the personally identifiable information contained in those records, to any party, by any means, including oral, written, or electronic.

FERPA allows parents to inspect and review all education records of their children maintained by an educational agency that receives Federal funds. This includes all public schools and private schools that accept federal funds. The school must comply with a request to inspect records within a reasonable time, not to exceed 45 calendar days.

FERPA regulations allow some exceptions to the requirement to obtain parent consent before releasing records. All of these exceptions also apply to the confidentiality requirements in the federal special education regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.622(a)). For example, FERPA allows the school to release records to authorized individuals, such as:

- other school officials, including teachers at the school where the student attends, who have a legitimate educational interest (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(1));
- officials of another school, school district, or postsecondary educational institution where the student is enrolled or seeks or intends to enroll, IF (a) the district's annual notice included a notice that the district forwards education records to other agencies that request records and in which the student seeks or intends to enroll; or (b) the district makes a reasonable attempt to notify the parents or the student of the disclosure at the last known address (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(2)), however no notice is required if the disclosure is initiated by the parent or adult student;
- authorized representatives of the US Comptroller General, US Secretary of Education, and State Educational Agencies in connection with an audit or evaluation of Federal or State supported programs, or for the enforcement or compliance with Federal legal requirements related to those programs (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(3));
- disclosure in connection with financial aid for which the student has applied or received to determine eligibility, amount, or conditions of the aid or to enforce the terms and conditions of the aid (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(4));
- disclosure to State and local officials to whom the information is specifically allowed to be reported pursuant to State statute (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(5));

- disclosure to organizations conducting studies for educational agencies to develop, validate or administer predictive tests; administer student aid programs; or improve instruction, but only if the study does not allow personal identification of parents and students to anyone other than representatives of the organization conducting the study, and if the information is destroyed when no longer needed for the purposes for which the study was conducted (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(6));
- disclosure to accrediting organizations to carry out their functions (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(7));
- disclosure to a parent of a student who qualifies as a dependent under section 152 of the Internal Revenue Service Code (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(8));
- disclosure of relevant educational records to a court in a legal action initiated by the district against a parent. Also, disclosure to comply with a judicial order or subpoena. However, these disclosures may be made only if the district makes a reasonable effort to notify the parents or eligible student of the order or subpoena in advance of compliance with the order or subpoena, unless the order or subpoena states that the existence or contents of the order or subpoena not be disclosed (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(9));
- disclosure in connection with a health or safety emergency, if knowledge of the information is necessary to protect the health or safety of the student or other individuals (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(10));
- disclosure of directory information. This is information contained in an education record of a student which would not generally be considered harmful or an invasion of privacy if disclosed. It includes, but is not limited to, the student's name, address, telephone listing, date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of members of athletic teams, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, and the most previous educational agency or institution attended (34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(11));
- disclosure to the adult student or student of any age if attending a postsecondary school, or to the parents of a student who has not reached 18 years of age and is not attending an institution of postsecondary education (34 C.F.R. 99.31 (a)(12)); and
- disclosure of the results of any disciplinary proceeding conducted by an institution of postsecondary education against an alleged perpetrator to an alleged victim of any crime of violence, as defined by section 16 of title 18, United States Code (34 C.F.R. 99.31 (a)(13)); or
- Disclosure to a parent of a student attending an institution of post secondary education regarding the illegal use of alcohol (34 C.F.R. 300.622(a)).

To ensure protection of education records, the school district must:

1. Obtain written consent before disclosing personally identifiable information to unauthorized individuals. A parent must provide consent if the child is under 18 years of age (unless one of the exceptions listed above applies).
2. Designate and train a records manager to assure security of confidential records for students with exceptionalities.
3. Keep a record or log of all parties obtaining access to education records, including the name of the party, the date access took place, and the purpose of the authorized use.
4. Maintain for public inspection a current listing of names and positions of employees who may have access to personally identifiable information.
5. Ensure the confidentiality of personally identifiable information at collection, storage, disclosure, and destruction stages.
6. Ensure that, if any education record includes information on more than one student, a parent of a child must have the right to inspect and review only the information relating to his or her child, or to be informed of that specific information.
7. Ensure that each person collecting or using personally identifiable information receives training or instruction regarding the policies and procedures governing confidentiality of personally identifiable information. The district must maintain a record of the training provided, the person or persons providing the training, dates of the training, those attending, and subjects covered.

8. Provide a parent, upon request, a list of the types and locations of records collected, maintained, or used by the district.
9. Respond to any reasonable request made by a parent for an explanation and interpretation of a record.
10. Provide a parent, upon request, access to the child's records, and under certain circumstances, a copy of the records (34 C.F.R. 300.613). Most districts copy records for parents without charge. However, the law does allow for fees for copies of records made for a parent if the fee does not prevent a parent from exercising the right to inspect and review those records. A fee may not be charged to search for or retrieve information.

The following sample forms are in Appendix A:

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.613. Access rights

- (a) Each participating agency shall permit parents to inspect and review any education records relating to their children that are collected, maintained, or used by the agency under this part. The agency shall comply with a request without unnecessary delay and before any meeting regarding an IEP, or any hearing pursuant to Secs. 300.507 and 300.521-300.528, and in no case more than 45 days after the request has been made.
- (b) The right to inspect and review education records under this section includes--
  - (1) The right to a response from the participating agency to reasonable requests for explanations and interpretations of the records;
  - (2) The right to request that the agency provide copies of the records containing the information if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records; and
  - (3) The right to have a representative of the parent inspect and review the records.
- (c) An agency may presume that the parent has authority to inspect and review records relating to his or her child unless the agency has been advised that the parent does not have the authority under applicable State law governing such matters as guardianship, separation, and divorce.

C. TRANSFER OF RECORDS

Education records include personally identifiable information, and may not be released to another agency or organization without parent consent. However, when a student transfers to another Kansas school district or nonpublic school, education records may be forwarded without student or parent consent if the annual FERPA notice to parents includes a statement that these records will be forwarded to the receiving school. (Figure 9-1 in Appendix A is a sample FERPA notice.) Immunization records are included in the educational records (under the annual notification exception) that may also be shared with a receiving school without student or parent consent. By sharing such information between schools, the unnecessary immunization of children can be avoided.

Children in foster care who move from one community to another should be admitted to the receiving school without delay. The receiving school may access the education record (including the immunization portion of the record) without parent consent, if proper public notice has been provided to the parent (K.S.A. 1997 Supp. 72-5209(d)). If the receiving district is unable to determine the previous district, the school can access the Foster Care Database which includes information from SRS and JJA regarding custody and out of home placement, as well as educational records from the school districts the child has attended.

Kansas schools may NOT withhold records because of fines or other such reasons. The sending district is to transfer the original school record to the requesting district (K.S.A. 72-5386). The sending district should maintain a copy of the educational record that is sent. In addition, Kansas special education regulations require the sending district to immediately transfer the IEP, and any additional educationally relevant information regarding a child with an exceptionality, to the receiving district (K.A.R. 91-40-4(c)). If the school's annual FERPA notification does not contain a statement that the school sends educational records to a receiving school, it must make a reasonable attempt to notify the parent at the last known address of the parent.

When a child transfers from a school district in another State to a school district in Kansas, the Kansas school must obtain parental consent to access the records from the school district in the other State.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 1997 Supp. 72-5209(d)

If a pupil transfers from one school to another, the school from which the student is transferring shall forward the pupil's immunization certification to the new school.

K.S.A. 72-5386

- (a) This section shall apply to all school districts and to every pupil of any school district. As used in this section, the term "school records" means transcripts, grade cards, the results of tests, assessments or evaluations, and all other personally identifiable records, files and data directly related to a pupil.
- (b) All school district property in the possession of any pupil shall be returned to the proper school district authority or paid for by the pupil upon transfer of the pupil from the school district. The school records of any such pupil shall not be withheld for any reason. A school district authority, upon request, shall provide a fully itemized list of the school district property in the possession of the pupil. In the event that such school district authority receives an affidavit stating that the pupil's parents are unable to return the school district property which is lost or missing, such school district authority shall note in the school records of the pupil that the pupil has complied with the provisions of this section. In the event that a school district authority receives an affidavit from the board of education of another school district or from the governing authority of a nonpublic school stating that a pupil's records are being requested as proof of identity of the pupil pursuant to the provisions of K.S.A. 72-53,106, and amendments thereto, such school district authority shall forward a certified copy of that part of the pupil's records which provides information regarding the identity of the pupil.
- (c) The school records of each pupil are the property of the pupil and shall not be withheld by any school district. Upon request of a pupil or the parent of a pupil, the school records of the pupil shall be given to such pupil or parent, or, upon transfer of the pupil to another school district or to a nonpublic school, shall be forwarded to such school district or nonpublic school. A pupil's records forwarded to another school district due to transfer will include original copies of all the student's records, including transcripts, grade cards, results of tests, assessments or evaluations, and all other personally identifiable records, files and data directly related to the pupil.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-4

- (c) Unless otherwise expressly authorized by state law, when a student transfers from a state school to a school district or from one school district to another, the most recent individualized education program, as well as any additional educationally relevant information concerning the child, shall be forwarded immediately to the receiving school district.

D. RELEASE OF INFORMATION

As discussed in previous sections, consent from the parent or adult student is required before education records may be released (34 C.F.R.C.F.R. 300.622). Some examples of when parent consent is required include:

- If a child is enrolled, or is going to enroll in a private school that is not located in the parent's district of residence, parental consent must be obtained before any personally identifiable information about the child is released between officials in the district where the private school is located and officials in the district of the parent's residence (34 C.F.R. 300.622(a)(3)).
- Parental consent must be obtained before personally identifiable information is released to officials of participating agencies providing or paying for transition services according to an IEP.
- Additionally, parent consent is required when a school accesses reimbursement from Medicaid or private insurance for special education services. To bill Medicaid, the school must release to the Medicaid billing agency personally identifiable information, such as the student's name, social security or other student number, category of exceptionality, and other pertinent information.

IDEA 2004 has determined that schools must obtain parental consent each time access to public benefits or insurance is sought. They must also notify parents that the parents' refusal to allow access to their public benefits or insurance does not relieve the public agency of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided at no cost to the parents.

The Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) has provided informal guidance that schools can obtain consent one time annually for the specific services, and duration of services identified in a child's IEP, and not be required to obtain a separate consent each time a Medicaid agency or other public insurer is billed for the provision of required services. If the specific services or the duration of services change, the school must obtain consent to access Medicaid for the change in services (34 C.F.R. 300.154(d)(2)(iv)). A sample Parent Consent form to use to access Medicaid reimbursement included in Appendix A as Figure 9-5 (See Appendix A, Figure 1-9, Letter to Smith, OSEP Memo, Jan 2007; Figure 9-6, Kansas Medicaid Assistance Program Provider Manual.)

This memo does not address private insurance. The federal regulations also require that schools obtain parental consent for release of information each time the school accesses the child's private insurance. They must also notify parents that the parents' refusal to allow access to their insurance does not relieve the public agency of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided at no cost to the parents.

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.622 Consent.

(a) Parental consent must be obtained before personally identifiable information is disclosed to parties, other than officials of participating agencies in accordance with paragraph (b)(1) of this section, unless the information is contained in education records, and the disclosure is authorized without parental consent under 34 C.F.R. part 99.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(3) of this section, parental consent is not required before personally identifiable information is released to officials of participating agencies for purposes of meeting a requirement of this part.

(2) Parental consent, or the consent of an eligible child who has reached the age of majority under State law, must be obtained before personally identifiable information is released to officials of participating agencies providing or paying for transition services in accordance with §300.321(b)(3).

(3) If a child is enrolled, or is going to enroll in a private school that is not located in the LEA of the parent's residence, parental consent must be obtained before any personally identifiable information about the child is released between officials in the LEA where the private school is located and officials in the LEA of the parent's residence.

(d) Children with disabilities who are covered by public benefits or insurance.

(1) A public agency may use the Medicaid or other public benefits or insurance programs in which a child participates to provide or pay for services required under this part, as permitted under the public benefits or insurance program, except as provided in paragraph (d)(2) of this section.

(2) With regard to services required to provide FAPE to an eligible child under this part, the public agency--

(i) May not require parents to sign up for or enroll in public benefits or insurance programs in order for their child to receive FAPE under Part B of the Act;

(ii) May not require parents to incur an out-of-pocket expense such as the payment of a deductible or copay amount incurred in filing a claim for services provided pursuant to this part, but pursuant to paragraph (g)(2) of this section, may pay the cost that the parents otherwise would be required to pay;

(iii) May not use a child's benefits under a public benefits or insurance program if that use would--

(A) Decrease available lifetime coverage or any other insured benefit;

(B) Result in the family paying for services that would otherwise be covered by the public benefits or insurance program and that are required for the child outside of the time the child is in school;

(C) Increase premiums or lead to the discontinuation of benefits or insurance; or

(D) Risk loss of eligibility for home and community-based waivers, based on aggregate health-related expenditures; and

(iv)(A) Must obtain parental consent, consistent with §300.9, each time that access to public benefits or insurance is sought; and

(B) Notify parents that the parents' refusal to allow access to their public benefits or insurance does not relieve the public agency of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided at no cost to the parents.

(e) Children with disabilities who are covered by private insurance.

(1) With regard to services required to provide FAPE to an eligible child under this part, a public agency may access the parents' private insurance proceeds only if the parents provide consent consistent with §300.9.

(2) Each time the public agency proposes to access the parents' private insurance proceeds, the agency must--

(i) Obtain parental consent in accordance with paragraph (e)(1) of this section; and

(ii) Inform the parents that their refusal to permit the public agency to access their private insurance does not relieve the public agency of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided at no cost to the parents.

E. AMENDMENT OF RECORDS

Parents have the right to request that their child's education records be changed if something is inaccurate, misleading, or in violation of the student's rights of privacy. For example, if a child is evaluated and is identified with a disability or health condition that later is determined to be wrong, the parents may ask that the school remove the records relating to the inaccurate diagnosis.

If the school does not agree that the education records should be changed, staff must provide an opportunity for a hearing, following FERPA requirements. The hearing officer would be the school's hearing officer, not a special education due process hearing officer (34 C.F.R. 300.618).

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.618. Amendment of records at parent's request

- (a) A parent who believes that information in the education records collected, maintained, or used under this part is inaccurate or misleading or violates the privacy or other rights of the child may request the participating agency that maintains the information to amend the information.
- (b) The agency shall decide whether to amend the information in accordance with the request within a reasonable period of time of receipt of the request.
- (c) If the agency decides to refuse to amend the information in accordance with the request, it shall inform the parent of the refusal and advise the parent of the right to a hearing under Sec. 300.619.

F. DESTRUCTION OF RECORDS

Federal auditing requires the availability of education records for identified students for 5 years after they exit from special education services. After that period of time, schools may destroy records. However, before destroying special education records, the school must notify the parent (or the adult student) that the information is no longer needed to provide services to the student and that the school is proposing to destroy them.

The requirement to notify the parent or the adult student before records are destroyed may be problematic, if the student moves from the address last known to the school. In such cases, the school is advised to send a certified letter to the student at the last known address. If that letter is returned to the school, that return becomes the documentation of the school's attempt to inform the student of the proposed destruction of records. In such cases, the school may publish a public notice to students who graduated or left school five years previously. The notice should be addressed to students and guardians, advising them of the proposed destruction of records and asking them to contact the school if they object to the destruction.

Many schools inform parents of when the special education records of their child will be destroyed with a statement in the child's IEP. The following statement has been approved for insertion into an IEP:

"NOTICE OF DESTRUCTION OF SPECIAL EDUCATION RECORDS: Special education records for each child with an exceptionality are maintained by the school district until no longer needed to provide educational services to the child. This notice is to inform you that the special education records for this student will be destroyed after five (5) years following program completion or graduation from high school, unless the student (or the student's legal guardian) has taken possession of the records prior to that time."

Parents may also ask that their child's records be destroyed. However, a permanent record of the following information may be maintained without time limitation:

- A student's name, address, and phone number;
- His or her grades;
- Attendance record;
- Classes attended;
- Grade level completed; and
- Year completed.

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.624. Destruction of information

- (a) The public agency shall inform parents when personally identifiable information collected, maintained, or used under this part is no longer needed to provide educational services to the child.
- (b) The information must be destroyed at the request of the parents. However, a permanent record of a student's name, address, and phone number, his or her grades, attendance record, classes attended, grade level completed, and year completed may be maintained without time limitation.

G. AGE OF MAJORITY

In Kansas, the age of majority is 18. Students who are 18 years or older, unless they have a guardian appointed under State law, have the right to grant or withhold consent, have access to records, to amend records, and to file a complaint, etc. (See Chapter 1, Parent Rights In Special Education, for additional information on age of majority.)

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.625. Children's rights

- (a) The SEA shall provide policies and procedures regarding the extent to which children are afforded rights of privacy similar to those afforded to parents, taking into consideration the age of the child and type or severity of disability.
- (b) Under the regulations for the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (34 C.F.R. 99.5(a)), the rights of parents regarding education records are transferred to the student at age 18.
- (c) If the rights accorded to parents under Part B of the Act are transferred to a student who reaches the age of majority, consistent with Sec. 300.520, the rights regarding educational records in Secs. 300.613 through 300.624 must also be transferred to the student. However, the public agency must provide any notice required under section 615 of the Act to the student and the parents.

H. TEST PROTOCOLS

Some individualized testing involves the use of test protocols. These documents usually include the test questions or stimuli and the student's answers or responses. They may also include the correct answers, norm tables (scoring tables), scoring sheets, and examiner's notes. When a test protocol contains personally identifiable information directly related to a particular student, that protocol is an education record and a parent has a right to inspect and review it. In most cases, however, a parent would not have a right to a copy of a test protocol.

Requests for test protocols occur in varying contexts. Sometimes, parents ask to inspect or photocopy protocols maintained by schools or their personnel. Occasionally, schools want to review or copy protocols of the parents' independent educational evaluators. The variables here are whether one seeks to inspect the protocols or to copy them.

When a student with an exceptionality is the subject of a court or administrative hearing, parents may have additional legal tools for accessing test protocols. These tools include pretrial discovery, subpoenas, and the right to question witnesses about their records. Also, the US Department of Education has advised that a parent's FERPA right to inspect test protocols may include a right to copy them if ordered by a special education due process hearing officer or a judge in a legal proceeding.

Clearly, concerns exist about violating the test publisher's copyright protections. Schools are advised that Federal regulation 34 C.F.R. 300.613(b) would allow parents to inspect and review the records. However, if parents want to copy such records, the school may want to consult with their attorney. However, if failure to provide a copy of a requested protocol would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review their child's educational records, the school may be required to provide a copy to the parent (Letter to Thomas, 211 IDELR 420 (FPCO 1986)).

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.613(b)

(b) The right to inspect and review education records under this section includes--

- (2) The right to request that the agency provide copies of the records containing the information if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records...

I. DISCIPLINE RECORDS

Schools reporting a crime are allowed to forward the student's special education and disciplinary records to the appropriate authorities only if they have parent consent or if one of the FERPA exceptions to the consent requirement applies (34 C.F.R. 300.535(b)). See Section A of this chapter, and also Chapter 13 for more information about release of discipline records to law enforcement.

In addition, other Federal and State requirements are as follows:

- When schools send records of students to other schools, they are also required to include the discipline records. (Note: K.S.A. 72-5386 defines school records to include ALL personally identifiable data.)
- If school employees are required to make a report to a law enforcement agency, they may be charged with failure to report if they do not comply.
- If school employees report a crime, the school may not impose sanctions on them.
- If school employees report a crime in good faith, they have immunity from civil liability.

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.535(b)

- (1) An agency reporting a crime committed by a child with a disability shall ensure that copies of the special education and disciplinary records of the child are transmitted for consideration by the appropriate authorities to whom it reports the crime.
- (2) An agency reporting a crime under this section may transmit copies of the child's special education and disciplinary records only to the extent that the transmission is permitted by the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act.

Sec. 300.229. Disciplinary information

- (a) The State may require that a public agency include in the records of a child with a disability a statement of any current or previous disciplinary action that has been taken against the child and transmit the statement to the same extent that the disciplinary information is included in, and transmitted with, the student records of nondisabled children.
- (b) The statement may include a description of any behavior engaged in by the child that required disciplinary action, a description of the disciplinary action taken, and any other information that is relevant to the safety of the child and other individuals involved with the child.
- (c) If the State adopts such a policy, and the child transfers from one school to another, the transmission of any of the child's records must include both the child's current individualized education program and any statement of current or previous disciplinary action that has been taken against the child.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-89b04

- (a) Willful and knowing failure of a school employee to make a report required by subsection (b)(1) of K.S.A. 1998 Supp. 72-89b03, and amendments thereto, is a class B nonperson misdemeanor. Preventing or interfering with the intent to prevent, the making of a report required by subsection (b)(1) of K.S.A. 1998 Supp. 72-89b03, and amendments thereto is a class B nonperson misdemeanor.
- (b) Willful and knowing failure of any employee designated by a board of education to transmit reports made by school employees to the appropriate state or local law enforcement agency as required by subsection (b)(1) of K.S.A. 1998 Supp 72-89b03, and amendments thereto, is a class B nonperson misdemeanor.
- (c) No board of education shall terminate the employment of, or prevent or impair the profession of, or impose any other sanction on any school employee because the employee made an oral or written report relating to any criminal act that the employee knows has been committed or reasonably believes will be committed at school, on school property, or at a school supervised activity.

(d) Any board of education, and any member or employee thereof, participating without malice in the making of an oral or written report to a law enforcement agency relating to any criminal act that is known to have been committed or reasonably is believed will be committed at school, on school property, or at a school supervised activity shall have immunity from any civil liability that might otherwise be incurred or imposed. Any such participant shall have the same immunity with respect to participation in any judicial proceedings resulting from the report.

J. CHILD IN NEED OF CARE

As part of the Child in Need of Care case, the following agencies and people may freely exchange information:

- Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services;
- Commissioner of Juvenile Justice;
- Law enforcement agency receiving the report;
- Members of a Court-appointed multidisciplinary team;
- Entity mandated by Federal or State law to investigate child in need of care cases;
- Military enclave or Indian tribal organization authorized to investigate such cases;

Note that this list does NOT include educational agencies or school personnel.

However, the following agencies and people or entities must have access to information received by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services, law enforcement agency, or any juvenile intake and assessment worker. This access to records is limited to information reasonably necessary to carry out their lawful responsibilities to maintain their personal safety and that of others in their care; or to diagnose, treat, care for, or protect a child alleged to be in need of care. Accordingly, educational agencies may "receive" records from the agencies listed, but may not provide educational records to these agencies except as provided by FERPA.

1. Child named in the record;
2. Parent or other person responsible for the child's welfare, or the child's legal representative;
3. Court-Appointed Special Advocate for a child, Citizen Review Board, or other advocate that reports to the Court;
4. Person licensed to practice healing arts or mental health, in order to diagnose, care for, treat, or supervise:
  - a. a child suspected to be in need of care;
  - b. a member of the child's family; or a person who allegedly abused or neglected the child
  - c. Person or entity licensed or registered by the Secretary of Health and Environment to care for, treat, or supervise a child in need of care.
5. To assist a child in foster care or child care, the Secretary shall provide relevant information to foster parents or child care facility before placement and as such information becomes available to the Secretary;
6. Coroner or medical examiner when determining the cause of a child's death;
7. Child Death Review Board established under K.S.A. 22a-243;
8. Prospective adoptive parent before placing a child in their care;

11. Any educational institution to the extent necessary to enable the institution to provide the safest possible environment for its pupils and employees; and
12. Any educator to the extent needed to enable him/her to protect the personal safety of him/her and the pupils.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 38-1507

- (1) To those persons or entities with a need for information that is directly related to achieving the purposes of this code, or
  - (2) Upon an order of a court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to a determination by the court that disclosure of the reports and records is in the best interests of the child or are necessary for the proceedings before the court, or both, and are otherwise admissible in evidence. Violation of this subsection is a class B misdemeanor.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT CONFIDENTIALITY

1. What must a school do to provide parents reasonable access to their child's records?

Records should be in a location that parents can find, maintained during normal business hours, and not in a physically inaccessible area (downstairs or upstairs, with no elevator available). Upon request, someone who can interpret the records should be available to the parents. Parents may also request that copies of their child's education records be made for them. However, a school is required to provide copies of educational records only if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to review and inspect the records. If copies are provided schools may charge a reasonable fee and may take a reasonable time to provide the copies to the parents. In cases where failure to provide copies of records would effectively prevent a parent from exercising the right to inspect and review education records, and the parents are unable to pay the fee, the school must provide the records without charge.

2. Are school personnel required to provide parents access to their working files and anecdotal records?

FERPA and IDEA have included definitions of "education records." These definitions, while expansive, do not include the staff's working files and anecdotal records. FERPA regulation 34 C.F.R. 99.3 states that the term "education records" does not include "records that are kept in the sole possession of the maker of the record, are used only as a personal memory aid, and are not accessible or revealed to any other person except a temporary substitute for the maker of the record."

3. If a district cannot determine which Kansas school a student transferred from, may the State's Management Information System (MIS) be accessed to determine this information?

Yes. If the sending school district has used a FERPA notification form (See sample, Figure 9-1 in Appendix A), the Management Information System (MIS) data manager may inform the special education director of the receiving district of the student's previous district of attendance. The receiving district may then contact the sending district to request student records without parent consent. This exception to FERPA confidentiality requirements is in FERPA regulation 34 C.F.R. 99.31(a)(2).

4. Only a limited amount of information is needed to bill Medicaid (not the entire education record). May this limited information be released without parent consent to the Medicaid billing agency in order to access reimbursement for special education services?

No. Parent consent is required by FERPA, because the information being released is personally identifiable (student's name, social security or other student number, category of exceptionality, etc.). In addition, schools must obtain parental consent to access public insurance such as Medicaid, at least annually for the specific services, and duration of those services identified in the child's IEP. The school must obtain parental consent to access Medicaid for any change in a service or amount of a service.

5. What is the school's obligation to provide special education when the student cannot be enrolled because s/he does not have documentation of immunizations?

K.S.A. 72-5209 requires documentation of immunization before admitting students enrolling for the first time in a Kansas school. This may include a student transferring from an out-of-state school, or a child enrolling, for the first time in Kansas, in a kindergarten or in a preschool or a day care program operated by a school. K.S.A. 72-5211a permits school districts to adopt policies, in conformance with K.S.A. 72-5209, to exclude from school any student, enrolling in Kansas for the first time, who has not presented documentation of immunization. The school district is not required to provide special education services until the documentation is received.

These State health laws override IDEA, just as they override general education students' constitutional right to attend school. The school district should advise the student and parents that FAPE is available when the documentation for compliance with State health laws is received. K.S.A. 72-5211a specifies that the compulsory school attendance law does not apply to any student excluded from school for failure to document immunization records. Thus, such students should not be reported as truant. However, State law requires schools to include this information, when transferring education records to a new school.

6. When a student is in a private school and receives special education services from the public school, who keeps the student's educational record?

If the student receives special education services through the public school, the public school is responsible for maintaining the student's educational record. The private school may also have records, or copies of the public school records, including the student's IEP, if appropriate.

7. What should the school do if during a due process hearing, the parents request a copy of their child's test protocol?

According to the US Department of Education, under FERPA parents have the right to inspect test protocols, which may include a right to copy them if ordered by a special education due process hearing officer or a judge in a hearing. Due to concerns about violating the test publisher's copyright rules, the school may want to consult with their attorney. However, schools are required to provide copies of the records if failure to provide those copies would effectively prevent the parent from exercising the right to inspect and review the records (34 C.F.R. 300.613(b)(2)).

CHAPTER 10

MEDIATION

INTRODUCTION

Mediation is one of three formal methods of resolving disputes in special education at the local level. Other methods are formal complaint, which is discussed in Chapter 11, and due process hearing, which is discussed in Chapter 12. To begin the process of mediation, both parties must agree to mediate. Either the parents or a school representative may suggest this option initially by asking the other party if they are willing to mediate the disputed issues. The cost of mediation is borne by the State; there are no costs to either the parents or the local school district.

The use of mediation can have the following benefits over a formal complaint or due process hearing:

- Mediation uses the strengths of both participants to solve problems.
- Because it is voluntary throughout the process, and because a mediator has no authority to order any particular resolution, mediation is a safe way for both parties to offer and consider alternatives.
- Mediation can be less antagonistic.
- Mediation is less time consuming.
- Mediation is less costly for both parties.
- If an agreement is reached, it is written and committed to by the parties, themselves, rather than ordered by a hearing officer or the Kansas State Department of Education.
- A negotiated agreement may help with future positive relationships.

Forms to request mediation should be available in each school district. The building administrator, special education director, or the Mediation consultant at Special Education Services may be contacted for the forms. Copies of these forms are included in Appendix A. Figure 10-2 is the Request for Mediation, Figure 10-3 is the Agreement to Mediate, and Figure 10-4 is the Confidentiality Pledge, Timeline for Mediation Figure 10-5, and sample Rules of Mediation, Figure 10-6. All forms can be found on www.kansped.org.

Each of the following topics in the State mediation process is discussed within this chapter:

- A. Mediation Process
- B. Mediation Requests
- C. Mediation Participants
- D. Special Education Mediators
- E. Mediation Results

A. MEDIATION PROCESS

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) has established mediation procedures to allow school districts and parents to resolve any matter regarding special education, including matters arising prior to the filing of a due process complaint. State statute, at K.S.A. 72-996, and State regulations at K.A.R. 91-40-28, and 91-40-29 set up the following provisions for special education mediation in Kansas:

- The mediation process is voluntary for both the parents and the school.
- Mediation may not be used to deny or delay a parent's right to a due process hearing, or any other parent right.
- Mediation is conducted by a qualified, impartial mediator who is trained in effective mediation techniques.
- KSDE maintains a list of qualified mediators and appoints the special education mediator.
- KSDE is responsible for the costs of mediation.

- Mediation must be provided in a timely manner and at a location that is convenient for both parties in the dispute.
- Agreements reached during mediation must be in writing and must include the resolution of each issue for which agreement was reached. Every mediation agreement must also include a statement that:
  - Discussions during mediation must be kept confidential and may not be used as evidence in any subsequent due process hearings or civil proceedings;
  - Each party understands that the agreement is legally binding upon them; and
  - The agreement may be enforced in state or federal court.

The goal of the parties in mediation is to reach an agreement that is workable for all. If an agreement is reached it is put in written form by the mediator and signed by both parties. If issues prove to be irresolvable, the mediator will declare that an impasse has been reached and the mediation will be terminated. Figure 10-1 in Appendix A is a flow chart showing the steps involved in the mediation process.

B. MEDIATION REQUESTS

When parents or school personnel disagree about a special education issue, either party may request mediation. However, both parties must agree to use this process. Therefore, the first step in initiating a special education mediation is to ask the other party if it is willing to mediate the disputed issue. Mediation may be requested even if a due process hearing has been filed. This is one reason that the timeline for mediation is short. Mediation must be completed within the due process timeline, and mediation may not be used to delay the parents' right to due process. However, the due process hearing timeline may be extended by the due process hearing officer for a specific period of time during the mediation process if requested by the parties (34 C.F.R. 300.515(c)). Mediation is often viewed as a win-win situation, a positive process that may often avoid potential litigation. At a minimum, mediation must be available to resolve disputes relating to the following issues:

1. Identification,
2. Evaluation,
3. Placement, and
4. Provision of a free appropriate public education to the child.

Once both parties agree to mediation, they must complete and sign the three required forms, which are faxed and/or mailed to the mediation consultant at the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE Special Education Services, 120 SE 10th Avenue, Topeka, KS 66612; fax 785-296-6715).

- (1) Agreement to Mediate: This one-page form indicates that both parties: (a) understand that mediation is voluntary; (b) agree to enter into mediation; (c) agree to abide by the procedures and guidelines for special education mediations; (d) agree not to record (electronically or otherwise) a mediation session; (e) agree that the mediator will not make decisions regarding the disputed issues; and (f) understand that agreements must be in writing and are legally binding and enforceable in a state or federal court. Each party must sign this agreement;
- (2) Confidentiality Pledge: This one page form indicates that both parties: (a) understand and agree that discussions during mediation are confidential; (b) agree not to call the mediator or anyone associated with the mediator as a witness in any judicial, administrative or arbitration proceeding regarding the mediated dispute; (c) agree not to subpoena or demand the production of any records, notes, work product or other written information of the mediator; (d) agree that if a party does subpoena a mediator or a mediators records, the mediator will contest the subpoena and the requesting party agrees to reimburse the mediator for all expenses related to contesting the subpoena, including attorney fees plus the mediator's hourly rate; and
- (3) Request for Mediation: This one-page form includes contact information for use by the mediator. The contact information consists of the name, address, and phone number of the parties, the name and birth date of the student and whether or not a due process hearing has also been requested. This form also asks the parties to agree on some preferred dates for which they are both available to mediate. If the parties list some preferred dates on this form, the KSDE will attempt to find a mediator who is available on one of those dates. The preferred dates should be at least seven to ten days after the date of the request for mediation so that the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) has time to appoint a mediator and allow the mediator to arrange for a mediation session. If a mediation session is needed more quickly, the parties may request an earlier date by telephone and send the mediation forms to the KSDE electronically. The KSDE will attempt to accommodate all requests.

When KSDE receives a request for a special education mediation, the mediation coordinator immediately appoints a mediator. The mediator notifies both parties and arranges for mediation. The location must be convenient to the parties and should be acceptable to everyone. A neutral location is preferred. If the mediator is not familiar with neutral locations in the area where the mediation will be, she/he will usually ask the school representative for suggestions (such as a room in a county courthouse or public library). In some cases where neutral sites are not readily available, mediations can be held on school property.

C. MEDIATION PARTICIPANTS

Mediation is an informal process that includes discussion of the issues and proposed resolutions. Generally, discussions include the mediator, the parents, and a school representative. The school representative is often not from the IEP Team, because this group has not been able to reach agreement. Mediation seems to be more successful if the school representative is someone else who is knowledgeable about the issues and has decision making authority.

Generally, the likelihood of reaching an agreement is enhanced by keeping the number of participants to a minimum. However, either the parents or the school representative may ask an outside advocate to attend. If the parents are not able to participate fully and need assistance (because of reasons such as not speaking English, having a disability themselves, or not fully understanding the issues or procedures), the parents may wish to have an advocate to assist them.

In Kansas, attorneys are allowed to participate in special education mediations. However, mediations generally prove to be more successful when the parties work on their own, without attorneys present. Ultimately, because mediation is a voluntary process, any party that objects to the presence of an attorney may withdraw from the mediation. If for some reason, attorneys or advocates become involved in a mediation session, the mediator will establish ground rules for the participation of advocates or attorneys, again in an effort to ensure that discussions are between the parties to the dispute.

D. SPECIAL EDUCATION MEDIATORS

In Kansas, in order to be considered trained and qualified, mediators must fulfill two requirements:

1. Demonstrate competency in special education law by successfully passing a written examination with at least 90 percent accuracy (a special education law class sponsored or approved by the state board is conducted periodically to help mediators with this requirement); and
2. Complete a program sponsored or approved by the state board concerning effective mediation techniques and procedures, and the role and responsibilities of a mediator (K.A.R. 91-40-29(a)).

After initially qualifying as a mediator, Kansas requires that to remain eligible, special education mediators must have continuing education program in special education law conducted or approved by KSDE (K.A.R. 91-40-29(c)).

Employees of KSDE, local schools or other education agencies, or school boards may not serve as a mediator for special education disputes in the State of Kansas. Others who have a real or perceived conflict of interest may also not serve as special education mediators. Only the Kansas State Department of Education may appoint special education mediators.

E. MEDIATION RESULTS

During mediation, the mediator will work with both parties to reach an agreement. If mediation discussions result in both parties' reaching agreement, the mediator records the results in a written mediation agreement, which is signed by both parties. When the issues in mediation involve IEP decisions, the mediation agreement may become part of the student's IEP if agreed to by the parties. It is not necessary for the IEP team to meet because the decisions are enforceable and have been made during the mediation with the responsible parties involved (the parents and the school representative). The actions agreed upon in the mediation should be implemented immediately, unless the mediation agreement specifies otherwise.

If the IEP is changed by adding the mediation agreement, the IEP team may write a new IEP or amend the existing IEP to reflect the mediation agreement. The school is responsible for following up with the required notice and consent forms. The revised IEP is then implemented. If the mediation agreement is not part of the IEP the school must ensure that any person responsible for implementing the agreement is informed of their responsibilities.

However, if the mediation is not successful, the mediator may declare that the mediation is at impasse and suggest that both parties consider other methods for dispute resolution, such as Formal Complaint (Chapter 11) and/or Due Process (Chapter 12).

State Statute:

- (2) If a parent who files a due process complaint fails to participate in a resolution meeting for which the agency has made reasonable efforts to give the parent notice, the timelines to complete the resolution process and begin the due process hearing shall be delayed until the parent attends a resolution meeting or the agency, at the end of the 30-day resolution period, requests the hearing officer to dismiss the due process complaint.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT MEDIATION

1. How are mediators selected to conduct a special education mediation?

The mediation coordinator at the Kansas State Department of Education chooses a mediator on a random basis from a list of trained and qualified mediators. Mediators will have successfully completed a training program designed for special education mediators.

2. What are the qualifications of a special education mediator?

The mediator will:

- Have received formal training in the mediation process and in Federal and State laws and regulations regarding special education;
- Be on an approved list of qualified mediators at KSDE;
- Have no personal or professional interest that would conflict with his/her objectivity;
- Have no prior involvement in any decisions regarding the student's identification, evaluation, special education program, or educational placement;
- Be professional, impartial; and
- Be able to complete the required duties and responsibilities.

3. What is the role of the mediator?

The mediator helps the parents and school representative clarify issues in disagreement and find solutions that satisfy both parties. The mediator serves as:

- Convener--by contacting the parties to arrange for the mediation.
- Educator--by informing the parties about the mediation process and other conflict resolution procedures including due process hearings.
- Communicator and Facilitator--by using strategies to be certain that each party is fully heard in the mediation.
- Translator--by replacing or reframing communication so that both parties are understood and received.
- Questioner and Clarifier--by probing issues and confirming understandings.
- Process Advisor--by suggesting procedures for making progress in mediation including caucus meetings and consultations with others.
- Catalyst--by offering options for consideration, stimulating new perspectives, and offering ideas for consideration.
- Closer--by reducing the agreement to writing and obtaining signatures of both parties.

4. How long does mediation take?

Many mediation sessions have been successfully completed in half a day. The mediator will determine whether progress is being made or whether additional time is needed for resolution.

5. Is special education mediation binding?

If both parties sign the mediation agreement, it is binding on both parties, and is enforceable in a State or Federal court. The rules of mediation (Figure 10-6) state that the success of the written agreement depends on good faith efforts of both parties.

6. When can mediation be requested?

Mediation can be requested when it is believed that an impasse has been reached at the local level on any matter involving the identification, evaluation, placement, or the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child. Either the parents or the school representative should discuss with the other party if mediation is an option, and should ask for mediation as early as possible. Mediation can occur before or after a special education due process hearing has been requested or when a hearing concerning an interim alternative educational placement is being considered. Mediation cannot be used to deny or delay an impartial special education due process hearing once it has been requested.

7. Who should I call for information or to request mediation?

Information or forms may be requested from a building administrator, special education director, Families Together (800-264-6343), or The Disability Rights Center of Kansas (785-273-9661). You may also contact the mediation coordinator on the Special Education Services Team of the Kansas State Department of Education.

Address: 120 SE Tenth Avenue, Topeka, KS 66612-1182

Phone: 800-203-9462 or 785-296-5478

Fax: 785-296-6715

Email: mward@ksde.org

8. How soon is mediation scheduled after the parties request it?

A mediation conference should be scheduled as soon as possible after receiving a request for a mediation conference. Some flexibility is permitted to accommodate availability of both parties. The meeting must be in a place that is convenient for both parties. On the Mediation Request Form, the parties should request specific dates and times when both parties are available. This should allow a reasonable period of time for the selection of a mediator and for the mediator to set up a mediation session. Two weeks is usually enough time to accommodate such a request. One of the reasons time is so critical is that mediation may be requested even if a special education due process hearing has been filed, but the mediation process may not delay the parents' right to due process.

9. Who pays for mediation?

The fee and expenses for the mediator, if any, are paid by Special Education Services at the Kansas State Department of Education. Mediation is available at no cost to the school or the parents.

CHAPTER 11

FORMAL COMPLAINT

INTRODUCTION

Formal complaint is one of the methods parents or others have to resolve special education disagreements with the school district. Although most differences are successfully resolved at the local level, three state processes are available to parents, if they are at impasse with the school district:

- Formal complaint,
- Mediation (Chapter 10), and
- Due process hearing (Chapter 12).

Formal complaint is one of the parent rights (procedural safeguards, see Chapter 1) afforded under Federal and State regulations (K.A.R. 91-40-51; 34 C.F.R. 300.151). The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) is mandated to make available an opportunity for individuals or organizations to file formal complaints against the school. Figure 11-1 in Appendix A is a flow chart that illustrates the steps in the process, and Figure 11-2 lists the timelines and responsible parties for the required steps.

For information about the formal complaint process, contact Families Together (800-264-6343), Kansas Disability Rights Center (877-776-1541), or Special Education Services at the KSDE (800-203-9462). See Figure 11-3 for the Formal Complaint form as well as the Special Education Services home page www.kansped.org.

This chapter outlines the steps involved in the formal complaint process:

- A. Filing a Formal Complaint
- B. Investigating the Complaint
- C. Following Up on the Complaint
- D. Appealing the Decision
- E. Sanctions by the State Board of Education

A. FILING A FORMAL COMPLAINT

Any individual or organization may file a formal complaint if they believe that the school district is not complying with Federal or State laws or regulations relating to special education. The formal complaint must be for a situation that occurred during the past year.

The formal complaint must be in writing and signed by the person or organization making the complaint. The complaint must state that the school is not complying with the requirements of IDEA, the State Special Education for Exceptional Children Act, or the corresponding Federal or State regulations and give the facts upon which the statement is based. When the complaint involves a specific child, the complaint must also include the following:

- The child's name and address of residence, or other contact information if the child is a homeless child or youth;
- the name of the school the child is attending;
- a description of the problem involving the child; and
- a proposed resolution to the problem, if a possible resolution is known and available to the complainant.

The party filing the complaint must forward a copy of the complaint to the school against which the allegations are made at the same time the complaint is filed with the commissioner of education.

The parent of any child with an exceptionality (disabilities and giftedness) including eligible students receiving services in public schools, private schools and other educational settings are entitled to file a formal complaint if they believe appropriate legal procedures have not been followed or implemented.

If a formal complaint is received that is part of a due process hearing, or the complaint contains multiple issues of which one or more are part of such a hearing, the State must set aside the State complaint, or any part of the complaint that is being addressed in the due process hearing until the hearing is over. Any issue in the State complaint that is not a part of the due process hearing must be resolved through the State process.

Figure 11-3 in Appendix A is the form that is used to file a formal complaint. This form may be faxed to the Team Leader, Special Education Services Team (785-296-6715), but the original must then be mailed to the Kansas State Department of Education, Special Education Services, 120 SE Tenth Avenue, Topeka, KS 66612. Additionally, a copy of this completed form must be sent to the school district against which the complaint is filed.

B. INVESTIGATING THE COMPLAINT

The Special Education Services Team at the Kansas State Department of Education must resolve a formal complaint within 30 calendar days from the date the complaint is received in the office, unless exceptional circumstances exist.

When a formal complaint is received a letter acknowledging receipt of the formal complaint is sent to the person making the complaint, the special education director, and the superintendent. A copy of the formal complaint is attached with the letter to the special education director and the superintendent.

The complaint investigator will contact the person making the complaint and the special education director to clarify the issue(s), review all relevant records and documents, and determine whether or not the facts stated in the complaint are correct and, if so, whether they substantiate a violation of the requirements of special education laws or regulations.

The investigator will contact the agency against which the complaint is filed to allow the agency to respond to the complaint with facts and information supporting its position, offer a proposal to resolve the complaint, or offer to engage in mediation to resolve the complaint. Both parties can provide additional information to the investigator that is relevant to the issue. Neither party can introduce a new issue during the investigation.

After the investigation, the complaint investigator writes a report of the findings addressing each of the allegations in the complaint and which contains: (a) findings of fact and conclusions; (b) the reasons for KSDE's final decision; and (c) any corrective action or actions that are required including the time period within which each action is to be taken. The report is to be sent to the parties within 30 days of the receipt of the complaint unless the parties agree to extend the 30 day timeline to engage in mediation.

C. FOLLOW UP ON THE COMPLAINT

If the report from the formal complaint requires corrective actions, the school shall, within 10 calendar days of the date of the report, submit one of the following to the KSDE Special Education Services Team:

1. Documentation to verify it accepts the corrective action(s) in the report, if any;
2. A written request for more time to complete the required action(s), with justification for this request; or
3. A written notice of appeal.

If the district asks for more time to complete one or more of the required corrective actions, a review committee of at least three people at KSDE are appointed by the Commissioner to review the request and the justification for an extension. The committee shall make a decision regarding the request within five business days of the date that the request was received, and their decision is final. If the school fails to respond to a report within the time allowed sanctions may be invoked.

When the corrective actions are completed by the school, the Special Education Services Team sends a notice of completion to the school with a copy to the person making the complaint. At that point, the complaint file is closed.

D. APPEALING THE DECISION

After the person making the complaint and the school receive the written report of findings, each has 10 calendar days from the date of the report to file an appeal. Each notice of appeal shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect.

The following steps are followed for appeals:

1. An appeal committee of at least three KSDE members shall be appointed by the Commissioner to review the report and to consider information provided by the school, the complainant, or others.
2. The hearing process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the appeal notice.
3. A decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed, unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist. Then the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible.

If the person making the complaint or the school does not appeal the decision and no corrective actions are required, the complaint file is closed.

E. SANCTIONS BY THE STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

The Kansas State Board of Education has sanctions available if corrective action required by a formal complaint investigation is not implemented. Additionally, if an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by a school, that district must initiate the required corrective action immediately. If after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the school district will be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:

- the issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
- the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
- the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
- any combination of the above actions.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-51. Filing complaints with the state department of education. (a) Any person or organization may file a written, signed complaint alleging that an agency has violated a state or federal special education law or regulation. Also, a prevailing party in a due process hearing may file a complaint alleging that the other party has failed to implement the hearing decision. The complaint shall include the following information:

- (1) A statement that the agency has violated a requirement of state or federal special education laws or regulations;
  - (2) the facts on which the statement is based;
  - (3) the signature of and contact information for the complainant; and
  - (4) if the complaint involves a specific child, the following information:
    - (A) The child's name and address of residence, or other contact information if the child is a homeless child or youth;
    - (B) the name of the school the child is attending;
    - (C) a description of the problem involving the child; and
    - (D) a proposed resolution to the problem, if a possible resolution is known and available to the complainant.
- (b)(1) The complaint shall allege a violation that occurred not more than one year before the date the complaint is received and shall be filed with the commissioner of education.
- (2) The party filing the complaint shall forward a copy of the complaint to the agency against which the allegations are made at the same time the complaint is filed with the commissioner of education.
- (c) Upon receipt of a complaint, an investigation shall be initiated. At a minimum, each investigation shall include the following:
- (1) A discussion with the complainant during which additional information may be gathered and specific allegations of noncompliance identified, verified, and recorded;
  - (2) contact with the agency against which the complaint is filed to allow the agency to respond to the complaint with facts and information supporting its position, offer a proposal to resolve the complaint, or offer to engage in mediation to resolve the complaint; and
  - (3) a written report of findings of fact and conclusions, including reasons for the decision, and any corrective action or actions that are required, including the time period within which each action is to be taken. Unless the parent and the agency agree to engage in mediation, this report shall be sent to the parties within 30 days of the receipt of the complaint. If the parties mediate but fail to resolve the issues, the report shall be sent 30 days after the department received notice that mediation has failed.
- (d) An on-site investigation may be conducted before issuing a report.
- (e)(1) If a report requires corrective action by an agency, that agency, within 10 days of the date of the report, shall submit to the state director of special education one of the following:
- (A) Documentation to verify acceptance of the corrective action or actions specified in the report;
  - (B) a written request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more of the corrective actions specified in the report, together with justification for the request; or
  - (C) a written notice of appeal. Each appeal shall be made in accordance with subsection (f).
- (2) If an agency files a request for an extension of time within which to complete one or more corrective actions required in a report, a review committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the request and the offered justification for the extension of time. A decision on the request shall be made by the committee within five business days of the date the request was received. The decision of the review committee shall be final.
  - (3) If a local education agency fails to respond to a report within the time allowed, the sanctions listed in paragraph (f) (2) may be invoked.
- (f) Appeals.(1) Any agency or complainant may appeal any of the findings or conclusions of a compliance report prepared by the special education section of the department by filing a written notice of appeal with the state commissioner of education. Each notice shall be filed within 10 days from the date of the report. Each notice shall provide a detailed statement of the basis for alleging that the report is incorrect. Upon receiving an appeal, an appeal committee of at least three department of education members shall be appointed by the commissioner to review the report and to consider the information provided by the local education agency, the complainant, or others. The appeal process, including any hearing conducted by the appeal committee, shall be completed within 15 days from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal, and a decision shall be rendered within five days after the appeal process is completed unless the appeal committee determines that exceptional circumstances exist with respect to the particular complaint. In this event, the decision shall be rendered as soon as possible by the appeal committee.
- (2) If an appeal committee affirms a compliance report that requires corrective action by an agency, that agency shall initiate the required corrective action immediately. If, after five days, no required corrective action has been initiated, the agency shall be notified of the action that will be taken to assure compliance as determined by the department. This action may include any of the following:
    - (A) The issuance of an accreditation deficiency advisement;
    - (B) the withholding of state or federal funds otherwise available to the agency;
    - (C) the award of monetary reimbursement to the complainant; or
    - (D) any combination of the actions specified in paragraph (f)(2).
- (g) (1) If a complaint is received that is also the subject of a due process hearing or that contains multiple issues of which one or more are part of the due process hearing, the complaint or the issues that are part of the due process hearing shall be set aside until conclusion of the hearing.
- (2) If an issue that has previously been decided in a due process hearing involving the same parties is raised in a complaint, the due process hearing decision shall be binding on that issue and the complainant informed of this fact.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT FORMAL COMPLAINT

1. Who is the contact to file a formal complaint?

Parents, individuals, or organizations who believe that the school district or cooperative has violated Federal or State laws or Federal or State regulations relating to special education should contact the KSDE, Special Education Services Team.

Phone: 785-296-5478, or 800-203-9462

Fax: 785-296-6715

Address: Kansas State Dept. of Education, 120 SE Tenth Avenue, Topeka, KS 66612

Homepage: www.kansped.org

Email: mward@ksde.org

2. How long does the investigation of a complaint take?

The complaint must be investigated and a report written with the findings of the complaint investigator within 30 calendar days of the date the complaint was received at the Kansas State Department of Education. Upon completion of a written report, the school or the complainant has 10 calendar days for the school to comply with the corrective action plan, or file an appeal.

3. May parents of children in private schools, who are receiving special education services, file a formal complaint?

Yes. Formal complaint is available to parents (or another individual or organization), even if services provided in a private school are on a Services Plan, and not an IEP.

4. May parents of children who are gifted file a formal complaint?

Yes. The formal complaint process is available to parents of children who are disabled or gifted. In addition, another individual or organization may file a formal complaint.

5. May parents of young children file a formal complaint?

Yes. For young children from birth to age 3, formal complaint is available through the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, 785-296-6135 or 800-332-6262. For young children who are eligible beginning at age 3, formal complaint is available to parents of children who are disabled or developmentally delayed through KSDE, 785-296-5478, or 800-203-9462.

6. Who can file a formal complaint?

Basically, anyone who has knowledge that the proper legal procedures were not followed or implemented may file a formal complaint with KSDE. This would include, but is not limited to, parents, parent advocates, the student if age 18, grandparents, foster parents, an individual, or an organization. In addition, it may be that in unusual circumstances, a member of the school team could file a formal complaint.

7. Does filing a formal complaint waive the parents' right to file for a due process hearing?

No. Parents may file a formal complaint before, at the same time, or after filing for a due process hearing. However, if the issue is the same, the formal complaint investigation will be suspended until due process is resolved.

CHAPTER 12

DUE PROCESS HEARINGS

INTRODUCTION

Due process is a set of procedures that seeks to ensure fairness of educational decisions and accountability, both for parents and for educational professionals. Due process rights begin when educational professionals or the parents request an initial evaluation to determine whether or not a student is eligible and needs special education and related services. Every special education due process hearing and review must be provided for at no cost to the child or the parent of the child. The costs of the initial hearing must be provided for and paid by the school district except for attorney fees.

The due process hearing provides a forum where disagreements about the identification, evaluation, educational placement, and provision of a free appropriate public education for students with exceptionalities may be adjudicated. Although Federal regulations refer to due process rights for educators and parents of students with disabilities, in Kansas those same rights are also afforded to students with giftedness.

Usually parents and school personnel assume their responsibilities in regard to the education of children with exceptionalities and have little or no difficulty in reaching mutual agreement about the initiation, continuation, or termination of special education services. When disagreements arise, due process is available to bring in an impartial special education due process hearing officer to make a ruling. Ultimately, the intent of Federal and State special education due process requirements is to protect the rights of children from inappropriate actions by schools or by parents.

Parents are encouraged to contact Families Together (800-264-6343), the Disability Rights Center of Kansas (877-776-1541) other parent advocacy groups, or the Kansas State Department of Education (800-203-9462) to seek assistance. Other avenues to resolve disagreements include mediation (Chapter 10) and formal complaint (Chapter 11). Only as a last resort should the legal method of a special education due process hearing and appeal procedure be used. The special education due process hearing procedures are somewhat complicated. This chapter describes these procedures, but it is not a substitute for competent legal advice. Parents considering a request for a due process hearing are encouraged to consult with an attorney who practices in special education law.

In Appendix A, Figure 12-1 is a chart that shows the steps in special education due process, Figure 12-2 is the Request for Due Process Hearing for District form, Figure 12-3 is the Request for Due Process Hearing for Parents, and Figure 12-4 illustrates how special education due process hearing officers are assigned. ## A. FILING FOR DUE PROCESS

Either the school district or the parents of an exceptional child may initiate a special education due process hearing to resolve differences about a child's identification, evaluation, educational placement, or provision of a free appropriate public education.

The due process complaint must allege a violation that occurred not more than two years before the date the parent or public agency knew or should have known about the alleged action that forms the basis of the due process complaint.

There are some exceptions to this timeline, including when a school has misrepresented that it has resolved the problem or the school has withheld information that it was legally required to give to the parent (34 C.F.R. 300.507(a)(2); K.S.A. 72-972a(a)(1)(A)).

If the student is age 18, the student has the right to file for a due process hearing, unless a court has determined otherwise. To make their request, the party filing the complaint or the attorney for that party sends a copy of the Due Process Complaint Notice to the other party and to the Kansas State Department of Education, Special Education Services. This notice is confidential and must contain the following information:

- name of the child;
- address of the child's residence (or in the case of a homeless child or youth, available contact information for the child);
- name of the school the child is attending;
- description of the nature of the problem and the facts that form the basis of the complaint; and
- a proposed resolution of the problem. (K.S.A. 72-972a(a)(B))

When the school receives this request for a due process hearing, school personnel are required to:

- inform parents about mediation;
- inform parents of free or low-cost legal services; and
- provide a copy of the Parent Rights document for the first due process complaint in the school year (34 C.F.R. 300.504). (Figure 1-2 in Appendix A).

B. ASSIGNING A SPECIAL EDUCATION DUE PROCESS HEARING OFFICER

The school district is responsible for due process hearings, including assigning special education due process hearing officers (K.S.A. 72-973; K.S.A. 72-973a). After May 20, 2000, any newly appointed special education due process hearing officer must be an attorney. A special education due process hearing officer can have no personal or professional interest that would conflict with his/her objectivity. The special education due process hearing officer may not be an employee of the school district that is responsible for the child's education. Figure 12-4 in Appendix A is a chart that shows how special education due process hearing officers are appointed.

Kansas regulations also provide for a system of choice for parents in selecting and approving potential special education due process hearing officers. The school district's responsibility is to maintain a current list of trained, qualified special education due process hearing officers (not more than 3). This list must include the names and qualifications of the special education due process hearing officers who are available. It is good practice for the school to contact potential special education due process hearing officers before placing their names on the list to ensure that they would be available for the hearing.

Not more than 5 business days after a due process complaint is received the school must furnish the parents a list of qualified special education due process hearing officers (not more than 3) and a description of the process for selecting a special education due process hearing officer. Generally, the school district provides a list of two to three names of special education due process hearing officers and their qualifications to the parents. After the parents receive the list, the parent has five days to strike any or all special education due process hearing officers from the list. If the parent does NOT strike all names from the list, the school may select any special education due process hearing officer not stricken.

If the parents notify the school that they are striking all names on the list, the school contacts Special Education Services (800-203-9462) within 3 business days of receiving the parents' notice. Special Education Services then must appoint a special education due process hearing officer within 3 business days of receiving the school's request to appoint a special education due process hearing officer. The complete list of qualified special education due process hearing officers is maintained by KSDE. (K.S.A. 72-973(a); K.A.R. 91-40-28(d))

The school will also have hearing officers to resolve other matters not related to special education, such as the school's disciplinary hearing officer. For special education due process hearings, however, a special education due process hearing officer is required. This person is trained and qualified to conduct special education due process hearings. To differentiate between hearing officers, the complete term "special education due process hearing officer" will be used in this chapter.

C. RESOLUTION MEETING

When the parent has requested a due process hearing, the school must schedule a resolution meeting within 15 days of receiving the complaint notice. The school must convene a resolution meeting with the parent and the member or members of the IEP team who have specific knowledge of the facts identified in the complaint and a representative of the school who has the authority to make binding decisions on behalf of the school. The parent and the school determine which members of the IEP team will attend the meeting. The school may not include their attorney unless the parents bring their attorney.

The purpose of this meeting is for the parent of the child to discuss and explain the complaint, including the facts that form the basis of the complaint. The school then has an opportunity to resolve the complaint. If the meeting results in a resolution of the complaint, the parties develop a legally binding written agreement that both the parent and the representative of the school signs. The agreement is, by law, enforceable in any state or federal court. However, the law also permits either party to void the agreement within 3 business days of the date the agreement was signed.

If a resolution of the complaint is not reached at the meeting and the school has not resolved the complaint to the satisfaction of the parent within 30 days of the school's receipt of the complaint, the due process hearing procedures will be implemented and all of the applicable timelines for a due process hearing will commence.

Failure of the parent to participate in a resolution meeting when s/he has not waived the resolution process or requested to use mediation will delay the timelines for the resolution process and due process until the meeting is held (K.A.R. 91-40-28(f); 34 C.F.R. 300.510(b)(3)). In addition, if the school is unable to obtain the participation of the parent in the resolution meeting after reasonable efforts have been made (and documented) the school may, at the conclusion of the 30 day resolution period, request that the special education due process hearing officer dismiss the parents due process complaint (K.A.R. 91-40-28(f)(2); 34 C.F.R. 300.510(b)(4)).

If an agency fails to hold and participate a resolution meeting within 15 days of receiving a due process complaint, the parent may request the special education due process hearing officer to begin the due process hearing and commence the 45 day timeline for its completion (K.A.R. 91-40-28(f)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.510(b)(5)).

A resolution meeting, however, is not required if the parent and the school agree, in writing, to waive the resolution meeting, or they agree to use mediation to attempt to resolve the complaint. (K.S.A. 72-973(a))

D. PREHEARING REQUIREMENTS

The party receiving a due process hearing notice must send to the party filing the notice, a response that specifically addresses the issues raised in the complaint within 10 days of receiving the complaint (K.S.A. 72-972a(d)).

If either the school or the parent believes that a notice of due process it has received does not meet the legal notice requirements (see Section A of this chapter), they may submit to the special education due process hearing officer a notice of insufficiency of the due process notice. A notice of insufficiency must be submitted within 15 days of the date of the party's receipt of the due process notice. The special education due process hearing officer has an additional 5 days to determine whether or not the original complaint notice is sufficient. The special education due process hearing officer shall immediately notify the parents and the school in writing of his/her decision.

If the school has not sent a prior written notice to the parent regarding the problem described in the parent's due process complaint notice, the school, within 10 days of receiving the complaint, must send to the parent a response that includes: (1) an explanation of why the agency proposed or refused to take the action raised in the complaint; (2) a description of other options that the IEP team considered and the reasons why those options were rejected; (3) a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the agency used as the basis for the proposed or refused action; and (4) a description of the other factors that are relevant to the agency's proposed or refused action (34 DFR 300.508(e)(1); K.S.A. 72-972a(c)).

A party may amend its due process complaint notice only if: (a) the other party consents in writing to such amendment and is given the opportunity to resolve the complaint through a resolution meeting; or (b) the special education due process hearing officer grants permission not less than 5 days before a due process hearing occurs (K.S.A. 72-972a(e)). When a complaint is amended the timelines start over.

Within five business days prior to a hearing, each party must disclose to the other party any evidence the party plans to use at the hearing, including all evaluations and recommendations based on the evaluation that they intend to use at the hearing (K.S.A. 72-973(b)(5)). Failure to timely provide this evidence to the other party gives the other party a right to prohibit presentation of the evidence at the hearing.

If the school and the parent agreed to the resolution meeting but have not resolved the issues within 30 days of the date the notice of due process was received, the hearing may begin. Also, note that, if both parties agree in writing to waive the resolution meeting, the 45 day timeline to complete the due process hearing begins the day after the written agreement is signed.

E. CONDUCTING A DUE PROCESS HEARING

The due process hearing must be held at a time and place reasonably convenient to the parent of the child and be a closed hearing, unless the parent requests an open hearing. Unless a resolution meeting is agreed to by both parties, the due process hearing shall be held not later than 35 days from the date on which the request is received. The parties shall be notified in writing of the time and place of the hearing at least five days prior to the hearing (K.S.A. 72-973(c)).

Both parties have the right to be present at the hearing and be accompanied and advised by legal counsel and people who have special knowledge about children with exceptionalities.

Special education due process hearing officers may administer oaths before hearing testimony (K.S.A. 72-975). The parties have the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses who appear in person at the hearing, either voluntarily or as a result of a subpoena. Each party may present witnesses in person or present their testimony by affidavit, including expert medical, psychological or educational testimony. Each party has a right to prohibit the other party from raising any issue at the hearing that was not raised in the due process complaint notice or in a prehearing conference held prior to the hearing (K.S.A. 72-973(b); K.S.A. 72-975).

Both parties have the right to have a written or, at the option of the parent, an electronic, verbatim record of the hearing. They also have the right to a written, or at the option of the parent, electronic decision, including the findings of facts and conclusions. Both the record of the hearing and the decision of the special education due process hearing officer must be provided at no cost to the parents (K.S.A. 72-973(b)(7)(8); K.S.A. 72-975(e)).

F. REACHING A DECISION

The 45 day timeline for completion of a due process hearing starts on the day after one of the following events occurs:

- both parties to the due process proceedings agree, in writing, to waive the resolution meeting;
- the parties begin a resolution meeting or a mediation but agree, in writing, that resolution of their dispute is not possible before the end of the 30 day resolution period; or
- both parties agreed, in writing, to continue to engage in mediation beyond the end of the 30 day resolution period, but later, one, or both, of the parties withdraws from the mediation. (K.A.R. 91-40-28(g))

The special education due process hearing must be completed within 35 days of the receipt of the notice of due process. A Special education due process hearing officer may grant extensions of time upon request of either party, unless the due process hearing is an expedited hearing (K.S.A. 72-975(c)).

After the close of the special education due process hearing the special education due process hearing officer must render a decision on the matter, including findings of fact and conclusions, within 10 calendar days. The decision must be written or, at the option of the parent, must be an electronic decision. Any action of the special education due process hearing officer resulting from a due process hearing shall be final, subject to appeal and review (K.S.A. 71-973(h)).

A written notice of the result of any hearing must be given to the school providing for the hearing and must be sent by certified mail to the parent, or attorney of the child within 24 hours after the result is determined. In addition, the special education due process hearing officer must delete personally identifiable information from the report and send a copy to the State Board of Education, which must make the decision available to the Special Education Advisory Council. (K.S.A. 72-974(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.509(d))

G. APPEALING THE DUE PROCESS DECISION

If school personnel or the parents are dissatisfied by the findings of the special education due process hearing officer, either party may file a notice of appeal to the Commissioner of the State Department of Education not later than 30 calendar days after the date of the postmark on the written decision. A review officer appointed by the State Board of Education must conduct an impartial review of the hearing and make an independent decision based on the review. The review officer must conduct the review according to the requirements of K.S.A. 72-974 and 72-975. The review must be completed and the decision sent to both parties and the State Board within 20 calendar days after the notice of appeal is filed. Personally identifiable information is also deleted from the report, and is made available to the Special Education Advisory Council.

The decision of the review officer is final unless either party chooses to bring a civil action in either State or Federal district court.

H. STAY-PUT

While the due process hearing is pending, the student involved in the complaint must remain ("stay-put") in the current educational placement, unless:

- The parents and the school agree to a different placement.
- The proceedings arise in connection with the initial admission of the child to school, in which case the child will be placed in the appropriate regular education classroom or program, unless otherwise directed by a special education due process hearing officer because a child's behavior is substantially likely to result in injury to the student or to others.
- The student is in an interim alternative educational setting for disciplinary reasons.
(K.S.A. 72-993(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.533)

See Chapter 13 about suspension and expulsion of students with disabilities for a more complete explanation of stay-put requirements under disciplinary actions. These provisions are addressed in Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.533), and State statute (K.S.A. 72-993(a)).

If the due process hearing involves an evaluation or initial services under Part B for a child who is transitioning from Part C services to Part B services and is no longer eligible for Part C services because the child has turned age three, the district is not required to provide the Part C services that the child had been receiving. However, if the child is found eligible for special education and related services under Part B and the parent consents to the initial provision of special education and related services, then the district must provide those special education and related services that are not in dispute between the parent and the district (K.A.R. 91-40-31(c)).

I. CIVIL ACTIONS

After a due process hearing, or an appeal to that hearing, has been completed either the parents or the school district may pursue a civil action through a State or Federal court for reimbursement of attorneys' fees. Federal and state regulations allow the civil action by either party. The State statute adds the timeline; in Kansas, a civil action must be filed within 30 calendar days after the review officer's decision (K.S.A. 72-974(c)(d); (34 C.F.R. 300.516).

J. ATTORNEY FEES

If the parents prevail in the due process hearing or upon appeal, the Court may award some or all of the attorney fees they have paid in conjunction with the due process hearing. Only a Court can award attorney fees to the parents. The special education due process hearing officer has no authority to do so. However, there may be limitations on the amount paid. For example, if it is found that the parents prolonged the process or if the fees charged are more than the hourly rate usually charged, the judge has the authority to reduce the award paid to the parents.

The school may be awarded attorney fees if a parent files a complaint or subsequent cause of action that is frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation, or against the attorney of a parent who continued to litigate after the litigation clearly became frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation. The school may be awarded attorney fees if the parent's request for a due process hearing or subsequent cause of action was presented for any improper purpose, such as to harass, to cause unnecessary delay, or to needlessly increase the cost of litigation.

In determining the amount of the reimbursement of attorney fees, the judge must follow Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.517) and State law (K.S.A. 72-988(b)(12)):

Federal Regulation:

Sec. 300.517. Attorneys' fees

- (a) In general. (1) In any action or proceeding brought under section 615 of the Act, the court, in its discretion, may award reasonable attorneys' fees as part of the costs to--
- (i) The prevailing party who is the parent of a child with a disability;
  - (ii) To a prevailing party who is an SEA or LEA against the attorney of a parent who files a complaint or subsequent cause of action that is frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation, or against the attorney of a parent who continued to litigate after the litigation clearly became frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation; or
  - (iii) To a prevailing SEA or LEA against the attorney of a parent, or against the parent, if the parent's request for a due process hearing or subsequent cause of action was presented for any improper purpose, such as to harass, to cause unnecessary delay, or to needlessly increase the cost of litigation.
- (2) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to affect section 327 of the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, 2005.
- (b) Prohibition on use of funds.
- (1) Funds under Part B of the Act may not be used to pay attorneys' fees or costs of a party related to any action or proceeding under section 615 of the Act and subpart E of this part.
  - (2) Paragraph (b)(1) of this section does not preclude a public agency from using funds under Part B of the Act for conducting an action or proceeding under section 615 of the Act.
- (c) Award of fees. A court awards reasonable attorneys' fees under section 615(i)(3) of the Act consistent with the following:
- (1) Fees awarded under section 615(i)(3) of the Act must be based on rates prevailing in the community in which the action or proceeding arose for the kind and quality of services furnished. No bonus or multiplier may be used in calculating the fees awarded under this paragraph.
  - (2)(i) Attorneys' fees may not be awarded and related costs may not be reimbursed in any action or proceeding under section 615 of the Act for services performed subsequent to the time of a written offer of settlement to a parent if--
    - (A) The offer is made within the time prescribed by Rule 68 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or, in the case of an administrative proceeding, at any time more than 10 days before the proceeding begins;
    - (B) The offer is not accepted within 10 days; and
    - (C) The court or administrative hearing officer finds that the relief finally obtained by the parents is not more favorable to the parents than the offer of settlement.
  - (ii) Attorneys' fees may not be awarded relating to any meeting of the IEP Team unless the meeting is convened as a result of an administrative proceeding or judicial action, or at the discretion of the State, for a mediation described in §300.506.
  - (iii) A meeting conducted pursuant to §300.510 shall not be considered--
    - (A) A meeting convened as a result of an administrative hearing or judicial action; or
    - (B) An administrative hearing or judicial action for purposes of this section.
  - (3) Notwithstanding paragraph (c)(2) of this section, an award of attorneys' fees and related costs may be made to a parent who is the prevailing party and who was substantially justified in rejecting the settlement offer.
  - (4) Except as provided in paragraph (c)(5) of this section, the court reduces, accordingly, the amount of the attorneys' fees awarded under section 615 of the Act, if the court finds that--
    - (i) The parent, or the parent's attorney, during the course of the action or proceeding, unreasonably protracted the final resolution of the controversy;
    - (ii) The amount of the attorneys' fees otherwise authorized to be awarded unreasonably exceeds the hourly rate prevailing in the community for similar services by attorneys of reasonably comparable skill, reputation, and experience;
    - (iii) The time spent and legal services furnished were excessive considering the nature of the action or proceeding; or
    - (iv) The attorney representing the parent did not provide to the LEA the appropriate information in the due process request notice in accordance with §300.508.
  - (5) The provisions of paragraph (c)(4) of this section do not apply in any action or proceeding if the court finds that the State or local agency unreasonably protracted the final resolution of the action or proceeding or there was a violation of section 615 of the Act.

K.A.R. 72-972a. Due process hearing, initiation of; complaint notice; response to notice. (a) (1) Subject to the requirements in this section, the parent of an exceptional child or the agency responsible for providing services to the child may initiate a due process hearing regarding any problem arising in regard to any matter governed by this act, if:

- (A) The problem about which complaint is made occurred not more than two years before the filing of the complaint and the party filing the complaint knew or should have known about the alleged action that forms the basis of the complaint;
  - (B) the party filing the complaint or the attorney for that party provides to the other party and to the department, a written due process complaint notice that shall remain confidential and include the following information:
    - (i) the name of the child, the address of the residence of the child (or in the case of a homeless child or youth, available contact information for the child), and the name of the school the child is attending;
    - (ii) a description of the nature of the problem and the facts that form the basis of the complaint; and
    - (iii) a proposed resolution of the problem.
  - (2) A parent or an agency shall not be entitled to a due process hearing until the parent or agency, or their attorney, files a notice that meets the requirements of this subsection.
- (b) (1) Any due process complaint notice filed by a parent shall be deemed to be timely even if presented more than two years after the occurrence of the facts giving rise to the complaint, if:
- (A) The agency made specific misrepresentations that it had resolved the problem forming the basis of the complaint; or
  - (B) the agency withheld information from the parent that is required to be given to the parent under this act.
- (2) The due process complaint notice required by subsection (a) shall be deemed to be sufficient unless the party receiving the notice notifies the hearing officer and the other party, in writing, within 15 days of receiving the complaint, that the receiving party believes the notice does not meet the requirements.

(3) Within five days of receipt of the notification provided under subsection (a), the hearing officer shall make a determination of whether the notification meets the requirements of subsection (b)(2) and shall immediately notify the parties, in writing, of such determination.

(c) (1) If the complaint is filed by a parent and the agency has not sent a prior written notice to the parent regarding the problem described in the parent's due process complaint notice, the agency, within 10 days of receiving the complaint, shall send to the parent a response that includes:

- (A) An explanation of why the agency proposed or refused to take the action raised in the complaint, or an appropriate reply if the problem does not address proposed or refused action by the agency;
- (B) a description of other options that the IEP team considered and the reasons why those options were rejected;
- (C) a description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record or report the agency used as the basis for any action it has proposed or refused; and
- (D) a description of the factors that are relevant to the agency's proposal or refusal, or in reply to the complaint.

(2) The fact an agency gives notice to a parent pursuant to paragraph (1) shall not preclude such agency from asserting that the parent's due process complaint notice is insufficient.

(d) The non-complaining party, within 10 days of receiving the complaint, shall send to the complaining party a response that specifically addresses the issues raised in the complaint.

(e) (1) A party may amend its due process complaint notice only if:

- (A) The other party consents in writing to such amendment and is given the opportunity to resolve the complaint through a meeting held pursuant to K.S.A. 72-973, and amendments thereto; or
  - (B) the hearing officer grants permission, except that such permission shall be granted not less than five days before a due process hearing occurs.
- (2) The applicable timeline for a due process hearing shall recommence at the time the party files an amended notice, including the timeline for resolution of the complaint.

(f) (1) Nothing in this section shall be construed to preclude a parent or an agency from filing a separate due process complaint on an issue different from issues presented in a due process complaint already filed.

(2) Upon motion of either party and if deemed appropriate by the due process hearing officer presiding in the initial hearing, the issues raised in the separate complaints may be considered and resolved in the same due process hearing.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-973. Due process requirements; time limitations; access to records; hearing officers.

(a) (1) Except as hereinafter provided, within 15 days of receipt of a due process complaint notice from a parent, the agency shall convene a meeting with the parent and the member or members of the IEP team who have specific knowledge of the facts identified in the complaint, and a representative of the agency who has the authority to make binding decisions on behalf of the agency. This meeting shall not include the agency's attorney unless the parent is accompanied by an attorney.

(2) At this meeting, the parent of the child shall discuss and explain the complaint, including the facts that form the basis of the complaint and the agency shall be provided the opportunity to resolve the complaint.

(3) If the meeting of the parties results in a resolution of the complaint, the parties shall execute a written agreement that both the parent and the representative of the agency shall sign and that, at a minimum, includes the following statements:

- (A) The agreed upon resolution of each issue presented in the complaint;
- (B) that each party understands that the agreement is legally binding upon them, unless the party provides written notice to the other party, within three days of signing the agreement, that the party giving notice is voiding the agreement; and
- (C) if not voided, each party understands that the agreement may be enforced in state or federal court.

(4) If a resolution of the complaint is not reached at the meeting held under this subsection and the agency has not resolved the complaint to the satisfaction of the parent within 30 days of the agency's receipt of the complaint, the due process hearing procedures shall be implemented and all of the applicable timelines for a due process hearing shall commence. All discussions that occurred during the meeting shall be confidential and may not be used as evidence in any subsequent hearing or civil proceeding.

(5) A meeting shall not be required under this subsection if the parent and the agency agree, in writing, to waive such a meeting, or they agree to use mediation to attempt to resolve the complaint.

(b) Any due process hearing provided for under this act, shall be held at a time and place reasonably convenient to the parent of the involved child, be a closed hearing unless the parent requests an open hearing, and be conducted in accordance with procedural due process rights, including the following:

(1) The right of the parties to be accompanied and advised by counsel and by individuals with special knowledge or training with respect to the problems of children with disabilities;

(2) the right of the parties to be present at the hearing;

(3) the right of the parties to confront and cross-examine witnesses who appear in person at the hearing, either voluntarily or as a result of the issuance of a subpoena;

(4) the right of the parties to present witnesses in person or their testimony by affidavit, including expert medical, psychological or educational testimony;

(5) the right of the parties to prohibit the presentation of any evidence at the hearing which has not been disclosed to the opposite party at least five days prior to the hearing, including any evaluations completed by that date and any recommendations based on such evaluations;

(6) the right to prohibit the other party from raising, at the due process hearing, any issue that was not raised in the due process complaint notice or in a prehearing conference held prior to the hearing;

(7) the right of the parties to have a written or, at the option of the parent, an electronic, verbatim record of the hearing; and

(8) the right to a written or, at the option of the parent, an electronic decision, including findings of facts and conclusions.

(c) Except as provided by subsection (a), each due process hearing, other than an expedited hearing under K.S.A. 72-993, and amendments thereto, shall be held not later than 35 days from the date on which the request therefore is received. The parties shall be notified in writing of the time and place of the hearing at least five days prior thereto. At any reasonable time prior to the hearing, the parent and the counsel or advisor of the involved child shall be given access to all records, tests, reports or clinical evaluations relating to the proposed action.

- (d) (1) Except as otherwise provided in K.S.A. 72-993, and amendments thereto, during the pendency of any proceedings conducted under this act, unless the agency and parent otherwise agree, the child shall remain in the then-current educational placement of such child.
- (2) If proceedings arise in connection with the initial admission of the child to school, the child shall be placed in the appropriate regular education classroom or program in compliance with K.S.A. 72-1111, and amendments thereto, unless otherwise directed pursuant to section 18, and amendments thereto.
- (e) Subject to the provisions of K.S.A. 72-973a, and amendments thereto, the agency shall appoint a hearing officer for the purpose of conducting the hearing. Members of the state board, the secretary of social and rehabilitation services, the secretary of corrections, the commissioner of the juvenile justice authority, and members of any board or agency involved in the education of the child shall not serve as hearing officers. No hearing officer shall be any person responsible for recommending the proposed action upon which the hearing is based, any person having a personal or professional interest which would conflict with objectivity in the hearing, or any person who is an employee of the state board or any agency involved in the education of the child. A person shall not be considered an employee of the agency solely because the person is paid by the agency to serve as a hearing officer. Each agency shall maintain a list of hearing officers. Such list shall include a statement of the qualifications of each hearing officer. Each hearing officer and each state review officer shall be qualified in accordance with standards and requirements established by the state board and shall have satisfactorily completed a training program conducted or approved by the state board.
- (f) (1) Any party to a due process hearing who has grounds to believe that the hearing officer cannot afford the party a fair and impartial hearing due to bias, prejudice or a conflict of interest may file a written request for the hearing officer to disqualify such officer and have another hearing officer appointed by the state board. Any such written request shall state the grounds for the request and the facts upon which the request is based.
- (2) If a request for disqualification is filed, the hearing officer shall review the request and determine the sufficiency of the grounds stated in the request. The hearing officer then shall prepare a written order concerning the request and serve the order on the parties to the hearing. If the grounds are found to be insufficient, the hearing officer shall continue to serve as the hearing officer. If the grounds are found to be sufficient, the hearing officer immediately shall notify the state board and request the state board to appoint another hearing officer.
- (g) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the decision of the hearing officer in each due process hearing shall be based on substantive grounds and a determination of whether the child received a free appropriate public education.
- (2) In due process hearings in which procedural violations are alleged, the hearing officer may find that the child did not receive a free appropriate public education only if the hearing officer concludes the procedural violations did occur and those violations:
- (A) Impeded the child's right to a free appropriate public education
  - (B) significantly impeded the parents' opportunity to participate in the decision making process regarding the provision of a free appropriate public education to the parents' child; or
  - (C) caused a deprivation of educational benefits.
- (3) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to preclude a hearing officer from ordering a local educational agency to comply with procedural requirements under this act.
- (h) Whenever a hearing officer conducts any hearing, such hearing officer shall render a decision on the matter, including findings of fact and conclusions, not later than 10 days after the close of the hearing. The decision shall be written or, at the option of the parent, shall be an electronic decision. Any action of the hearing officer in accordance with this subsection shall be final, subject to appeal and review in accordance with this act.

K.S.A. 72-973a. Same; list and appointment of hearing officers; procedure.

Prior to appointing any hearing officer to conduct a due process hearing provided for under this act, the agency shall make its list of hearing officers available to the parent of the involved child and shall inform the parent of the right to request disqualification of any or all of the hearing officers on the list and to request the state board to appoint a hearing officer in accordance with the procedure provided in this subsection. If the parent does not give written notice of disqualification to the agency within five days after the parent receives the list, the agency may appoint from its list any hearing officer whom the parent has not requested to be disqualified. If the parent requests disqualification of all of the hearing officers and requests the appointment of a hearing officer by the state board, the agency shall immediately notify the state board and shall request the state board to appoint a hearing officer.

K.S.A. 72-974. Appeal and review; procedure; review officers, appointment and duties; federal court actions.

- (a) Written notice of the result of any hearing provided for under this act shall be given to the agency providing for the hearing and shall be sent by certified mail to the parent, or attorney of the child within 24 hours after the result is determined. Such decision, after deletion of any personally identifiable information contained therein, shall be transmitted to the state board which shall make the decision available to the state advisory council for special education and to the public upon request.
- (b) (1) Any party to a due process hearing provided for under this act may appeal the decision to the state board by filing a written notice of appeal with the commissioner of education not later than 30 calendar days after the date of the postmark on the written notice specified in subsection (a). A review officer appointed by the state board shall conduct an impartial review of the decision. The review officer shall render a decision not later than 20 calendar days after the notice of appeal is filed. The review officer shall:
- (A) Examine the record of the hearing;
  - (B) determine whether the procedures at the hearing were in accordance with the requirements of due process;
  - (C) afford the parties an opportunity for oral or written argument, or both, at the discretion of the review officer;
  - (D) seek additional evidence if necessary;
  - (E) render an independent decision on any such appeal not later than five days after completion of the review; and
  - (F) send the decision on any such appeal to the parties and to the state board.
- (2) For the purpose of reviewing any hearing and decision under provision (1), the state board may appoint one or more review officers. Any such appointment may apply to a review of a particular hearing or to reviewing a set or class of hearings as specified by the state board in making the appointment.
- (c) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e), any action of a review officer pursuant to this section is subject to review in accordance with the act for judicial review and civil enforcement of agency actions or to an action in federal court as allowed by the federal law.
- (d) Consistent with state court actions, any action in federal court shall be filed within 30 days after service of the review officer's decision.
- (e) In any action brought under subsection (c), the court:

- (1) Shall receive the records of the administrative proceedings;
- (2) if it deems necessary, shall hear additional evidence at the request of a party;
- (3) basing its decision on the preponderance of the evidence, shall grant such relief as the court determines is appropriate; and
- (4) in accordance with the federal law, may award attorneys' fees to the prevailing party in any due process hearing or judicial action brought in accordance with this act.

K.S.A. 72-975. Administration of oaths; issuance of subpoenas; extension of time; costs; hearing for additional evidence.

- (a) Any person conducting a hearing or review under this act may administer oaths for the purpose of taking testimony therein.
- (b) Any person conducting a hearing or review under this act or any party to any such hearing or review may request the clerk of the district court to issue subpoenas for the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all relevant records, tests, reports and evaluations in the same manner provided for the issuance of subpoenas in civil actions pursuant to K.S.A. 60-245, and amendments thereto.
- (c) Any person conducting a hearing or review under this act, at the request of either party, may grant specific extensions of time beyond the limitations specified in this act.
- (d) Any person conducting a hearing under this act shall consider any request for discovery in accordance with the provisions of K.S.A. 77-522, and amendments thereto, except that depositions of witnesses who will be available for the hearing shall not be allowed.
- (e) Every hearing and review under this act shall be provided for at no cost to the child or the parent of the child. The costs of any hearing provided for by a board shall be paid by the school district.
- (f) Any review officer conducting a review under this act may hold a hearing to receive additional evidence. Every such hearing shall be conducted in accordance with requirements which are consonant with the requirements of this act.

K.S.A. 72-988

- (b) The parents of exceptional children shall have the right to:
  - (12) recover attorney fees, as provided in the federal law, if they are the prevailing parties in a due process hearing or court action; however, only a court shall have the authority to award attorney fees, and such fees may be reduced or denied in accordance with federal law.

State Regulation:

- K.A.R. 91-40-28. Special education mediation and due process hearings. (a) If a disagreement arises between a parent and an agency concerning the identification, evaluation, or educational placement of the parent's exceptional child, or the provision of FAPE to the child, the parent or the agency, or both, may request mediation or initiate a due process hearing.
- (b) (1) If mediation is requested by either party, the provisions of K.S.A. 72-996 and amendments thereto shall be followed, together with the requirement in paragraph (2) of this subsection.
- (2) When agreement is reached to mediate, the agency shall immediately contact the state board or its designee. A mediator shall be appointed by the state board from its list of qualified mediators, based upon a random or other impartial basis.
- (c) If a disagreement as described in subsection (a) arises, the parent or the agency, or both, may initiate a special education due process hearing by filing a due process complaint notice. Each due process hearing shall be provided for by the agency directly responsible for the education of the child.
- (d)(1) If a special education due process complaint notice is filed, the provisions of K.S.A. 72-972a through 72-975 and amendments thereto shall be followed, together with the requirements in this subsection.
- (2) Not more than five business days after a due process complaint notice is received, the agency providing for the hearing shall furnish to the parent the following information:
- (A) The agency's list of qualified due process hearing officers;
  - (B) written notification that the parent has the right to disqualify any or all of the hearing officers on the agency's list and to request that the state board appoint the hearing officer; and
  - (C) written notification that the parent has the right, within five days after the parent receives the list, to advise the agency of any hearing officer or officers that the parent chooses to disqualify.
- (3) (A) If a parent chooses to disqualify any or all of the agency's hearing officers, the parent, within five days of receiving the list, shall notify the agency of the officer or officers disqualified by the parent.
- (B) An agency may appoint from its list any hearing officer who has not been disqualified by the parent.
- (4) Not more than three business days after being notified that a parent has disqualified all of the hearing officers on its list, an agency shall contact the state board and request the state board to appoint a hearing officer. In making this request, the agency shall advise the state board of the following information:
- (A) The name and address of the parent;
  - (B) the name and address of the attorney, if any, representing the parent, if known to the agency; and
  - (C) the names of the agency's hearing officers who were disqualified by the parent.
- (5) Within three business days of receiving a request to appoint a hearing officer, the parent and agency shall be provided written notice by the state board of the hearing officer appointed by the state board.
- (e) If a due process hearing is requested by a parent or an agency, the agency shall provide written notice to the state board of that action. The notice shall be provided within five business days of the date the due process hearing is requested.
- (f) (1) Unless the agency and parent have agreed to waive a resolution meeting or to engage in mediation, the agency and parent shall participate in a resolution meeting as required by K.S.A. 72-973 and amendments thereto. The parent and agency shall determine which members of the IEP team will attend the meeting.
- (2) If a parent who files a due process complaint fails to participate in a resolution meeting for which the agency has made reasonable efforts to give the parent notice, the timelines to complete the resolution process and begin the due process hearing shall be delayed until the parent attends a resolution meeting or the agency, at the end of the 30-day resolution period, requests the hearing officer to dismiss the due process complaint.
  - (3) If an agency fails to hold a resolution meeting within 15 days of receiving a due process complaint or to participate in a meeting, the parent may request the hearing officer to begin the due process hearing and commence the 45-day timeline for its completion.

- (g) The 45-day timeline for completion of a due process hearing shall start on the day after one of the following events occurs:
- (1) Both parties to the due process proceedings agree, in writing, to waive the resolution meeting.
  - (2) The parties participate in a resolution meeting or in mediation but agree, in writing, that resolution of their dispute is not possible by the end of the 30-day resolution period.
  - (3) Both parties agreed, in writing, to continue to engage in mediation beyond the end of the 30-day resolution period, but later one or both of the parties withdraw from the mediation process.

K.A.R. 91-40-29 Qualifications of special education mediators and due process hearing officers.

- (a) To initially qualify as a special education mediator, a person shall meet the following requirements:

  - (C) have completed a program sponsored or approved by the state board concerning due process hearing procedures and the role and responsibilities of a due process hearing officer; and
  - (D) have passed a written examination prescribed by the state board concerning due process proceedings.
- (2) Each person who is on the list of qualified due process hearing officers maintained by the state board shall remain eligible to serve as a due process hearing officer or review officer; if the person the continuing education programs in special education law that are conducted or approved by the state board.

91-40-31. Educational placement during proceedings. (a) Except as otherwise provided in K.S.A. 72-993 and amendments thereto and this regulation, during the pendency of any special education due process or judicial proceeding, the child's educational placement shall be determined in accordance with K.S.A. 72-973~~(e)~~ and amendments thereto.

- (b) If a state review officer in an administrative appeal agrees with the parent's position as to the appropriate educational placement for the child, the child shall be educated in that placement during any further proceedings, unless the parent and agency agree to another placement or the child's placement is changed in accordance with K.S.A. 72-993 and amendments thereto.
- (c) If the due process hearing involves the evaluation of or initial services for a child who is transferring from the infant and toddler program under the federal law because the child has reached three years of age, the agency shall not be required to provide the services that the child had been receiving under the infant and toddler program. However, if the child is determined to be eligible for special education and related services, the agency shall provide appropriate services to which the parent consents.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT DUE PROCESS HEARINGS

1. May the parents strike all names of special education due process hearing officers provided by the school district?

Yes. The school district must then request the Kansas State Department of Education to appoint a Special education due process hearing officer.

2. Do the parents have the right to an attorney at the due process hearing at public expense?

No. However, if the parents are the prevailing party, they may request from the Court that attorney fees be reimbursed by the school district. The law provides for exceptions and limitations as appropriate.

3. May the parents or the school district ask that their request for a special education due process hearing be withdrawn or dismissed?

Yes. A party that has filed for a special education due process hearing may, subsequently, request the action be dismissed.

4. May the special education due process hearing officer award attorney fees?

No. Only a Court has the authority to award attorney fees.

5. What if either party disagrees with the decision of the special education due process hearing officer?

If either party wishes to appeal a decision of the due process hearing officer, following the special education due process hearing, school personnel or the parents may appeal to the Kansas State Board of Education (KSBE). If an appeal to the KSBE is unsuccessful, either party may pursue further action through a civil proceeding in State or Federal district court.

6. What are some alternatives to due process hearings?

Parents and school personnel should always try to resolve differences at the local level. If they wish to use the informal process of mediation, they may contact the Special Education Services Team at the Kansas State Department of Education and request mediation (800-203-9462). An impartial third party is assigned to serve as a facilitator in reaching an agreement at no cost to either party. (See Chapter 10, Mediation.) If the parents or an organization wishes to file a formal complaint alleging the school has violated a special education law or regulation, they may do so. (See Chapter 11, Formal Complaint.)

7. When would a formal complaint be filed instead of requesting a due process hearing?

A formal complaint would be considered if the parents or any other person or organization wishes to have their complaint against the school investigated. Formal complaints are filed with the State Department of Education. The complaint must allege a violation of special education law or regulation. The State Department of Education does not have authority to consider complaints regarding differences of opinion or judgment that do not allege a violation of special education law or regulation (34 C.F.R. 300.153).

Due process is usually the last resort. Hopefully, the parties have first attempted all other forms of negotiation or mediation in an attempt to resolve their differences. If all these methods fail, either the parents or the school may file for due process.

8. If a parent or the district bring in an “expert witness” can they be reimbursed for this expense by a court of law?

The United States Supreme Court case, Arlington Central School Dist. V. Murphy, 126 S. Ct. 2455, 45 IDELR 267 (S.C. 2006), decided that the IDEA attorney's fees provision did not include any provision for the awarding of expert witness fees. Therefore, a court cannot award recovery of expert witness fees in an IDEA case.

CHAPTER 13

SUSPENSION AND EXPULSION OF CHILDREN WITH DISABILITIES FOR DISCIPLINARY VIOLATIONS

(Code of Student Conduct, and Drugs, Weapons, or Serious Bodily Injury Option)

INTRODUCTION

The discipline provisions for children with disabilities established by the 1997 amendments to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA-97) were new, complex, and detailed. Before 1997, constraints for suspension and expulsion of children with disabilities were not addressed in the IDEA. Federal direction came from case law, letters of guidance from the US Department of Education, and the anti-discrimination provisions of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. The 1997 amendments codified many of these concepts, but also made some changes to those past practices.

There were several changes in IDEA 2004 related to the discipline requirements and most specifically to the procedures for children committing violations related to weapons, drugs, or serious bodily injury. For each specific situation, the required disciplinary procedures may be different. Therefore, it is extremely important to examine each disciplinary situation as unique, carefully analyzing the behavior subject to discipline, in order to understand the school's responsibilities.

This chapter examines issues related to disciplinary actions for code of conduct violations including the option for violations related to weapons, drugs, serious bodily injury and behavior substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others. Section E specifically addresses violations related to weapons, drugs, and serious bodily injury.

Schools may use customary disciplinary techniques for all children, including those with disabilities. The school's focus should be on prevention; that is, methods used to prevent future occurrences of behavior problems. Schools may use a school wide multi-tiered system of positive behavior supports (MTSS-PBS) for all children in the school. For children with disabilities, traditional forms of discipline such as in-school suspension, detention, time-out, study carrels, or the restriction of privileges can also be used so long as these forms of discipline are also used with nondisabled children and do not violate the provisions of a child's Individualized Education Program (IEP) or the child's right to a free appropriate public education (FAPE).

Most legal problems arise when a school proposes to suspend or expel a child with a disability. When the issue is suspension or expulsion, the law has special provisions which sometimes require schools to treat children with disabilities differently than other children. (See Section D of this chapter.)

The Kansas special education laws and regulations contain provisions that parallel Federal suspension and expulsion requirements. Other State laws regarding suspension and expulsion which apply to all children are also cited within the chapter. Figure 13-1 at the beginning of this chapter provides a chart that will be helpful in understanding some of the most important federal and state requirements for disciplinary removal procedures. Under Kansas special education law and regulations students with giftedness are not covered by the discipline requirements.

This chapter includes a discussion of the following topics:

- A. Local School District Responsibilities
- B. Code of Conduct Violations
- C. Short-Term Removals (Not A Change of Placement)
- D. Long-Term Removals (A Change of Placement)
- E. 45 School Day Interim Alternative Educational Setting (Weapons, Drugs, or Serious Bodily Injury)
- F. Appeals
- G. Children Not Yet Eligible for Special Education
- H. Reporting A Crime
- I. Seclusion and Restraint

A. LOCAL SCHOOL DISTRICT RESPONSIBILITIES

School-wide policies and discipline plans help foster a safe and caring child culture. Curricula aimed at teaching children pro-social skills are based on the belief that violent behavior is learned through modeling and reinforcement and that these same processes can be used to teach children nonviolent behavior patterns. Most programs teach children to empathize and cooperate with others, as well as to see others' points of view. In addition, all programs teach a process to help peers settle differences peacefully.

Research shows that schools with low levels of behavior problems are distinguished from those with high levels by the presence of a positive school climate where nurturing, being inclusive, and a feeling of community are evident. Children who feel valued by at least one adult at school will be less likely to act out in the school environment.

Requirements for imposing disciplinary removals of children with disabilities (not gifted) are found in numerous Federal and State laws and regulations. Some of these apply to all children in public schools. It is important for local school districts to examine their current policies to ensure that they comply with all requirements. Additionally, school districts may wish to consult with their attorney to consider what other policies might be needed. It is advisable for school districts to develop clear definitions and inform children and parents of the school district's expectations in terms of behavior and conduct.

IDEA encourages school districts to establish preventive measures and approaches, such as the use of positive behavioral interventions, supports and strategies. School districts are also advised to provide sufficient staff development activities to ensure that both new employees and experienced staff are knowledgeable about Federal and State requirements. Both special and general education administrators need to know what to do immediately when serious situations arise.

School districts must carefully consider the personnel involved when disciplinary situations result in a hearing. There are two kinds of hearing officers. One is a school administrator, employee, or committee authorized by the local school board as the school's disciplinary hearing officer (K.S.A. 72-8902(f)). The second kind of hearing officer is a special education due process hearing officer, who addresses any special education issue that arises as a result of an appeal regarding special education actions related to suspension and expulsion (i.e., change of placement, manifestation determination, etc.). The special education due process hearing officer is assigned by the State and is not from the school district. It is important that school districts understand when each kind of hearing officer is required. The terms "school's disciplinary hearing officer" and "special education due process hearing officer" will be used throughout this chapter to differentiate the two types of hearing officers.

The IDEA allows traditional disciplinary methods such as time-out and detention. School officials may also use in-school or out-of-school suspension so long as it does not constitute a change of placement. The law does not set an absolute limit on the number of cumulative school days needed to constitute a change of placement, but requires a case-by-case examination of specific factors and requires that services be provided after the 10th school day of suspension in a school year.

In addition, the Kansas State Board of Education has adopted a set of "Guidelines for the Use of Seclusion Rooms and Restraint on Children with Disabilities" (See Appendix A, Figure 13-3). Schools are encouraged to adhere to these guidelines as a matter of best practice.

School districts are required to document incidences of suspension and expulsion of children with disabilities on the Kansas Discipline Incident System (KAN-DIS) that is submitted to the Kansas State Department of Education.

Kansas regulations clarify that children identified as gifted are subject to suspension or expulsion from school the same as a child without a disability. While a child identified as gifted is suspended or expelled from school, the school is not required to provide special education or any other educational services to the child (K.A.R. 91-40-34(c)).

B. CODE OF CONDUCT VIOLATIONS

When a child with a disability violates a school's code of conduct, that behavior could result in suspension or expulsion. Such removals from school are subject to the disciplinary provisions of special education law. Therefore, school district officials must consider suspension and expulsion for children with disabilities very carefully. The initial questions for administrators to answer are:

INITIAL QUESTIONS FOR ADMINISTRATORS

1. Is the child a child with a disability (not gifted only)?
  - If yes, continue with these questions.
  - If no, could the school be deemed to have knowledge that the child, although not identified, is a child with a disability? See Section G of this chapter.
  - If the child is identified as gifted (and does not have a disability), the school's usual disciplinary policies should be followed, because IDEA disciplinary provisions do not apply to children who do not have a disability.
2. Does the anticipated disciplinary action involve suspension or expulsion?
  - If yes, continue with these questions.
  - If no, this chapter does not apply to your situation.
3. How many cumulative school days has the child been suspended during the current school year? (It is important to monitor the number of school days of suspension.)

NOTE: Any part of a school day counts as a full school day.

  - If the number is 10 or less, school officials may suspend the student without educational services, but should be addressing the behavior that results in suspensions. See Section C of this chapter.
  - If this suspension will result in the 11th cumulative school day of suspension, school officials or the IEP team must determine what services are needed. See Section D of this chapter,
  - If this removal result in a pattern of removals that constitutes a change of placement see Section D of this Chapter.
4. Was the behavior subject to discipline a code of conduct violation involving weapons, drugs, serious bodily injury or behavior substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others?
  - If your situation is a code of conduct violation not involving weapons, drugs, serious bodily injury or behavior substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, see Section C and D of this chapter.
  - If your situation did involve weapons, drugs, serious bodily injury or behavior substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, see Section E of this chapter.

If assistance is needed in answering these questions, please consult with your special education director, school attorney, or the Kansas State Department of Education.

1. Several terms used throughout this chapter are defined as follows:

a. Change in Placement for Disciplinary Reasons

Change in Placement for Disciplinary Reasons (long-term removal) means that school officials or a special education due process hearing officer has ordered any of the following changes in placement of a child with a disability:

1. The child is suspended or expelled from school for more than 10 consecutive school days.
2. The child is subjected to a series of short-term suspensions that constitute a pattern because all of the following have occurred:
  - a. they cumulate to more than 10 school days in a school year,
  - b. each incident of misconduct involves substantially the same behavior, and
  - c. because of other factors such as the length of each suspension, the total amount of time the child is suspended, and the proximity of the suspensions to one another.
3. The child is placed in an interim alternative educational setting. (K.A.R. 91-40-33(a)(1))

b. School Day

School day means any day, including a partial day, that all children, including children with disabilities, are in attendance at school for instructional purposes (34 C.F.R. 300.11(c) and K.A.R. 91-40-1(eee)). Given this definition, if a child is suspended for part of a school day, the partial day counts as a full day for purposes of determining if a change of placement has occurred, or if educational services are required during the period of suspension.

c. School Official

School official means (1) A regular education administrator; (2) the director of special education or the director's designee or designees; and (3) a special education teacher of the child with a disability (K.A.R. 91-40-33(b)).

d. Short-Term Suspension

Short-term suspension means removal for a short term not exceeding 10 school days (or a series of removals not constituting a change in placement) (K.S.A. 72-8902(a)).

e. Controlled Substance

Controlled substance means a drug or other substance identified under schedules I, II, III, IV, or V in section 202(c) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 USC 812(c)). (34 C.F.R. 300.520(d)(1)).

f. Illegal Drug

Illegal drug means a controlled substance; but does not include a substance that is legally possessed or used under the supervision of a licensed health-care professional or that is legally possessed or used under any other authority under that Act or under any other provision of Federal law (34 C.F.R. 300.520(d)(2)).

NOTE: Alcohol and tobacco are not included in this definition.

g. Weapon

Weapon means any weapon, device, instrument, material, or substance, animate or inanimate, that is used for, or is readily capable of, causing death or serious bodily injury, except that such term does not include a pocket knife with a blade of less than 2½ inches in length (K.S.A. 72-991(g)(3)).

h. Serious Bodily Injury

Serious bodily injury means a bodily injury that involves one or more of the following: a substantial risk of death; extreme physical pain; protracted and obvious disfigurement; or protracted loss or impairment of the function of a bodily member, organ, or mental faculty (K.S.A. 72-991(g)(h)).

i. Bodily Injury

Bodily injury includes: a cut, abrasion, bruise, burn, or disfigurement; physical pain; illness; impairment of the function of a bodily member, organ, or mental faculty; any other injury to the body, no matter how temporary (18 U.S.C. 1365(h)(4)).

Additionally, in this chapter, the term “dangerous behavior” may be used interchangeably with the phrase “substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others”.

Figure 13-1 at the beginning of this chapter is a chart that illustrates the most important requirements for the legal course of action for school personnel to follow when removing a student and the disciplinary reasons. The chart may be used for disciplinary removals involving code of conduct violations and for violations relating to weapons, drugs, serious bodily injury or behavior substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others.

C. SHORT TERM REMOVALS (NOT A CHANGE OF PLACEMENT) (Row 1 on Discipline Chart)

School officials may remove a child with a disability who violates a code of student conduct from his or her current placement to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting, another setting, or suspension, for not more than 10 consecutive school days (to the extent those alternatives are applied to children without disabilities), and for additional removals of not more than 10 consecutive school days in that same school year for separate incidents of misconduct, as long as those removals do not constitute a change of placement. The school need not provide educational services during the first 10 days of removal in a school year, unless it provides educational services to a child without disabilities who is similarly removed.

When proposing a short-term suspension for a child with a disability, school officials must also consider the provisions of the Kansas Pupil Suspension and Expulsion Act, K.S.A. 72-8901 et seq. This State law sets forth due process requirements that apply to all children in implementing a suspension. This law requires (1) providing notice, and (2) the opportunity for an informal hearing before a child is removed from school.

State Statute: K.S.A. 72-991a (a) School personnel may order a change in the placement of a child with a disability: (1) To an appropriate interim alternative educational setting or other setting, or the short-term suspension of the child... K.S.A. 72-8902. (a) A suspension may be for a short term not exceeding 10 school days, or for an extended term not exceeding 90 school days. An expulsion may be for a term not exceeding 186 school days. If a suspension or expulsion is for a term exceeding the number of school days remaining in the school year, any remaining part of the term of the suspension or expulsion may be applied to the succeeding school year. (f) A formal hearing on a suspension or expulsion may be conducted by any person or committee of persons authorized by the board of education to conduct the hearing.

1. Subsequent Short-Term Removals (Not a Change in Placement) (Row 2 on Discipline Chart)

When a child with a disability has more than a single suspension in a school year, school officials should carefully monitor the cumulative number of school days of suspension and make decisions about the effect of imposing additional short-term suspensions. If school officials order two or more short-term suspensions of a child with a disability during a school year, these suspensions are not a change in placement for disciplinary reasons if the suspensions do not constitute a pattern of removals.

School officials as defined in K.A.R. 91-40-33(b), means a regular education administrator; the Director of special education or director designee; and a special education teacher of the child with a disability.

To determine if a change of placement has occurred, school officials must consider whether the series of suspensions constitutes a pattern of removals. School officials may consider any unique circumstances on a case-by-case basis when determining whether a change in placement, consistent with the other requirements, is appropriate for a child with a disability who violates a code of student conduct. (34 C.F.R. 300.530(a))

When a series of suspensions/removals total more than 10 school days in a school year, school officials should determine whether a pattern of removals has developed by considering:

- Whether the child's behavior is substantially similar to the child's behavior in previous incidents that resulted in the series of removals
- Other factors such as:
  - The length of each removal;
  - The total amount of time the child has been removed; and
  - The proximity of the removals to one another.

School officials have the authority to make the determination of whether a series of short-term suspensions of a child with a disability constitute a change in placement for disciplinary reasons. This determination is subject to review through due process proceedings. (K.A.R. 91-40-33(a)) Note that partial days count as full school days.

School officials should be addressing the issues of the suspensions prior to reaching the 11th day. By addressing accumulated days of suspension early, the school may be able to avoid the need for a suspension that would result in a disciplinary change in placement. Suspensions should be carefully monitored so that school personnel will be aware of whether another removal will constitute a change of placement.

Schools must provide FAPE to all children with disabilities, including those who are suspended or expelled from school. Nevertheless, children with disabilities like students without disabilities, may be given short-term suspensions. As stated previously, the school is not required to provide educational services to children with disabilities during the first 10 cumulative days of suspension in a school year. However, when the total number of school days of suspension in a school year reaches 11, and the current removal is for not more than 10 consecutive school days and is not a change of placement, the school must begin providing educational services. School officials must determine the extent to which special education and related services must be provided to the child beginning on the 11th school day of suspension. This is known as the "11th day rule." In this situation, school officials means a general education administrator, special education director or designee(s), and the child's special education teacher, as specified in K.A.R. 91-40-33(b). Beginning on the 11th school day of suspension in a school year, and each school day of suspension thereafter, special education and related services needed for the child must be provided to enable the child to:

- participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting; and
- to progress toward meeting the goals set out in the child's IEP.

If the short-term suspension includes the 11th cumulative school day of suspension in a school year, necessary services identified by the school officials must be provided. The 11th day rule applies, whether or not the 11th school day of suspension results in a pattern of removal that constitutes a change of placement.

Additionally, if the child has not had a functional behavioral assessment and the district has not implemented a behavioral intervention plan for the child, school officials may (but are not required to) determine that the child needs a functional behavioral assessment to address the behavior that resulted in the suspension and to develop a behavioral intervention plan if the assessment suggests such a plan is necessary for the child (See Appendix A, Figure 13-6a and Figure 13-6b, Functional Behavior Assessment).

The comments to the federal regulations clarify that the services to be provided to the child on the 11th day do not have to "replicate every aspect of the services that a child would receive if in his or her normal classroom." (Federal Register, 2006, p. 46716) "The act modified the concept of FAPE in these circumstances to encompass those services necessary to enable the child to continue to participate in the general curriculum, and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in the child's IEP." "An LEA is not required to provide children suspended for more than 10 school days in a school year for disciplinary reasons, exactly the same settings as they were receiving prior to the imposition of discipline." It is important, however, that the child continue to progress toward meeting graduation requirements.

Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.530(b)(1)(2), (d)(1)(3)(4)) address these requirements, as do Kansas State regulations:

State Regulations: K.A.R. 91-40-33. Change in placement for disciplinary reasons; definitions. As used in K.A.R. 91-40-33 through 91-40-38, the following terms shall have the meanings specified in this regulation: (a) (1) The phrase "change in placement for disciplinary reasons" means that school personnel or a special education due process hearing officer has ordered any of the following changes in placement of a child with a disability: (A) The child is suspended or expelled from school for more than 10 consecutive school days. (B) The child is subjected to a series of short-term suspensions constituting a pattern that meets all of the following criteria: (i) The suspensions cumulate to more than 10 school days in a school year. (ii) Each incident of misconduct resulting in a suspension involved substantially the same behavior. (iii) The length of each suspension, the total amount of time the child is suspended, and the proximity of the suspensions to one another indicate a pattern. (C) The child is placed in an interim alternative educational setting. (2) (A) If school personnel order two or more short-term suspensions of a child with a disability during a school year, these suspensions shall not constitute a change in placement for disciplinary reasons if the suspensions do not constitute a pattern as described in paragraph (a)(1)(B) (B) School officials shall have the authority to make the determination of whether a series of short-term suspensions of a child with a disability constitutes a change in placement for disciplinary reasons. This determination shall be subject to review through due process proceedings. (b) "School officials" means the following: (1) A regular education administrator; (2) the director of special education or the director's designee or designees; and (3) a special education teacher of the child with a disability. (c) "Short-term suspension" means a suspension as authorized by K.S.A. 72-8902(a) and amendments thereto. K.A.R. 91-40-35. #### D. LONG-TERM REMOVALS (A Change of Placement) (Row 3 on Discipline Chart)

To determine if a change of placement has occurred, school officials must consider whether the series of short-term removals (less than 10 consecutive school days) constitutes a pattern of removals. School officials may consider any unique circumstances on a case-by-case basis when determining whether a change in placement, consistent with the other requirements, is appropriate for a child with a disability who violates a code of student conduct. (34 C.F.R. 300.530(a))

A removal of a child with a disability is a change of placement when:

- the removal is for more than 10 consecutive school days;
- the removal is one of a series of short-term removals that constitutes a pattern of removals.

Note that partial days count as full school days. In each case, determining if a pattern has occurred will rest on the unique facts.

There are specific steps to follow when school officials consider either a long-term suspension for more than 10 consecutive school days, an expulsion, or another short-term suspension that cumulates to more than 10 school days and shows a pattern constituting a change of placement (34 C.F.R. 300.530(d)(5),(e)).

- On the date the decision is made to make a removal that constitutes a change of placement of a child with a disability the school must notify the parents of that decision, and provide the parents with a copy of the Parent Rights notice (K.S.A. 72-991a(d)(1)).
- On the 11th school day of removal, the school must begin providing appropriate special education and related services. Note that the determination of services needed as a result of a disciplinary change of placement is not made by the school officials as in the previous situations. Instead, the IEP team decides on these services and where they will be provided.
- The school, the parent and relevant members of the child's IEP team (as determined by the parent and the school) must determine if the child's violation of the school's code of student conduct was a manifestation of his or her disability.
- The school must convene meetings regarding the manifestation determination and services as expeditiously as possible and is required to give only 24 hours prior notice of a meeting to the child's parents (K.A.R. 91-40-38(d)).

When a disciplinary change of placement occurs, the IEP team, including the parent, determines the special education and related services to be provided during the removal. However, parental consent for the disciplinary change in placement is not required.

1. Manifestation Determination

As soon as practical, but not later than 10 school days after the date on which the decision is made to change the placement of a child with a disability because of a violation of a student code of conduct, the representative of the school, the parent and other relevant members of the child's IEP team, as determined by the parent and the school, must meet to review:

- all of the relevant information in the child's file,
- the child's IEP,
- any teacher observations, and
- any relevant information provided by the parent.

Based on its review of all the relevant information, the group must determine if the conduct in question was:

- a. caused by, or had a direct and substantial relationship to the child's disability; or
- b. the direct result of the school's failure to implement the child's IEP. (K.S.A. 72-991a(d)(2),(e)(1); 34 C.F.R. 300.530(e)(1)).

If it is determined by the group that the conduct of a child was a result of either "a" or "b" above, then the conduct must be determined to be a manifestation of the child's disability. (See Appendix A, Figure 13-7, Manifestation Determination Form)

2. Determination Behavior WAS a Manifestation of the Disability

If the school, the parent and other relevant members of the child's IEP team determine that the student's behavior was the direct result of the school's failure to implement the IEP, the school district must take immediate action to remedy those deficiencies.

If the school, the parent and other relevant members of the IEP team determine that the child's behavior was a manifestation of the disability, the IEP team must:

- a. Return the child to the placement from which the child was removed, unless the parent and the school agree to a change of placement as part of the modification of the behavioral intervention plan; and
- b. Either:

- i. Conduct a functional behavioral assessment, unless the school had conducted a functional behavioral assessment before the behavior that resulted in the change of placement occurred, and implement a behavioral intervention plan for the child; or
- ii. If a behavioral intervention plan already has been developed, review the behavioral intervention plan, and modify it, as necessary, to address the behavior. (See Appendix A, Figure 13-6a and 13-6b, Functional Behavior Assessment forms.)

If it is determined that the child's behavior is a manifestation of the child's disability the child cannot be subject to a long-term removal for the behavior. However, the school and the parents could agree to another setting. Also, even when the behavior is a manifestation of the child's disability the school could request a special education due process hearing officer to order a 45 school-day interim alternative educational setting if the school district can show that maintaining the current placement is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others (See Appendix A, Figure 13-2, Letter to Huefner, OSEP, October 3, 2006 (47 IDELR 228) and 34 C.F.R. 300.532).

Requirements for the manifestation determination review, as stated above, are found in Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.530(e)) and the State Statute (K.S.A. 72-991a(e)).

State Statute:  K.S.A. 72-991a  (d) If a disciplinary action is contemplated as described in subsection (a)(2) or (a)(3):  (1) Not later than the date on which the decision to take that action is made, the agency shall notify the parents of that decision and of all procedural safeguards afforded under section 18, and amendments thereto; and  (2) Within 10 school days of the date on which the decision to take disciplinary action is made, a review shall be conducted to determine the relationship between the child's disability and the conduct that s subject to disciplinary action.  (e) (1) The review described in subsection (d)(2) shall be conducted by the agency, the parent, and relevant members of the child's IEP team as determined by the parent and the agency. In carrying out the review, that group shall review all relevant information in the student's file, including the child's IEP, any teacher observations, and any relevant information provided by the parent.  (2) Based upon its review of all the relevant information, the group shall determine if the conduct in question:  (A) Was caused by, or had a direct and substantial relationship to, the child's disability; or  (B) Was the direct result of the agency's failure to implement the child's IEP.  (3) If it is determined that the conduct of the student is described in either paragraph (2)(A) or (2)(B) of this subsection, then the conduct shall be determined to be a manifestation of the child's disability.  (f) If it is determined that the conduct of a child was a manifestation of the child's disability, the IEP team shall:  (1) Conduct a functional behavioral assessment, and implement a behavioral intervention plan for such child, provided that the agency has not conducted such an assessment prior to the behavior that resulted in a change in placement;  (2) If the child already had a behavioral intervention plan, review and modify it, as necessary, to address the behavior; and  (3) Except as provided in paragraph (a)(2), return the child to the placement from which the child was removed, unless the parent and the agency agree to a change of placement as part of the modification of the behavioral intervention plan. K.A.R. 91-40-38. Manifestation determination; appeal. (a) If an agency proposes to make a change in educational placement for disciplinary reasons, the agency shall implement the provisions of K.S.A. 72-991a and amendments thereto.  (b) An agency may conduct the manifestation determination at the same IEP team meeting that is held in regard to developing or reviewing a behavioral intervention plan under K.S.A. 72-991a and amendments thereto.  (c) If, in making a manifestation determination, deficiencies are identified in the child's IEP or placement or in the provision of services to the child, the IEP team shall make any changes it deems appropriate, and the agency shall implement those changes.  (d) An agency shall convene meetings under this regulation as expeditiously as possible and shall be required to give only 24 hours' prior notice of a meeting to the child's parent.  (e)(1) If a parent files a due process complaint concerning the manifestation determination, a resolution meeting between the parties shall be held within seven days of the filing of the complaint, unless the parties agree, in writing, to waive the resolution meeting or to engage in mediation.  (2) If the matter has not been resolved to the satisfaction of both parties within 15 days of the filing of the due process complaint, the due process hearing may proceed.

3. Determination Behavior WAS NOT a Manifestation of the Disability

If the IEP team determines the behavior was NOT a manifestation of the child's disability, the district may proceed with suspension and expulsion proceedings under K.S.A. 72-8901 et seq. Using these proceedings, school officials may order a change in placement of a child with a disability to an appropriate interim alternative educational placement for not more than 186 school days if it is determined that:

- a. the conduct of the child violated the code of student conduct;
- b. the behavior was not a manifestation of the child's disability; and
- c. if the relevant disciplinary procedures applicable to children without disabilities are applied in the same manner and the discipline is for the same duration as would be applied to a child without disabilities (K.S.A. 72-991a(a)(3)).

A child with a disability must continue to receive educational services during the period of a long-term disciplinary removal. The services that must be provided during the long-term removal are the services that the IEP team determines are needed to enable the child to continue to participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting, and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in the child's IEP. If the IEP team determines it is appropriate, the child must receive a functional behavioral assessment, and behavioral intervention services and modifications, that are designed to address the behavior violation so that it does not recur (K.S.A. 72-991a(a)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.530(d)(1)) (See Appendix A, Figure 13-6a and 13-6b, Functional Behavior Assessment).

If the violation of the code of student conduct is not a manifestation of the child's disability, the district may transmit the special education and disciplinary records of the child to the school's disciplinary hearing officer for consideration in making the final determination in the disciplinary action. [Note: 34 C.F.R. 300.535 only requires transmittal of special education records to appropriate authorities when a crime has been reported.] Even if the school's disciplinary hearing officer determines that the child should be suspended or expelled, the district must continue to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) for the child. Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.530(d)(1)) address this topic, as does State Statute:

State Statute:  K.S.A. 72-991(a) School personnel may order a change in the placement of a child with a disability:  (3) To an appropriate interim alternative educational placement for not more than 186 school days, if it is determined that the conduct of the child violated the code of student conduct and was not a manifestation of the child's disability, if the relevant disciplinary procedures applicable to children without disabilities are applied in the same manner and the discipline is for the same duration as would be applied to a child without disabilities, except that services must continue to be provided to the child during the period of disciplinary action.  (b) Any child with a disability whose placement is changed under subsection (a)(2) or (a)(3) shall:  (1) Continue to receive educational services so as to enable the child to continue to participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in the child's IEP; and  (2) Receive, as appropriate, a functional behavioral assessment, behavioral intervention services, and modifications that are designed to address the inappropriate behavior so that it does not recur.  (c) The alternative educational setting described in subsections (a)(2) and (a)(3) shall be determined by the IEP team.

E. 45 SCHOOL DAY INTERIM ALTERNATIVE EDUCATIONAL SETTING (Option for Behavior Related to Weapons, Drugs, Serious Bodily Injury) (Row 4 of Discipline Chart)

School officials may remove a child with a disability to an interim alternative educational setting (IAES) up to 45 school days without regard to whether the behavior is determined to be a manifestation of the child's disability, if the child:

1. Carries a weapon to or possesses a weapon at school, on school premises, or to or at a school function under the jurisdiction of the school district or the State Board of Education;
2. Knowingly possesses or uses illegal drugs, or sells or solicits the sale of a controlled substance, while at school, on school premises, or at a school function under the jurisdiction of the school district or the State Board of Education (tobacco and alcohol are not illegal drugs under this definition); or
3. Has inflicted serious bodily injury upon another person while at school, on school premises, or at a school function under the jurisdiction of the school district or the State. (K.S.A. 72-991a(a)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.530(g))

When a child has been removed to an interim alternative educational setting, the IEP team must determine what special education and related services are needed and where the services will be provided to enable the child to:

- participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting; and
- to progress toward meeting their goals set out in the child's IEP.

A manifestation determination is not required. However, if the IEP team determines that a functional behavioral assessment would be appropriate, one will be conducted. If appropriate, the IEP team will review and revise any existing behavioral intervention plan or develop one with services and modifications that are designed to address the behavior violation so that it does not recur. (See Appendix A, Figure 13-6a and 13-6b, Functional Behavior Assessment).

When a child commits a violation related to weapons, drugs, or serious bodily injury, the school officials may initially suspend the child for up to 10 school days without educational services (if the suspension includes the 11th cumulative day of suspension in the school year, educational services should begin on the 11th day). When the IEP team meets, it can determine the location of the 45 school day interim alternative educational setting and the services to be provided to the child.

On the date on which the decision is made to make a removal that constitutes a change of placement of a child with a disability because of a violation of a code of student conduct (including weapons, drugs or serious bodily injury) the school must notify the parents of that decision, and provide the parents the Parent Rights Notice (K.S.A. 72-991a(d)(1)).

Once the child has been placed in an interim alternative educational setting or otherwise removed for disciplinary reasons, if the school believes that returning the child to the setting specified in the child's IEP would be substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, the school may request an expedited due process hearing to request the hearing officer to order another 45 school day interim alternative educational setting (See Appendix A, Figure 13-2, Letter to Huefner, OSEP, October 3, 2006 (47 IDELR 228)). The burden of proof is on the school to justify an additional removal be ordered by the hearing officer.

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-991a. Change in placement of child with disability to alternative setting as disciplinary action for certain behavior; duties of IEP team and hearing officer; behavioral assessment and intervention plan; determination and review procedure.

(a) School personnel may order a change in the placement of a child with a disability:

(2) to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for not more than 45 school days if: (A) The child carries or possesses a weapon to, or at, school, on school premises, or to, or at, a school function under the jurisdiction of an agency; (B) the child knowingly possesses or uses illegal drugs or sells or solicits the sale of a controlled substance while at school, on school premises, or at a school function under the jurisdiction of an agency; or (C) the child has inflicted serious bodily injury upon another person while at school, on school premises, or at a school function under the jurisdiction of an agency;

(b) Any child with a disability whose placement is changed under subsection (a)(2) or (a)(3) shall:

(1) Continue to receive educational services so as to enable the child to continue to participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in the child's IEP; and

(2) receive, as appropriate, a functional behavioral assessment, behavioral intervention services, and modifications that are designed to address the inappropriate behavior so that it does not recur.

(c) The alternative educational setting described in subsections (a)(2) and (a)(3) shall be determined by the IEP team.

(g) For the purposes of this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) "Controlled substance" means a drug or other substance identified under schedules I, II, III, IV, or V in 21 U.S.C. 812(c);

(2) "illegal drug" means a controlled substance but does not include such a substance that is legally possessed or used under the supervision of a licensed healthcare professional or that is legally possessed or used under any other authority under any federal or state law;

(3) "weapon" means a weapon, device, instrument, material, or substance, animate or inanimate, that is used for, or is readily capable of, causing death or serious bodily injury, except that such term does not include a pocket knife with a blade of less than 2 1/2 inches in length; and

(4) "serious bodily injury" means an injury as described in subsection (h)(3) of section 1365 of title 18 of the United States Code.

F. APPEALS

If the child's parents disagree with any decision regarding the disciplinary placement or the results of the manifestation determination, the parents may appeal the decision by requesting an expedited due process hearing. Additionally, if the school believes that maintaining the child's current placement is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, the school may request an expedited due process hearing. (K.S.A. 72-992a(a); 34 C.F.R. 300.532(a)) (See Appendix A, Figure 13-2, Letter to Huefner, OSEP, October 3, 2006 (47 IDELR 228).)

A parental request for a due process hearing does not prevent the school district from seeking judicial relief such as a temporary restraining order or an injunction, when necessary.

1. Resolution Meeting During Expedited Due Process Hearing

A resolution meeting must occur within seven days of the school receiving notice of a parent's due process complaint, unless the parents and school agree in writing to waive the resolution meeting or agree to use the mediation process. The due process hearing may proceed unless the matter has been resolved to the satisfaction of both parties within 15 days of the school's receipt of the due process complaint (K.A.R. 91-40-38(e)).

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-992a. Same; parental disagreement with determination; due process hearing and review.

(a) The parent of a child with a disability who disagrees with any decision regarding placement, or the manifestation determination under K.S.A. 72-991a, and amendments thereto, or an agency that believes that maintaining the current placement of a child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others, may request a hearing.

(b) A hearing officer appointed under this act shall hear, and make the determination regarding, an appeal requested under subsection (a).

(c) In making the determination under subsection (b), the hearing officer may order a change in placement of the child. In such situations, the hearing officer may:

- (1) Uphold the manifestation determination;
- (2) uphold the interim alternative educational placement of the child;
- (3) return the child to the placement from which the child was removed; or
- (4) order a change in placement of the child to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for not more than 45 school days if the hearing officer determines that maintaining the current placement of such child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-38(e)

(e)(1) If a parent files a due process complaint concerning the manifestation determination, a resolution meeting between the parties shall be held within seven days of the filing of the complaint, unless the parties agree, in writing, to waive the resolution meeting or to engage in mediation.

(2) If the matter has not been resolved to the satisfaction of both parties within 15 days of the filing of the due process complaint, the due process hearing may proceed.

2. Placement During Expedited Due Process Hearing

When the parent or the school appeal a disciplinary placement or the result of the manifestation determination, the child remains in the interim alternative educational setting determined by the IEP team pending the decision of the hearing officer or until the expiration of the time of the disciplinary removal, whichever occurs first, unless the parent and the school agree otherwise. Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.533) address this issue, as does the State Statute:

State Statute:

K.S.A. 72-993. Same; placement of child during pendency of due process proceedings.

(a) If a parent or agency requests a hearing under section 18, and amendments thereto, the child shall remain in the interim alternative educational setting pending the decision of the hearing officer or until the expiration of the forty-five-school-day period described in subsection (a)(2) of section 17, and amendments thereto, whichever occurs first, unless the parent and the agency agree otherwise.

(b) The agency shall arrange for an expedited hearing, which shall occur within 20 school days of the date the hearing is requested and shall result in a determination within 10 school days after the hearing. To expedite the hearing, the agency, within three school days of receiving the request for a hearing, shall request the state board to appoint a hearing officer to conduct the hearing.

3. Expedited Due Process Hearings

Expedited due process hearings occur in two instances under the disciplinary provisions:

- a. When a parent challenges the manifestation determination or any placement decision in a disciplinary context; or
- b. When a school district asks a special education due process hearing officer to order an interim alternative educational setting because a child's behavior is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others.

State regulations (K.A.R. 91-40-30) and Statute (K.S.A. 72-992a and 72-993) define the procedures to follow when an expedited hearing is requested.

- Within 3 days of receiving the request for a hearing the school district must notify KSDE of the need for a special education due process hearing officer and provide the parents' names and addresses. The local list is not provided to the parents before asking KSDE to appoint a special education due process hearing officer.
- KSDE appoints a special education due process hearing officer as soon as possible.
- A resolution meeting must occur within seven days of the school receiving notice of a parent's due process complaint, unless the parents and school agree in writing to waive the resolution meeting or agree to use the mediation process.
- The parties must exchange exhibits, witness lists, and other required information at least 2 business days (rather than 5 business days) before the hearing.
- The special education due process hearing officer must conduct the expedited due process hearing within 20 school days of receipt the request for an expedited due process hearing and must render a decision in the matter within 10 school days after the close of the hearing.
- The special education due process hearing officer cannot grant extensions of time in an expedited hearing.

See Appendix A, Figure 13-4, Request for Expedited Due Process Hearing for District; and Figure 13-5, Request for Expedited Due Process Hearing for Parent.

4. Authority of the Special Education Due Process Hearing Officer

In making a determination in an appeal by the parent or the school, the special education due process hearing officer may:

- a. Return the child with a disability to the placement from which the child was removed if the special education due process hearing officer determines that the removal exceeded the disciplinary authority of school personnel or that the child's behavior was a manifestation of the child's disability; or
- b. Order a change of placement of the child with a disability to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for up to 45 school days if the special education due process hearing officer determines that maintaining the current placement of the child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others. The school may also request that a special education due process hearing officer order additional 45 school day interim alternative educational settings if school personnel believe that returning the child to the placement specified in the child's IEP would be substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others.

State Statute:

K.S.A.72-993. Same; placement of child during pendency of due process proceedings. (a) If a parent or agency requests a hearing under section 18, and amendments thereto, the child shall remain in the interim alternative educational setting pending the decision of the hearing officer or until the expiration of the forty-five-school-day period described in subsection (a)(2) of section 17, and amendments thereto, whichever occurs first, unless the parent and the agency agree otherwise.

(b) The agency shall arrange for an expedited hearing, which shall occur within 20 school days of the date the hearing is requested and shall result in a determination within 10 school days after the hearing. To expedite the hearing, the agency, within three school days of receiving the request for a hearing, shall request the state board to appoint a hearing officer to conduct the hearing.

K.S.A. 72-992a. Same; parental disagreement with determination; due process hearing and review.

- (a) The parent of a child with a disability who disagrees with any decision regarding placement, or the manifestation determination under K.S.A. 72-991a, and amendments thereto, or an agency that believes that maintaining the current placement of a child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others, may request a hearing.
- (b) A hearing officer appointed under this act shall hear, and make the determination regarding, an appeal requested under subsection (a).
- (c) In making the determination under subsection (b), the hearing officer may order a change in placement of the child. In such situations, the hearing officer may:
- (1) Uphold the manifestation determination;
  - (2) uphold the interim alternative educational placement of the child;
  - (3) return the child to the placement from which the child was removed; or
  - (4) order a change in placement of the child to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for not more than 45 school days if the hearing officer determines that maintaining the current placement of such child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-30. Expedited due process hearings. (a) If an expedited due process hearing is requested under the provisions of K.S.A. 72-992 or 72-993 and amendments thereto, the agency responsible for providing the hearing shall immediately notify the state board of the request and the parent's name and address.

(b) Upon being notified of a request for an expedited due process hearing, the state board shall appoint, from its list of qualified hearing officers, a due process hearing officer and shall notify the parties of the appointment.

(c) Each of the parties to an expedited due process hearing shall have the rights afforded to them under K.S.A. 72-973 and amendments thereto, except that either party shall have the right to prohibit the presentation of any evidence at the expedited hearing that has not been disclosed by the opposite party at least two business days before the hearing.

(d) (1) Each hearing officer shall conduct the expedited due process hearing within 20 school days of the agency's receipt of the parent's request for the expedited due process hearing and shall render a decision in the matter within 10 school days after the close of the hearing.

(2) A hearing officer in an expedited due process hearing shall not grant any extensions or otherwise fail to comply with the requirement of paragraph (1) of this subsection.

(e) Either party to an expedited due process hearing may appeal the decision in accordance with K.S.A. 72-974 and amendments thereto.

G. CHILDREN NOT DETERMINED ELIGIBLE FOR SPECIAL EDUCATION

The discipline requirements address the issue of suspending or expelling children not yet identified as a child with a disability but whose parents allege the school district had knowledge that the child was a child with a disability before disciplinary action was proposed. The IDEA affords protections to children not determined eligible only if a school district had knowledge that a child was a child with a disability before the behavior which precipitated the disciplinary action occurred.

A school district is deemed to have such knowledge if:

- the parents of the child have expressed concern in writing to supervisory or administrative school personnel, or a teacher of the child, that the child is in need of special education and related services;
- the parents of the child have requested an evaluation of the child; or
- the teacher of the child or other school personnel expressed specific concern about a pattern of behavior demonstrated by the child directly to the special education director or other supervisory school personnel.

Although teachers and other school personnel may casually express concerns about the behavior or performance of children in their classrooms, such expression of concern do not create knowledge on the part of the school district. Schools also are not deemed to have knowledge of a disability merely because a child received services under other programs designed to provide compensatory or remedial services or because the child had limited English proficiency.

Also, a school will not be considered to have knowledge of a disability if:

- the parent of the child
  - has not allowed an evaluation of the child;
  - has refused special education and related services; or
- the child has been evaluated and determined not to be a child with a disability.

If it is determined that the school did not have knowledge that the child is a child with a disability, the school may proceed with its proposed disciplinary action, including suspension or expulsion without educational services.

If the child's parents request an evaluation of the child during the period of suspension or expulsion or other disciplinary action, the evaluation must be conducted in an expedited manner. No timeline is specified with regard to an expedited evaluation. However, in this context, the term "expedited" suggests the evaluation should be concluded in a shorter time frame than a normal evaluation.

Pending the results of the evaluation, the child remains in the disciplinary setting determined by school authorities (that may be the out-of-school suspension or expulsion). The school is not required to put disciplinary proceedings on hold until the evaluation is completed. If the child is subsequently determined to be a child with a disability, based on the evaluation and review of information supplied by the parents, the school must provide the child with all of the protections of the IDEA, including the provision of special education and related services during the suspension. If the child is determined to not be a child with a disability, the child may be subjected to the disciplinary measures applied to children without disabilities who engage in comparable behaviors.

These provisions are found in Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.534) and State Statute (K.S.A. 72-994):

State Statute: K.S.A. 72-994 School district knowledge that child is child with disability prior to determination, when deemed; subject of child to disciplinary action, when; evaluation and placement of child. (a) A child who has not been determined to be eligible for special education and related services under this act and who has engaged in behavior that violated any rule or code of conduct of the school district may assert any of the protections provided for in this act if the school district had knowledge, as determined in accordance with this section, that the child was a child with a disability before the behavior that precipitated the disciplinary action occurred. (b) A school district shall be deemed to have knowledge that a child is a child with a disability if before the behavior that precipitated the disciplinary action occurred: (1) The parent of the child has expressed concern, in writing, to supervisory or administrative personnel of the appropriate educational agency or to a teacher of the child, that the child is in need of special education and related services; (2) the parent of the child previously has requested an evaluation of the child; or (3) the teacher of the child, or other personnel of the school district, previously has expressed specific concerns about a pattern of behavior demonstrated by the child directly to the director of special education of such school district or to other supervisory personnel of the district. (c) A school district shall not be deemed to have knowledge that a child is a child with a disability if the parent of the child has not allowed an evaluation of the child or has refused services under this law, or the child has been evaluated but it was determined that the child was not a child with a disability. (d) (1) Subject to provision (2) of this subsection, if a school district does not have knowledge that a child is a child with a disability prior to taking disciplinary action against the child, the child may be subjected to the same disciplinary action as is applied to children without disabilities who engage in comparable behaviors. (2) If a request is made for an evaluation of a child during the time period in which the child is subjected to disciplinary action described by this act, an evaluation shall be conducted in an expedited manner. If the child is determined to be a child with a disability, taking into consideration information from the evaluation conducted by the school district and information provided by the parents, the school district shall provide special education and related services in accordance with the provisions of this act, except that, pending the results of the evaluation, the child shall remain in the educational placement determined by school authorities, which may be long-term suspension or expulsion from school.

H. REPORTING A CRIME

School districts are permitted to report a crime that a child with a disability may have committed to appropriate law enforcement authorities. However, under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), the district must ask for parent consent to transmit a child's special education records to the authorities. Or, if ordered by a judge or by a subpoena, the district must transmit the records. Otherwise, records are not transmitted in accordance with 34 C.F.R. 300.535. This regulation makes it clear the school can transmit records to appropriate law enforcement and judicial authorities only if FERPA will allow the disclosure. (K.S.A. 72-89b03)

FERPA always allows disclosure if parents consent to the disclosure. State law (K.S.A. 72-995(b)) also addresses this issue. FERPA exceptions to the parent consent requirement may allow for disclosure in other circumstances:

- Child records may be disclosed in compliance with a lawfully issued subpoena. However, parents must be notified in writing that the records have been subpoenaed before they are forwarded, unless the court has ordered that the existence of the subpoena or the contents of the subpoena not be disclosed.
- Child records may be disclosed in emergency situations where the disclosure is necessary to protect the health or safety of the child or others.

- Child records may be disclosed under limited circumstances pursuant to State laws concerning the juvenile justice system.

When records are provided to law enforcement or judicial authorities, the disclosure must be on the condition that the record will not be further disclosed without the written consent of the child's parents, or the student if the student is 18 or older.

Although it is easy for a school district to determine to whom the crime should be reported, it is less clear to who copies of special education and disciplinary records should be forwarded. Parent consent to release the records to certain individuals or a subpoena for the records will eliminate the confusion, and should ensure the appropriate parties receive the records. Unless the authority to release the record under FERPA is clear, schools should not forward child records to any law enforcement officer who comes into contact with the child. Federal regulations of IDEA 2004 addressing this issue are found at 34 C.F.R. 300.535, and State Statute. Additionally, Kansas has State Statute, K.S.A. 72-89b03, which requires that schools adopt a policy of reporting misdemeanors and felonies that happen at school to law enforcement.

State Statute:  K.S.A. 72-995  (a) Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit an agency from reporting a crime committed by a child with a disability to appropriate authorities or to prevent state or local law enforcement and judicial authorities from exercising their responsibilities with regard to the application of federal, state, or local law to crimes committed by a child with a disability.  (b) An agency reporting a crime committed by a child with a disability shall ensure that copies of the special education and disciplinary records of the child are transmitted for consideration by the appropriate authorities to whom it reports the crime. K.S.A. 72-89b03. SCHOOL SAFETY AND SECURITY ACT Information regarding identity of specified pupils, disclosure requirements; criminal acts, reports to law enforcement agencies and state board of education; school safety and security policies, availability; civil liability, immunity. (a) If a school employee has information that a pupil is a pupil to whom the provisions of this subsection apply, the school employee shall report such information and identify the pupil to the superintendent of schools. The superintendent of schools shall investigate the matter and, upon determining that the identified pupil is a pupil to whom the provisions of this subsection apply, shall provide the reported information and identify the pupil to all school employees who are directly involved or likely to be directly involved in teaching or providing other school related services to the pupil. The provisions of this subsection apply to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(1) Any pupil who has been expelled for the reason provided by subsection (c) of K.S.A. 72-8901, and amendments thereto, for conduct which endangers the safety of others;</li> <li>(2) any pupil who has been expelled for the reason provided by subsection (d) of K.S.A. 72-8901, and amendments thereto;</li> <li>(3) any pupil who has been expelled under a policy adopted pursuant to K.S.A. 72-89a02, and amendments thereto;</li> <li>(4) any pupil who has been adjudged to be a juvenile offender and whose offense, if committed by an adult, would constitute a felony under the laws of Kansas or the state where the offense was committed, except any pupil adjudicated as a juvenile offender for a felony theft offense involving no direct threat to human life; and</li> <li>(5) any pupil who has been tried and convicted as an adult of any felony, except any pupil convicted of a felony theft crime involving no direct threat to human life.</li> </ol> A school employee and the superintendent of schools shall not be required to report information concerning a pupil specified in this subsection if the expulsion, adjudication as a juvenile offender or conviction of a felony occurred more than 365 days prior to the school employee's report to the superintendent of schools. (b) Each board of education shall adopt a policy that includes: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(1) A requirement that an immediate report be made to the appropriate state or local law enforcement agency by or on behalf of any school employee who knows or has reason to believe that an act has been committed at school, on school property, or at a school supervised activity and that the act involved conduct which constitutes the commission of a felony or misdemeanor or which involves the possession, use or disposal of explosives, firearms or other weapons; and</li> <li>(2) the procedures for making such a report.</li> </ol> (c) School employees shall not be subject to the provisions of subsection (b) of K.S.A. 72-89b04 and amendments thereto if: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>(1) They follow the procedures from a policy adopted pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b); or</li> <li>(2) their board of education fails to adopt such policy.</li> </ol> (d) Each board of education shall annually compile and report to the state board of education at least the following information relating to school safety and security: The types and frequency of criminal acts that are required to be reported pursuant to the provisions of subsection (b), disaggregated by occurrences at school, on school property and at school supervised activities. The report shall be incorporated into and become part of the current report required under the quality performance accreditation system. (e) Each board of education shall make available to pupils and their parents, to school employees and, upon request, to others, district policies and reports concerning school safety and security, except that the provisions of this subsection shall not apply to reports made by a superintendent of schools and school employees pursuant to subsection (a). (f) Nothing in this section shall be construed or operate in any manner so as to prevent any school employee from reporting criminal acts to school officials and to appropriate state and local law enforcement agencies. (g) The state board of education shall extract the information relating to school safety and security from the quality performance accreditation report and transmit the information to the governor, the legislature, the attorney general, the secretary of health and environment, the secretary of social and rehabilitation services and the commissioner of juvenile justice. (h) No board of education, member of any such board, superintendent of schools or school employee shall be liable for damages in a civil action resulting from a person's good faith acts or omissions in complying with the requirements or provisions of the Kansas school safety and security act.

I. SECLUSION ROOMS AND RESTRAINT

In the spring of 2007, the Kansas State Board of Education adopted a set of guidelines for the use of seclusion rooms and/or the use of restraints on children with disabilities. A copy of the guidelines has been included in the process handbook in Appendix A, Figure 13-3.

Certain terms used in the guidelines, such as “seclusion room,” “physical restraint,” and “mechanical restraint,” are specifically defined. The guidelines address the use of these techniques with children with disabilities, regarding when, how and under what circumstances these techniques may be appropriate. The guidelines also address the training needs for school personnel implementing these techniques, and how the use of these techniques should be documented. In addition, any school that uses a seclusion room, as defined in the guidelines, must submit to the state director of special education an annual report consisting of specified information.

Therefore, if a school is considering the use of a seclusion room or of restraints for a child with a disability, it is important to first consult the guidelines.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT SUSPENSION AND EXPULSION FOR CODE OF CONDUCT INCLUDING WEAPONS, DRUGS, OR SERIOUS BODILY INJURY

1. Does in-school suspension count as a day of suspension toward the 11th day rule?

Whether school days of in-school suspension count as school days of suspension for determining if a change of placement has occurred depends on the nature of the in-school suspension environment. Many schools already use in-school suspension for code of conduct violations. Because children frequently are unsupervised and undirected by school personnel if placed on out-of-school suspension, many school districts prefer to use in-school suspension, at least for first-time offenders or less serious offenses. Comments following the Federal regulations indicate that school districts have authority to utilize in-school suspension as a disciplinary tool (Federal Register, August 6, 2006, p. 46715).

Additionally, a school day of in-school suspension should not count as a school day of suspension for services or change of placement purposes if, during the in-school suspension, the child is afforded an opportunity to:

- Continue to appropriately progress in the general curriculum;
- Continue to receive the services specified on his or her IEP; and
- Continue to participate with children without disabilities to the extent they would have in their current placement.

The assumption is that school districts may use in-school suspension for children with disabilities just as they would for children without disabilities. The issue is really whether the school day(s) count toward accumulating the 11th school day of suspension which would require the beginning of educational services or toward the 10 consecutive school days for change of placement or provision of services. The Comments indicate that for children with disabilities, if the in-school suspension approximates the current placement in the areas outlined above, it does not count toward the 10 school days needed for a change of placement or provision of services. On the other hand, if in-school suspension is a place where children are held without opportunities to progress in the general curriculum, receive IEP services, and participate with children without disabilities to the same extent they would have in the current placement, the days do count as school days of suspension for change of placement and provision of services purposes.

2. Does the 10-day written notice requirement for an IEP meeting apply to IEP meetings conducted to consider disciplinary matters?

The school is required to give only 24 hours prior notice of the IEP team meeting to the parents when a student receives a long-term suspension, an expulsion, a short-term suspension that includes the 11th school day of suspension in a school year, or is placed in a 45-day alternative educational setting, and the purpose of the IEP meeting is to develop a functional behavioral assessment or behavior intervention plan (91-40-37(c)), or to determine the special education services needed by the student (91-40-36(d)), or to conduct a manifestation determination (91-40-38(d)).

3. May a student with a disability be suspended from the bus?

Yes, children with disabilities may be suspended from using public school transportation even though they are not suspended from school. However, bus suspension may affect the district's requirement to provide FAPE. If special education services are needed for the child to receive FAPE and the child needs transportation to receive special education services, transportation would be needed and should be addressed by the IEP Team. Guidance to school districts to determine if school days for bus suspension count as school days for change of placement and provision of services purposes:

- The school is always required to provide FAPE. If a child with a disability cannot get to school to benefit from special education, it is likely that the school is required to continue to provide transportation in some manner.
- If transportation is specified as a related service on the IEP, school days of suspension from bus transportation would count in determining if a change of placement occurs and in provision of services unless the school provides transportation some other way.

- If transportation is NOT required as a related service under the IEP, school days of suspension from the bus should NOT count as school days of suspension for change of placement and provision of services purposes. In such cases, the child's parents have the same obligation to get the child to and from school as a child without disabilities who has been suspended from the bus (unless the parents cannot provide the needed transportation). Also, if bus transportation is not included on the IEP, the comments suggest a suspension from transportation privileges may indicate the IEP team should consider whether that behavior on the bus should be addressed within the IEP or a behavioral intervention plan for the child. (Federal Register, August 14, 2006, p. 46715.)

4. Do the discipline provisions of IDEA 2004 extend to children who are gifted and receiving special education services according to the Kansas statute for special education?

No, IDEA-97 discipline provisions only apply to children with disabilities.

5. Do the discipline provisions of IDEA 2004 extend to children who are in the process of being identified as eligible for special education services?

Yes. Federal regulations for IDEA 2004 state that if a school had knowledge that the child is a child with a disability, the child is covered under these provisions. A school is deemed to have knowledge if a teacher or other personnel have expressed specific concerns about a pattern of behavior demonstrated by the child directly to the director of special education or to other supervisory personnel or if the parent of the child requested an evaluation. Therefore, it is very important that screening records be maintained on children under 5 years of age in the child's cumulative folder. Likewise, for children over age 5, records from the general education intervention process should be maintained in the student's cumulative folder. Such data will provide documentation that if there was a suspected disability at some time in the past, the school made the determination whether or not the child should be referred for an initial evaluation to determine eligibility. Therefore, it is important for schools to maintain records on children as such data could be important should a disciplinary proceeding occur later.

6. Are parents entitled to be notified when their child is suspended or expelled for behavior that is subject to these discipline provisions?

Yes. If contemplating a suspension or an expulsion of a child with a disability, school districts must follow the requirements of K.S.A. 72-8902. For long-term suspensions or expulsions, the school district must also provide parents the required notice, under K.S.A. 72-991(d), of the school's decision to make a disciplinary change of placement as well as a copy of the Parent Rights document (34 C.F.R. 300.523(a)(1)).

7. What steps must be completed by the end of the 10th school day for a student to be suspended for a long term, or expelled from school, for behavior not involving weapons, drugs, or a substantial likelihood of injury?

In addition to the two notice requirements discussed in Question #6, the school must conduct a manifestation determination. K.S.A. 72-991a(d)(2) requires a manifestation determination within 10 school days from the decision to impose a long-term suspension or an expulsion. School personnel may not order a long-term suspension or expulsion of a child with a disability until a manifestation determination has been completed (K.S.A. 72-8902). Thus, the school should have the manifestation determination completed before the disciplinary hearing is conducted.

8. Many high schools have a point system for behavioral infractions, with a certain number of points leading to a suspension or other disciplinary actions. The principal has knowledge about a student's total points. Does this constitute the school's having knowledge of a potential disability?

Not necessarily. A student who is frequently violating the school's code of conduct is not necessarily a child with a disability. Such a child should be referred to the building's general education intervention (GEI) or problem-solving team, which would provide a method of addressing the needs of a student who is experiencing behavior problems in school. The problem-solving team may use general education interventions and then make a determination if other evaluations or a referral should be made, as appropriate.

9. Who determines the interim alternative educational setting?

It depends on the behavior and the situation in which the determination is being made. The school can determine the interim alternative educational setting for a short-term removal for 10 consecutive school days or less, or for a short-term removal of more than 10 days that does not constitute a change in placement. When the child is being removed for more than 10 school days and the behavior is not a manifestation of the child's disability, the IEP team will determine the interim alternative educational setting.

For behavior relating to drugs, weapons, or serious bodily injury the decision regarding IF a student is ordered to an interim alternative educational setting is made by designated school officials. However, the decision of WHERE that setting will be is made by the child's IEP Team (K.S.A. 72-991a(c); 34 C.F.R. 300.531). For behavior substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, the decision regarding an appropriate interim alternative educational setting is made by a special education due process hearing officer (34 C.F.R. 300.532(b)(2)(ii)).

10. The law is specific in defining a pocket knife with a blade of more than 2-1/2 inches in length as being a weapon. What about a scalpel, Xacto knife, or box cutter?

These items could very well be considered a weapon under the law, which defines a weapon, in part, as any instrument or material that is used for, or is readily capable of, causing death or serious bodily injury. The exception for a knife having a blade of less than 2-1/2 inches in length applies only to "pocket" knives (K.S.A. 78-8902(a)(3)(C)).

11. May a child be placed in an interim alternative educational setting more than one time each school year?

Yes, however, a school district cannot order a second interim alternative educational setting for the same incident of behavior. A child could be placed in a short term interim alternative educational setting several times if they are not more than 10 consecutive days or if they do not constitute a change in placement. If a child brings a gun to school, the school officials could impose one 45 school day interim alternative educational setting, and if the school believes returning the child to his placement specified in the child's IEP at the end of the 45 school day period is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, the school district could ask a special education due process hearing officer to order an additional 45 school day the interim alternative educational setting.

12. If a child without a disability has been disciplined, and during the disciplinary period the child was evaluated and found to be eligible, would the days of discipline prior to eligibility count toward a long term suspension?

No.

13. If a child with a disability is sent home for part of a day is it considered a suspension?

Yes. Any time a child is removed from school as a disciplinary action without educational services this would be considered a suspension. Any part of a day is considered a whole day of suspension.

14. If a child with a disability has a behavior intervention plan (BIP) that calls for a removal from school, is that considered a suspension?

IEP teams should take caution when including a removal from school as part of a BIP. If a child is removed from school without educational services this would be counted toward a long term suspension.

15. If the school has a school wide behavior plan for all students, and a child with a disability reaches the point where he is suspended, what behavior does the team consider during a manifestation determination?

The team must consider all behaviors which led to the suspension.

16. With regard to a manifestation determination, what is meant by conduct that has a “direct and substantial” relationship to a student’s disability.

One way that a student’s behavior is determined to be a manifestation of the student’s disability is when relevant members of the student’s IEP team determine that the behavior in question was caused by, or had a “direct and substantial” relationship to the child’s disability. The phrase “direct and substantial” has not been specifically defined. The only guidance to what is meant by the phrase “direct and substantial” is a statement in the comments to the federal regulations indicating that a behavior should not be determined to be a manifestation of a student’s disability if the relationship of that behavior to the child’s disability was merely “an attenuated association, such as low self-esteem.” Federal Register, August 14, 2006, pg. 46720.

With so little guidance regarding this question, it is useful to examine the plain meaning of the words themselves. Webster’s dictionary defines the term “direct,” as the term appears to be used in the context of a manifestation determination, as “proceeding in a straight line or by the shortest course; straight; not oblique; proceeding in an unbroken line of descent.” The term “substantial” is defined as “of ample or considerable amount, quantity, size, etc.” See, Webster’s College Dictionary, Random House (Second Edition 1999). Accordingly, to have both a direct and substantial relationship to a student’s disability, the student’s behavior must be linked straight to the student’s disability without the necessity of examining outside influences or effects and the link of the behavior to the disability must be one of ample or considerable proportion. This is a subjective standard and reasonable minds on the team may disagree. When that happens, the school representative on the team must make the final decision. A parent has a right to challenge the decision of a manifestation team through an expedited due process hearing.

CHAPTER 14

CHILDREN IN PRIVATE AND PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS

INTRODUCTION

Federal and State laws and regulations recognize that children with exceptionalities may be receiving their education in private elementary and secondary school settings for different reasons. In different situations, school districts have different obligations. A school's obligation to provide special education services or pay for services provided to children in private schools depends on whether:

- The child with an disability is placed in the private school by the public school as a means of providing special education and related services;
- The child with an exceptionality (including gifted) is enrolled in a private school by his or her parents because the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE) is at issue; or
- The child with an exceptionality (including gifted) is voluntarily enrolled in a private school by his or her parents to receive general education.

Kansas defines a private school as: "an organization which regularly offers education at the elementary or secondary level, which is exempt from federal income taxation under section 501 of the federal internal revenue code of 1954, as amended, which conforms to the civil rights act of 1964, and attendance at which satisfies any compulsory school attendance laws of this state" (K.S.A. 72-5392(c)). The definition of private schools includes parochial schools.

Additionally, Kansas defines elementary and secondary schools as follows: (1) "elementary school" means any nonprofit institutional day or residential school that offers instruction in any or all of the grades kindergarten through nine. (2) "Secondary School" means any nonprofit institutional day or residential school that offers instruction in any or all of the grades nine through 12.

These definitions do not include preschool programs or home schooling. Therefore, children ages 3 and 4, or 5 year old children not in kindergarten are not included in the private school requirements. Charter schools in Kansas are considered part of local school districts and are not private schools. In addition, there are specific requirements for children identified as gifted who are enrolled by their parents in private schools.

This chapter addresses the following topics:

- A. Children Placed in Private Schools by the Public School
- B. Children Enrolled by Their Parents in Private Schools Where FAPE is at Issue
- C. Child Find for Children Voluntary Enrolled in Private Schools by Their Parents
- D. State Requirements for Children Voluntary Enrolled in Private Schools by Their Parents
- E. Federal Requirements for Children Voluntary Enrolled in Private Schools by Their Parents
- F. Mediation and Due Process Rights of Private School Children

A. CHILDREN PLACED IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS BY THE PUBLIC SCHOOL

Both Federal and State laws and regulations allow a school district to place a child with a disability in a private school in order to meet its obligation to provide FAPE to the child. Kansas law clarifies that the use of private schools to meet the requirement for FAPE does not apply to children who are identified as gifted, unless they also have a disability that requires placement in a private school in order to receive FAPE. In most situations, however, schools are able to offer services to meet children's needs within their districts. Only when the IEP team determines that the district is not able to provide the services locally would they arrange for services in a private school. Sometimes a private school setting is the least restrictive environment where a child can achieve educational benefit. In such cases, the IEP team may determine that the most appropriate educational placement is the private school. (See Chapter 6, Educational Placement and Least Restrictive Environment.)

When the public school determines, through the IEP process, that a child with a disability should be placed in a private school or facility, the child's educational program, including special education and related services, must:

- be provided according to an appropriately developed IEP and at no cost to the parents;
- ensure the special education program is provided by staff who meet KSDE personnel standards, although the private school teachers are not required to be highly qualified;
- ensure that the private school provides services consistent with IDEA requirements and other pertinent Federal and State laws and regulations (e.g., in accordance with IEP requirements); and
- ensure that the child has all rights of a child with a disability who is served by the public school.

Before the public school places a child with a disability in a private school or facility, the public school must initiate and conduct a meeting to develop an IEP for the child. The public school must ensure that a representative of the private school or facility attends the meeting. If a representative cannot attend, the public school must use other methods to ensure participation by the private school or facility, including individual or conference telephone calls.

After the child with a disability enters the private school or facility, the public school responsible for providing FAPE to the child may allow any meetings to review and revise the child's IEP to be initiated and conducted by the private school or facility. If the private school or facility initiates and conducts the IEP meeting, the private school must notify the public school and the public school must ensure that the parents and a public school representative participate in any decision about the child's IEP. In addition, the public school and the parent must agree to any proposed changes in the IEP before those changes are implemented.

State Statutes:

K.S.A. 72-966(a)(2)

Each board shall provide a free appropriate public education for exceptional children enrolled in the school district and for children with disabilities who are placed in a private school or facility by the school district as the means of carrying out the board's obligation to provide a free appropriate public education under this act and for children with disabilities who have been suspended for an extended term or expelled from school.

K.S.A. 72-967(a)(5)

Each board, in order to comply with the requirements of this act shall have the authority to:

(5) Contract with any private nonprofit corporation or any public or private institution, within or outside the state, which has proper special education or related services for exceptional children. Whenever an exceptional child is educated by a private nonprofit corporation or a public or private institution as provided under this paragraph, such child shall be considered a pupil of the school district contracting for such education to the same extent as other pupils of such school district for the purpose of determining entitlements and participation in all state, federal and other financial assistance or payments to such school district.

Kansas Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-22. Agency placement in private schools or facilities. (a) If an agency places a child with a disability in a private school or facility as a means of providing FAPE to the child, the agency shall remain responsible for ensuring that the child is provided the special education and related services specified in the child's IEP and is afforded all the rights granted by the law.

(b)(1) Before an agency places a child with a disability in a private school or facility, the agency shall initiate and conduct a meeting to develop an IEP for the child.

(2) The agency shall ensure that a representative of the private school or facility attends the meeting. If a representative cannot attend, the agency shall use other methods to ensure participation by the private school or facility, including individual or conference telephone calls.

(c)(1) After a child with a disability enters a private school or facility, the agency responsible for providing FAPE to the child may allow any meetings to review and revise the child's IEP to be initiated and conducted by the private school or facility.

(2) If the private school or facility initiates and conducts these meetings, the agency shall ensure that the parent and an agency representative are involved in any decision about the child's IEP and shall agree to any proposed changes in the IEP before those changes are implemented.

B. CHILDREN ENROLLED BY THEIR PARENTS IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS WHEN FAPE IS AT ISSUE

If the parents of a child with an exceptionality (including gifted), who previously was receiving special education and related services from the public school, enroll their child, without the consent of or referral by the public school, in a private preschool or a private elementary or secondary school because the parents believe the child was not receiving FAPE from the public school, a court or special education due process hearing officer may require the agency to reimburse the parents for the cost of that enrollment only if the hearing officer makes both of the following findings:

1. The public school did not make FAPE available to the child in a timely manner before the private school enrollment; and
2. The private school placement made by the parents is appropriate to meet the needs of the child.

A court or special education due process hearing officer may find that a private school placement by the parents is appropriate for a child although that placement does not meet State standards that apply to special education and related services which are required to be provided by the public school.

A court or special education due process hearing officer may deny or reduce any reimbursement for private school placement by the parents, if the court or special education due process hearing officer makes any of the following findings:

1. At the most recent IEP meeting that the parents attended before making the private school placement, the parents did not inform the IEP team that the parents were rejecting the services or placements proposed by the public school to provide FAPE to their child, including a statement of their concerns and their intent to enroll their child in a private school at public expense; or, in the alternative

At least 10 business days, including any holidays that occur on a business day, before removal of the child from public school, the parents did not give written notification to the public school that they were rejecting the services or placements proposed by the public school to provide FAPE to their child, including a statement of their concerns and their intent to enroll their child in a private school at public expense;

2. Before the parents' removal of the child from public school, the public school provided Prior Written Notice to the parents of its intent to evaluate the child, including a statement of the purpose of the evaluation that was appropriate and reasonable, but the parents did not make the child available for the evaluation; or
3. The actions of the parents in removing the child from public school were unreasonable.

A court or special education due process hearing officer must not deny or reduce reimbursement of the cost of a private school placement for failure to provide the notification to the public school, if the court or special education due process hearing officer makes any of the following findings:

- Compliance with the notification requirement would likely have resulted in physical harm to the child.
- The public school prevented the parents from providing the required notification.
- The public school did not inform the parents of their requirement to notify the school of their intent to remove their child.

A court or special education due process hearing officer, at its discretion, may allow a parent full or partial reimbursement of the costs of a private school placement even though the parent failed to provide the notice required, if the court or hearing officer finds either of the following:

1. the parent cannot read or write in English, or
2. compliance with the prior notice requirement would likely have resulted in serious emotional harm to the child.

The public school must be given an opportunity to offer FAPE to the child before tuition reimbursement can become an issue. However, the special education due process hearing officers and courts retain their authority under prior case law to award appropriate relief when a district fails to provide a FAPE for a child who has not yet received special education and related services.

Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. 300.403) address this issue, as do State regulations:

Kansas Regulation: K.A.R. 91-40-41. Private school placement by parents to obtain FAPE. (a) (1) If the parent of an exceptional child who previously was receiving special education and related services from an agency enroll the child, without the consent of or referral by the agency, in a private preschool or a private elementary or secondary school because the parent believes the child was not receiving FAPE from the agency, a court or special education due process hearing officer may require the agency to reimburse the parent for the cost of that enrollment only if the court or due process hearing officer makes both of the following findings: (A) The agency did not make FAPE available to the child in a timely manner before the private school enrollment. (B) The private school placement made by the parent is appropriate to meet the needs of the child. (2) A court or due process hearing officer may find that a private school placement by a parent is appropriate for a child although that placement does not meet state standards that apply to special education and related services that are required to be provided by public agencies. (b) Subject to subsection (c), a court or due process hearing officer may deny or reduce any reimbursement for private school placement by a parent, if the court or due process hearing officer makes any of the following findings: (1) (A) At the most recent IEP meeting that the parent attended before making the private school placement, the parent did not inform the IEP team that the parent was rejecting the services or placements proposed by the agency to provide FAPE to the child, including a statement of concerns and the intent to enroll the child in a private school at public expense; or (B) at least 10 business days, including any holidays that occur on a business day, before removal of the child from public school, the parent did not give written notice to the public agency of the information specified in paragraph (1) (A) of this subsection. (2) Before the parent's removal of the child from public school, the agency notified the parent, in accordance with the requirements of K.S.A. 72-988 and amendments thereto, of its intent to evaluate the child, including a statement of the purpose of the evaluation that was appropriate and reasonable, but the parent did not make the child available for the evaluation. (3) The actions of the parent in removing the child from public school were unreasonable. (c) Notwithstanding the notice requirements in subsection (b), a court or due process hearing officer shall not deny or reduce reimbursement of the cost of a private school placement for failure to provide the notice, if the court or due process hearing officer makes any of the following findings: (1) Compliance with the prior notice requirement would likely have resulted in physical harm to the child. (2) The agency prevented the parent from providing the required prior notice. (3) The parent had not been given notice by the agency of the prior notice requirement prescribed in subsection (b). (d) At the discretion of a court or due process hearing officer, the court or hearing officer may allow a parent full or partial reimbursement of the cost of a private school placement even though the parent failed to provide the notice required in subsection (b), if the court or hearing officer finds either of the following: (1) The parent is not literate and cannot write in English. (2) Compliance with the prior notice requirement would likely have resulted in serious emotional harm to the child.

C. CHILD FIND FOR CHILDREN VOLUNTARILY ENROLLED IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS BY THEIR PARENTS

When children are enrolled by their parents in private schools, the public school has continuing responsibility for child find and must locate, evaluate, and identify children with exceptionalities (including gifted) in private schools just as they do in the public schools. Federal and State laws require the district where the private school is located to conduct child find activities to locate children with disabilities attending private elementary and secondary schools that are located in the jurisdiction of the school district. This includes children with disabilities who reside in another state but attend a private school that is located within the boundaries of a public school district. The district of residence is still required to conduct child find activities for children who may be identified as gifted and for children ages 3 and 4, or 5 year old children not in kindergarten. However, Kansas schools do not have a responsibility to locate, identify, evaluate or serve gifted children who reside in another state.

In meeting the child find obligation with regard to children with disabilities attending private schools within the school district boundaries, the public schools must consult with appropriate representatives of private schools and parents of private school children with disabilities to determine how best to conduct child find activities. The methods chosen to locate, identify, and evaluate must be comparable to methods used for children in public schools. Additionally, they will determine how parents, teachers, and private school officials will be informed of the process. (See Chapter 2, General Education Interventions and Screening.)

The activities undertaken to carry out the child find responsibility must meet the following criteria:

- Be similar to the activities undertaken for exceptional children enrolled in the public schools;
- Provide for the equitable participation of private school children;

- Provide for an accurate count of children with disabilities enrolled in the private schools; and
- Be completed in a time period comparable to the time for these activities in the public schools.

If the parents of a child who is voluntarily placed in a private school does not provide consent for the initial evaluation or the reevaluation, or the parent fails to respond to a request to provide consent, the school may not use the consent override procedures of mediation or due process, and the school is not required to consider the child as eligible for special education services (K.A.R. 91-40-27(f)(2)).

If a child is enrolled, or is going to enroll in a private school that is not located in the parent's district of residence, parental consent must be obtained before any personally identifiable information about the child is released between officials in the district where the private school is located and officials in the district of the parent's residence (34 C.F.R. 300.622(a)(3)).

State Statute:
K.S.A. 72-966(a)(1)

Each board shall adopt and implement procedures to assure that all exceptional children residing in the school district, including children enrolled in private schools, who are in need of special education and related services, are identified, located and evaluated.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-42. Child find and count of children with disabilities enrolled in private schools; determination of children to receive services.

(a) Child find activities.

- (1) Each board, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-7, shall locate, identify, and evaluate all children with disabilities who are enrolled in private elementary or secondary schools located in the school district, including children with disabilities who reside in another state.
- (2) The activities undertaken to carry out this responsibility shall meet the following criteria:
  - (A) Be similar to the activities undertaken for exceptional children enrolled in the public schools;
  - (B) provide for the equitable participation of private school children;
  - (C) provide for an accurate count of children with disabilities enrolled in the private schools; and
  - (D) be completed in a time period comparable to the time for these activities in the public schools.
- (3) Each board, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-42a, shall consult with representatives of private schools and parents of private school children concerning the activities described in paragraph (1) of this subsection.
- (4) The cost of carrying out the child find activities required under this regulation, including individual evaluations of private school children, shall not be considered in determining if an agency has met its obligation to provide a proportionate share of its federal funds for private school children.

(b) Child count activities.

- (1) Each board shall annually conduct a count of the number of children with disabilities who are enrolled in private schools located in the school district. This count, at the discretion of each board, shall be conducted on either December 1 or the last Friday of October of each school year.
- (2) Each board, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-42a, shall consult with representatives of private schools and parents of private school children concerning the annual count required in paragraph (1) of this subsection.
- (3) Each board shall use the child count required by this subsection to calculate the amount of funds provided to the school district under the federal law that the school district must allocate for the purpose of providing special education and related services to private school children with disabilities in the next succeeding school year.

(c) Each board, based upon the results of its child find activities under subsection (a), shall consult with representatives of private schools and parents of children with disabilities enrolled in private schools and then determine which private school children will be provided special education and related services by the board.

D. STATE LAW REQUIREMENTS FOR CHILDREN VOLUNTARILY ENROLLED IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS BY THEIR PARENTS

The State law relating to children voluntarily enrolled in private schools by their parents significantly adds to Federal requirements. State law requires that when a parent requests services, the school district of residence will make available all services and will provide any or all of the special education and related services that are identified by an IEP team for any child with an exceptionality, to which the parent provides consent. Therefore, the parent of a child attending a private school would go to the district of residence to request services.

Children whose parents request the district of residence to provide services identified by the IEP team, would receive services through an IEP. The IEP is to be developed as it would be for any other child. Parents of children attending a private school and receiving services in a public school in accordance with an IEP have all the due process rights under Federal and State laws and regulations and must have a free appropriate public education made available to them.

State law allows for the district of residence to expend State and local funds to provide services to children with exceptionalities voluntarily enrolled by their parents in private schools under the following conditions:

- In consultation with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private school, the public school district determines the site for services.
- If services are provided at the public school site, the services must be provided on an equal basis with the provision of such services for children in public schools.
- If services are provided at the public school, the public school district must provide transportation to and from the public school, but it is not required to provide transportation outside the boundaries of the resident school district.
- If the public school provides the services at the private school, amounts expended for providing the services need not exceed the average cost of providing the same services to children with that same exceptionality in the public school. (K.S.A. 72-5393)

For children whose parents request any of the services identified by the IEP team and the services are provided at the private school, the school district of residence is not required to spend more than the "average cost" of providing the same service in public school. In determining this cost, the public school must look to similar services in the public school for children with the same exceptionality. The average amount expended may or may not allow for the provision of services at a level that would provide a free appropriate public education. For services provided at a private school, State law simply requires the expenditure of this level of funding, however, and does not require the provision of FAPE. When calculating the average cost, the public school should not include the child in private school in the numbers of children currently being served.

State law requires the district of residence to provide transportation if the child needs it to participate in special education and related services. However, the district of residence does not have to provide transportation outside of the district boundaries. Therefore, an offer of services within the district meets the district's obligation of making FAPE available. The district of residence could contract for the services with the district where the private school is located, but is not required to do this.

Parents may refuse to accept some or all of the offered services. In this case, the public school should have documentation that the parents refused to accept some or all of the services recommended by the IEP team. One way this could be documented is by providing Prior Written Notice for the services identified on the IEP and the parent would consent to only the services they are accepting. For example, the parents may refuse services because they are unable to provide transportation for the child to the services in the district of residence.

State law allows for services to be provided at either the public or private school, but forbids the provision of special education and related services "in connection with religious courses, devotional exercises, religious training, or any other religious activity." The site where services are provided is determined by the school district in consultation with the parents and private school officials.

Under State law, children identified as gifted who are enrolled in a private school outside of their district of residence are also to be provided special education services by the district in which the child resides. The resident district would conduct the child find, do the evaluation, determine eligibility, develop an IEP and offer services in the district of residence. However, the resident district is not required to cross district boundaries to provide special education and related services. Therefore, an offer of services provided in the district would fulfill its requirement to make FAPE available even if the parent refuses the services at that site.

State Statutes:

K.S.A. 72-966 Duties of boards of education in meeting requirements of law; responsibilities of state board of education and other state agencies; interagency agreements; dispute resolution.

(a) (3) Each board shall provide exceptional children who are enrolled by their parents in private schools with special education and related services in accordance with state law and federal law.

K.S.A. 72-5392

(c) "Private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school" means an organization which regularly offers education at the elementary or secondary level, which is exempt from federal income taxation under section 501 of the federal internal revenue code of 1954, as amended, which conforms to the civil rights act of 1964, and attendance at which satisfies any compulsory school attendance laws of this state.

K.S.A. 72-5393

Every school district shall provide special education services for exceptional children who reside in the school district and attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, whether such school is located within or outside the school district upon request of a parent or guardian of any such child for the provision of such services. No school district shall be required to provide such services outside the school district. Any school district may provide special education services for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school located within the school district whether or not all such children reside in the school district. Special education services, which are provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school which is located in the school district may be provided in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school or in the public schools of the school district. The site for the provision of special education services under this section for an exceptional child shall be determined by the school district in consultation with the parent or guardian of the child and with officials of the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school. Special education services provided under this section for exceptional children who attend a private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school are subject to the following requirements:

- (a) If the services are provided for in the private, nonprofit elementary or secondary school, amounts expended for the provisions of such services shall not be required to exceed the average cost to the school district for the provision of the same services in the public schools of the school district for children within the same category of exceptionality;
- (b) If the services are provided for in the public schools of the school district, the services shall be provided on an equal basis with the provision of such services for exceptional children attending the public schools; and
- (c) If the services are provided in the public schools of the school district, transportation to and from such public school shall be provided by the school district.

K.S.A. 72-5394

No special education services shall be provided in connection with religious courses, devotional exercises, religious training, or any other religious activity.

E. FEDERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR CHILDREN VOLUNTARILY ENROLLED IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS BY THEIR PARENTS

Federal law requires that children with disabilities in private schools (K-12) be provided an opportunity for participation in special education services. Federal law makes it clear that a child with a disability in a private school has no individual right to special education or related services. Rather, the public school district where the private school is located must ensure that a proportionate share of Federal funding is used to provide services to this population of children. Therefore, under Federal Law, in almost all cases, the public school district where the private school is located would not be obligated to provide any or all special education and related services to every child with a disability enrolled in a private school located within its boundaries.

This section of the Federal and State laws and regulations requiring the expenditures of a proportionate share of Federal funding to provide special education services does not include children identified as gifted. Additionally, because the Kansas definition of a private elementary school does not include the education of children prior to kindergarten, this part of the Federal and State laws and regulations also does not include preschool age children with disabilities enrolled in preschool programs.

1. Consultation Requirements

Each school district must annually consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities attending private schools within the school district during the design and development of special education and related services for parentally-placed children and before making decisions regarding the following:

- The child find process, including:
  - How parentally-placed private school children suspected of having a disability can participate equitably; and
  - How parents, teachers, and private school officials will be informed of the process.
- The determination of the proportionate share of Federal funds available to serve parentally-placed private school children with disabilities including the determination of how the proportionate share of those funds was calculated.
- The consultation process among the school district, private school officials, and representatives of parents of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, including how the process will operate throughout the school year to ensure that parentally-placed children with disabilities identified through the child find process can meaningfully participate in special education and related services.
- How, where, and by whom special education and related services will be provided for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, including a discussion of:
  - The types of services, including direct services and alternate service delivery mechanisms; and
  - How special education and related services will be apportioned if funds are insufficient to serve all parentally-placed private school children; and
  - How and when those decisions will be made; and
- How, if the school district disagrees with the views of the private school officials on the provision of services or the types of services (whether provided directly or through a contract), the LEA will provide to the private school officials a written explanation of the reasons why the LEA chose not to provide services directly or through a contract.

Consultations with appropriate representatives of private schools and parents of private school children with disabilities should occur in a timely manner before decisions are made that affect the ability of children in a private school to participate in services. These representatives of private schools and parents of the private school children with disabilities must have a genuine opportunity to express their views and have meaningful input into the decision-making process.

The process for allocating the proportionate share of funds and provision of special education and related services to parentally placed private school children under Federal requirements is described below.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-42a. Consultation. (a) Each board shall engage in timely and meaningful consultation with representatives of private schools located in the school district and representatives of parents of children with disabilities enrolled in those private schools before making determinations regarding the following matters:

- (1) How the consultation process among the board, private school officials, and representatives of parents of private school children shall be organized and carried out, including how the process will operate throughout the school year to ensure that children with disabilities who are identified throughout the school year can receive the special education and related services that are provided to private school children;
- (2) how the child find process will be conducted, including the following:
  - (A) How children enrolled in private schools who are suspected of having a disability can participate equitably in the child find process; and
  - (B) how parents, teachers, and private school officials will be informed of the process;
- (3)(A) How the determination of the proportionate share of federal funds that will be available to serve private school children will be made, including a review of how the proportionate share of those funds must be calculated under the federal law; and
- (B) how special education and related services will be apportioned if the proportionate share of federal funds are insufficient to serve all of the private school children who are designated to receive services; and
- (4)(A) How, where, and by whom special education and related services will be provided to private school children, including a discussion of the means by which services will be delivered, including direct services and services through contracts; and
- (B)(2) how and when final decisions on these issues will be made by the board.

(b)(1) When a board of a school district believes that it has completed timely and meaningful consultation as required by this regulation, the board shall seek to obtain a written affirmation, signed by representatives of participating private schools, affirming that the consultation did occur.

(2) If representatives of the private schools do not provide the affirmation within 30 days of the date the affirmation is requested, the board shall forward documentation of the consultation to the state department.

(c)(1) A representative of a private school may submit a complaint to the state department alleging that the board of the school district in which the private school is located failed to engage in consultation that was meaningful and timely or did not give due consideration to the views of private school representatives. A copy of the complaint shall also be submitted to the board.

(2) Each complaint submitted by a private school representative shall include a statement of the specific requirement that the board allegedly failed to meet and the facts that support the allegation.

(3) Within 30 days of receiving a complaint, the board shall prepare a reply to the complaint and submit the reply and documentation supporting its position to the state department.

(4)(A) Within 60 days of receiving a complaint, the state department shall issue a determination on whether the complaint is justified and any corrective action that is to be taken.

(B) If the private school representative is dissatisfied with the decision of the state department, the representative may appeal the decision by submitting an appeal to the Secretary of the United States department of education as specified in the federal regulations.

2. Calculating the Allocation of Proportionate Share of Funds

Federal law describes the minimum amount of funds that must be expended to provide services for children enrolled in private schools by their parents. That amount is calculated by determining the number of children with disabilities who are enrolled in private schools by their parents within the school district, and have been identified as a child with a disability by the public school district, whether or not they are receiving services. This count must be reported in the application for the Part B federal funds received for children ages 3-21 and 3-5 preschool funds.

To meet Federal requirements, a public school district must have an accurate count of the number of children with disabilities voluntarily enrolled by their parents in private schools located within the district. This count includes children attending private schools in the district that are identified as eligible for special education and related services by the public school, whether or not they are receiving any special education services. The public school must consult with appropriate representatives of private schools and representatives of parents of private school children with disabilities in deciding how to conduct the annual count of children with disabilities in private schools. The annual private school count may be different than the annual Federal child count of children receiving special education or related services from the public school district or cooperative. The annual private school child count is to be used by the public school district for planning the level of services to be provided to private school children and in determining the proportionate share of funds to be used in the subsequent school year.

Once the proportionate share of funds is calculated, the funds that are actually expended do not have to be Federal funds. Therefore, if State categorical aid funds or local funds are being used to provide services to children with disabilities who are enrolled in a private school, this expenditure could meet the requirement of the public school to spend its proportionate share of funds on such children. The cost of carrying out the child find activities, including an evaluation, cannot be included in determining if the district has met its obligation to provide a proportionate share of funds for private school children. If all funds allocated for special education and related services to private school children are not expended during the school year, the funds must be carried over to provide services to children in private schools in the next subsequent school year. (K.A.R. 91-40-42)

The Kansas definition of private school only addresses settings for children beginning at kindergarten. Therefore, the proportionate share of funds under the preschool federal allocation would be calculated for five year old children voluntarily enrolled in a private schools K-12.

For complete information on allocation of funds for private schools contact, KSDE, Special Education Services at 800-203-9462 and see Appendix B of the Federal Regulations, August 14, 2006.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-44. Allocation and expenditure of federal funds; reports. (a) To meet the requirement of K.A.R. 91-40-43 (a), each board shall allocate, for expenditure in providing special education and related services to private school children, the amounts specified below.

- (1) For private school children aged three through 21, an amount calculated as follows:
  - (A) Divide the number of private school children aged three through 21 who are enrolled in private schools located in the school district by the total number of children with disabilities aged three through 21 in the school district; and
  - (B) multiply the quotient determined under paragraph (1) (A) times the total amount of federal funds received by the school district under section 1411 (f) of the federal law; and
- (2) for private school children aged three through five, an amount calculated as follows:
  - (A) Divide the number of private school children aged three through five who are enrolled in private elementary schools located in the school district by the total number of children with disabilities aged three through five in the school district; and
  - (B) multiply the quotient determined under paragraph (2) (A) times the total amount of federal funds received by the school district under section 1419 (g) of the federal law.

(b) In making the calculations under subsection (a), each board shall include all private school children whether or not those children are actually receiving special education or related services from the school district.

(c) (1) Each board, to the extent necessary, shall expend the amounts calculated under subsection (a) of this regulation to provide private school children with those special education and related services that have been determined will be provided to those children under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-43.

- (2) If a board does not expend all of the funds allocated for the provision of special education and related services to private school children during a school year, the board shall allocate the unexpended funds for the purpose of providing services to private school children during the next succeeding school year.

(d) (1) A board, in meeting the requirement of subsection (c) of this regulation, shall not be authorized to include expenditures made by the board for child find activities under K.A.R. 91-40-42.

- (2) A board, in meeting the requirement of subsection (c) of this regulation, shall be authorized to include expenditures made by the board to provide transportation to private school children to receive special education and related services.

(e) Each board shall maintain records regarding the following information related to children enrolled in private schools located in the school district:

- (1) The number of children evaluated;
- (2) the number of children determined to be children with disabilities; and
- (3) the number of children provided with special education and related services.

Appendix B to Part 300—Proportionate Share Calculation

Each LEA must expend, during the grant period, on the provision of special education and related services for the parentally-placed private school children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA an amount that is equal to—

- (1) A proportionate share of the LEA’s subgrant under section 611(f) of the Act for children with disabilities aged 3 through 21. This is an amount that is the same proportion of the LEA’s total subgrant under section 611(f) of the Act as the number of parentally placed private school children with disabilities aged 3 through 21 enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA is to the total number of children with disabilities enrolled in public and private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA aged 3 through 21; and
- (2) A proportionate share of the LEA’s subgrant under section 619(g) of the Act for children with disabilities aged 3 through 5. This is an amount that is the same proportion of the LEA’s total subgrant under section 619(g) of the Act as the total number of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities aged 3 through 5 enrolled in private elementary schools located in the LEA is to the total number of children with disabilities enrolled in public and private elementary schools located in the LEA aged 3 through 5.

Consistent with section 612(a)(10)(A)(i) of the Act and § 300.133 of these regulations, annual expenditures for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities are calculated based on the total number of children with disabilities enrolled in public and private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA eligible to receive special education and related services under Part B, as compared with the total number of eligible parentally-placed private school children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools located in the LEA. This ratio is used to determine the proportion of the LEA’s total Part B subgrants under section 611(f) of the Act for children aged 3 through 21, and under section 619(g) of the Act for children aged 3 through 5, that is to be expended on services for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA.

The following is an example of how the proportionate share is calculated:

There are 300 eligible children with disabilities enrolled in the Flintstone School District and 20 eligible parentally-placed private school children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA for a total of 320 eligible public and private school children with disabilities (note: proportionate share for parentally-placed private school children is based on total children eligible, not children served). The number of eligible parentally-placed private school children with disabilities (20) divided by the total number of eligible public and private school children with disabilities (320) indicates that 6.25 percent of the LEA’s subgrant must be spent for the group of eligible parentally-placed children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA. Flintstone School District receives $152,500 in Federal flow through funds.

Therefore, the LEA must spend $9,531.25 on special education or related services to the group of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA. (Note: The LEA must calculate the proportionate share of IDEA funds before earmarking funds for any early intervening activities in § 300.226).

The following outlines the calculations for the example of how the proportionate share is calculated. Proportionate Share Calculation for Parentally-Placed Private School Children with Disabilities For Flintstone School District:

Number of eligible children with disabilities in public schools in the LEA ..... 300
Number of parentally-placed eligible children with disabilities in private elementary schools and secondary schools located in the LEA.... 20

Total number of eligible children .....	320
FEDERAL FLOW-THROUGH FUNDS TO FLINTSTONE SCHOOL DISTRICT
Total allocation to Flintstone .....	$152,500
Calculating Proportionate Share:
Total allocation to Flintstone .....	152,500
Divided by total number of eligible children .....	320
Average allocation per eligible child .....	476.5625
Multiplied by the number of parentally placed children with disabilities .....	20
Amount to be expended for parentally- placed children with disabilities .....	9,531.25

3. Services Provided With A Services Plan

After the public school district determines the amount of funds that must be allocated for providing services to children with disabilities in private schools located within the district, the public school district, in consultation with appropriate representatives of private schools and representatives of parents of children with disabilities voluntarily enrolled in private schools, must determine how the funds will be allocated, how and where services will be provided and by whom. The public school district, however, must ultimately determine the types and levels of services to be provided.

If a child with a disability, who is voluntarily enrolled by their parents in a private school, receives services offered by the school district where the private school is located, with its proportionate share of funds according to the agreement reached in the consultation, the school would develop a Services Plan for the child. The regulations refer to this plan as a Services Plan to avoid confusing it with an IEP. An IEP is an inherent component of a free appropriate public education (FAPE). A "Services Plan" is to be used because it is clear under Federal and State laws and regulations that these children in private schools do not have an individual right to receive FAPE. The parents of children served with a Services Plan do not have any due process rights beyond issues related to child find which includes evaluation/reevaluation. Parents may file a complaint with the State Department of Education if they feel that the public school has failed to meet their obligations under the Federal and State law and regulations.

Kansas laws and regulations require the district of residence to make FAPE available through an IEP for any child voluntarily enrolled in a private school by their parent. Therefore, the district where the private school is located would use a Services Plan only for non-resident children for whom they may be providing limited services with their proportionate share of funds.

The Services Plan describes the specific special education and/or related services to be provided to the child as a result of the consultation with appropriate representatives of private schools and representatives of the parents of private school children. To the extent appropriate, the Services Plan includes all of the IEP components. The elements in each child's Services Plan may vary depending on the services to be provided. Like an IEP, the Services Plan must be reviewed and revised on an annual basis, and as necessary.

Many children's Services Plans will include:

- The child's present level of academic achievement and functional performance;
- The measurable annual goals, including benchmarks or short-term objectives, if appropriate;
- A statement of the special education, related services, supplementary aids and services and modifications;
- A statement of the program accommodations, or supports;
- An explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with children without disabilities in the general education environment;
- The projected date for the beginning of the services and modifications, and the amount, anticipated frequency, location and duration of the services and modifications; and
- A statement of how the child's progress toward the measurable annual goals will be measured and how the parents will be regularly informed of their child's progress.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-43. Services to private school children. (a) Consistent with the number and location of private school children in the school district, each board shall provide special education and related services to this group of children in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-43 through 91-40-48. Each board also shall provide services to gifted children who reside in the district and are enrolled in a private school.

(b) The parent of an exceptional child may request that the child be provided special education and related services in accordance with K.S.A. 72-5393 and amendments thereto.

(c) A board shall not be required to provide any special education or related services to a private school child unless one of the following conditions is met:

(1) The child is a member of a group of private school children that has been designated to receive special education and related services in accordance with the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-43 through 91-40-48.

(2) The parent of the child requests that services be provided to the child in accordance with K.S.A. 72-5393 and amendments thereto.

(d) Except as otherwise provided in K.S.A. 72-5393 and amendments thereto, a private school child shall not be entitled to receive any special education or related service that the child would be entitled to receive if enrolled in a public school, and a private school child may receive a different amount of special education or related services than a child with a disability who is enrolled in a public school.

(e) Each board shall ensure that the special education and related services provided to private school children are provided by personnel who meet the same standards as the standards for public school personnel, except that private school teachers who provide services to private school children shall not be required to be highly qualified under the federal law.

K.A.R. 91-40-45. Services plan or IEP

(a) Each board shall develop and implement a services plan for each private school child who meets both of the following criteria:

(1) The child is a member of the group of private school children that has been designated to receive special education and related services under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-43; and

(2) The child is not receiving special education and related services by request of the child's parent under the provisions of K.S.A. 72-5393 and amendments thereto.

(b) A board shall ensure that the services plan for each private school child meets each of the following requirements:

(1) The services plan shall describe the specific special education and related services that the board will provide to the child, based upon the services the board has determined that it will make available to private school children under the provisions of K.A.R. 91-40-43.

(2) The services plan shall be developed, reviewed, and revised, as necessary, in the same manner in which IEPs are developed, reviewed, and revised under this article, except the board shall ensure that a representative of the child's private school is invited to attend, or to otherwise participate in, each meeting held to develop or review the child's services plan.

(3) The services plan shall meet the requirements of K.A.R. 91-40-18 with respect to the services that the child is designated to receive.

(c) Each board shall develop, review, and revise, as necessary, in accordance with this article of regulations, an IEP for the following children:

(1) Each private school child whose parent requests special education and related services under the provisions of K.S.A. 72-5393 and amendments thereto; and

(2) each identified gifted child residing in the school district and enrolled in a private school whose parent elects to have the child receive special education and related services from the board.

4. Location of Services for Children with a Services Plan

Under Federal law, the location where services will be provided should be determined in consultation with appropriate representatives of private schools and with representatives of parents of children with disabilities enrolled in private schools. The location of services will impact the amount to be expended to provide services to children with disabilities in private schools. There are options available for the location of the delivery of services to children with disabilities in private schools. Some of the services may be provided in public schools throughout the district or at a central location in the district. The public school district may decide that only some services will be provided at the private school setting. When services are provided in the private school, they may take place at a central location rather than each attendance site.

However, while permitting services to be provided at a parochial school site, the federal law does not require that services be provided in that setting. An offer to provide services at the public school site generally meets a school district's obligations, even if parents refuse the services at that site.

5. Transportation

Federal law requires transportation to be provided to a child with a disability in a private school if transportation is necessary for the child to benefit from or participate in the services provided. State law requires the school to provide transportation to and from the public school if the services are provided at the public school site. Again, the public school is not required to provide transportation outside of its boundaries. Transportation costs may be figured into the proportionate amount of funds expended for services.

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-47. Transportation for exceptional children enrolled in private schools

- (a) Except as otherwise provided in this regulation, each board, to the extent necessary for an exceptional child to benefit from, or to participate in, special education and related services provided to the child by the board, shall furnish or provide for the following transportation services for the child:
- (1) Transportation from the child's private school or home to the site at which the child is provided special education and related services; and
  - (2) transportation from the site at which special education and related services are provided to the child to the child's private school or the child's home, as appropriate.
- (b) Except as provided in K.S.A. 72-8306 and amendments thereto, a board shall not be required to furnish or provide transportation from an exceptional child's home to the child's private school.
- (c) A board shall not be required to furnish or provide transportation services outside of its school district.

6. Restrictions On Use of Federal and State Funds for Private Schools

Schools may not use funds to:

- create separate classes organized on the basis of school enrollment or religion of children if: (a) The classes are at the same site; and (b) The classes include children enrolled in public schools and children enrolled in private schools ;
- finance the existing level of instruction at a private school or otherwise benefit the private school;
- Meet the needs of the private school or the general needs of children enrolled in the private school

Additionally, Federal and State regulations restrict the use of property, equipment, and supplies in serving children with exceptionalities in private schools. Property, equipment, or supplies used on private school premises for providing special education services must remain in the control of the public school and be removed from the private school when they are no longer needed to provide the services. They must also be removed to avoid unauthorized use. Federal funds cannot be used for repair, remodeling, or construction at a private school site. Therefore, State regulations require that public schools ensure that any equipment or supplies be placed in a private school in a manner that allows removal without the necessity of remodeling the private school.

State Regulations:

K.A.R. 91-40-48. Use of funds and equipment (a) Subject to subsection (d), an agency may use state and federal funds to make personnel available at locations other than at its facilities to the extent necessary to provide special education and related services to exceptional children enrolled in private schools, if those services are not normally provided by the private schools.

(b) Subject to subsection (d), an agency may use state and federal funds to pay for the services of an employee of a private school to provide special education and related services if both of the following conditions are met:

- (1) The employee performs the services outside of the employee's regular hours of duty.
- (2) The employee performs the services under public supervision and control.

(c) (1) Subject to subsection (d), an agency may use state and federal funds to provide for the special education and related services needs of exceptional children enrolled in private schools, but shall not use those funds for either of the following purposes:

- (A) To enhance the existing level of instruction in the private school or to otherwise generally benefit the private school; or
- (B) to generally benefit the needs of all students enrolled in the private school.

(2) Each agency shall ensure that special education and related services provided to exceptional children enrolled in private schools are provided in a secular and nonideological manner.

(d) An agency's authority to use federal funds under this regulation shall be limited to providing special education and related services to children with disabilities.

(e) An agency shall not offer or maintain classes that are organized separately on the basis of public or private school enrollment or the religion of the students, if the classes offered to students are provided at the same site and the classes include students enrolled in a public school and students enrolled in a private school.

(f) (1) An agency shall keep title to, and exercise continuing administrative control over, all property, equipment, and supplies that are acquired by the agency to be used for the benefit of exceptional children enrolled in private schools.

(2) An agency may place equipment and supplies in a private school, to the extent allowed by law, for the period of time needed to provide special education and related services to exceptional children enrolled in the school.

- (g) (1) An agency shall ensure that any equipment or supplies placed in a private school are used to provide special education and related services and can be removed from the private school without the necessity of remodeling the private school.
- (2) An agency shall remove its equipment or supplies from a private school if either of the following conditions exists:
- (A) The equipment or supplies are no longer needed to provide special education or related services to students enrolled in the private school.
- (B) Removal is necessary to avoid unauthorized use of the equipment or supplies.
- (h) An agency shall not use public funds to construct, remodel, or repair any private school facility.

F. MEDIATION AND DUE PROCESS RIGHTS FOR PRIVATE SCHOOL CHILDREN

Parents of children voluntarily enrolled in private schools and receiving services from the district of residence in accordance with an IEP, under State law, may utilize the formal complaint process, request mediation or initiate a due process hearing on any matter concerning the child's special education.

Parents of children voluntarily enrolled in private schools and receiving services under a Services Plan cannot seek due process or mediation regarding the school's alleged failure to meet the requirement of providing services to these children. Rather, the parents may request a meeting to review and revise the child's Services Plan, or utilize the State formal complaint process. However, parents can request mediation or due process if the parents believe the school has failed to properly evaluate and identify their child.

Regulations addressing due process, mediation, and formal complaints are found at 34 C.F.R. 300.140 and K.A.R. 91-40-46:

State Regulation:

K.A.R. 91-40-46. Mediation and due process rights of private school children. . (a)(1) The parent of a private school child may request mediation or initiate a due process hearing as authorized under this article, if the parent believes that a board has failed to properly identify and evaluate the parent's child, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-42 (a).

(2) Each due process complaint by the parent of a private school child shall be filed with the board of education of the school district in which the private school is located.

The parent of the child shall provide a copy of the complaint to the state board of education.

(b) The parent of a private school exceptional child who is receiving special education and related services in accordance with an IEP may request mediation or initiate a due process hearing as authorized under this article on any matter concerning the child's education.

(c) The parent of a private school child with a disability who is receiving special education and related services under a services plan shall not be entitled to request mediation or to initiate a due process hearing on any matter concerning the child's education, but shall be entitled to take either, or both, of the following actions:

- (1) Request that a meeting be conducted, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-45 (b), to review and revise the child's services plan; or
- (2) file a complaint with the state board, in accordance with K.A.R. 91-40-51.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT PRIVATE SCHOOLS

1. Must the public school use its Federal funds to meet the requirement that a proportionate share of funds be spent on providing services to parentally placed children in private schools?

No. The requirement is that an amount equal to the federal proportionate share be expended to provide services to parentally placed children in private schools. The actual source of this expenditure may come from federal, State or local funds or any combination of these funds.

2. How is the public school to meet the requirement to "consult with representatives of private school children and representatives of parents of private school children with disabilities" regarding various situations identified in the law?

The public school district must consult annually with representatives of private schools and representatives of parents of voluntarily placed private school children with disabilities regarding the provision of special education and related services needs of children with disabilities enrolled in the private schools located within the district boundaries. This consultation must be conducted in a timely and meaningful way, and provide a genuine opportunity for the representatives of the private schools and representatives of parents of children with disabilities in private schools to express their views regarding child find, child count, how the proportionate share of funds will be used to deliver services and what services will be delivered.

To meet the consultation requirement, the public school could propose a plan to meet the requirements of the law and request input from the appropriate representatives, or the school could invite representatives to attend a meeting to provide input into the plan.

3. What qualifications must the staff meet that provides special education services when the public school serves a parentally placed child in a private school?

The special education services provided to parentally placed private school children with exceptionalities must be provided by personnel meeting the same standards as personnel providing such services in public schools. The public school may use State and Federal funds to make personnel available at the private school to the extent necessary to provide special education and related services to children enrolled by their parents in private schools, if those services are not normally provided by the private schools. However, if the services are provided by the private school teachers, the private school teachers cannot be required to be highly qualified as defined in the Federal law. The public school may use special education funds to pay for the services of an employee of a private school to provide special education and related services for children if both of the following conditions are met:

- a. The employee performs the services outside of the employee's regular work hours; and
- b. The employee performs the services under public supervision and control.

4. When an IEP specifies that the child be served at a private school and the child's IEP requires services for emotional disturbance and speech/language, yet the private school does not provide speech/language services, what must the school do to address the speech/language services?

Under State law when an IEP is developed the public school is required to provide all services indicated on the IEP. Therefore, speech/language services could be provided at the private school either by the public school staff or contracted staff. However, when the IEP team decides that the placement should be at the private school because of the serious behavioral issues that need to be addressed, it may also decide that for a period of time, the speech/language needs do not have the same priority as the behavior needs. Therefore, the team may, with the consent of the parents, remove the speech/language service from the IEP, possibly including a timeline for meeting again to consider the need to add the service back into the IEP, depending upon the needs of the child.

5. If a child in private school is evaluated and found to be a child with a disability and the parents refuse services from the public school, is the public school obligated to reevaluate the child in 3 years?

This is a child who would be included in the private school count of children with disabilities (found eligible but not receiving services). Because this is an identified child with a disability, the legal provisions regarding reevaluation apply. Therefore, at the end of 3 years, a reevaluation is needed. The public school district would provide Prior Written Notice and request consent from the parents to conduct a reevaluation.

6. Are children who are voluntarily placed by their parents in private schools entitled to special education services in Kansas?

The Kansas special education law and regulations, if parents request special education services for their child, the child is entitled to receive all of the services specified in the child's IEP (FAPE), and parents have all due process rights under Federal and State law. If the services are provided at the public school, the child is entitled to services equal to all other children receiving special education at the public school. If the services are provided at the private school, the child is entitled to services up to the average cost of providing the same service in the public school.

Federal law is clear that children enrolled in a private school by their parents have no individual entitlement to special education and related services. If children are part of a group agreed upon to receive services, they may receive the services offered by the public school under a services plan, but there is no requirement for any particular child to receive any services.

7. Who is responsible for the IEPs of children with disabilities who are placed in private schools by a public school IEP team?

Before placing a child with a disability in a private school or facility, the public school must conduct a meeting and develop an IEP. The IEP team may place a child in a private school as the result of the initial IEP meeting or as the result of a meeting to review an existing IEP. However, at the meeting in which a child is placed in a private school, the public school must ensure that a representative of the private school is present at the meeting or participates in the meeting through other means, such as individual or conference telephone call. After the initial IEP meeting, subsequent meetings to review the IEP may be conducted by the private school. A representative of the public school must attend these subsequent IEP meetings. Although the services are provided at the private school, the public school remains responsible for assuring that the IEP is implemented.

8. If services are provided in a parochial school, is there still a requirement to remove religious objects/symbols?

No, the law does not make any such requirements. The Kansas Attorney General's ruling of 1981 has been superseded by IDEA. State law allows for services to be provided at either the public or private school, but forbids the provision of special education and related services "in connection with religious courses, devotional exercises, religious training, or any other religious activity." The site where services are provided must be determined by the school district in consultation with the parents and private school officials.

9. Is a parentally placed child with an IEP in a private school entitled to both general education and special education services from the public school?

No. Public schools are required to provide special education and related services, but not to provide classes in the general curriculum for the private school child at the public school. For example, if parents request that in addition to receiving physical therapy at the public school, their child also be allowed to take physics, the public school is not obligated to allow the child to take physics. Instead, the child would be required to enroll in the public school as a full-time child in order to receive general education services.

10. Are children enrolled in or placed in private schools required to take the State Assessment?

If a child is placed in a private school by the public school, the child is required to take the appropriate State Assessment. If the child has been enrolled in the private school by the parents, the child would follow the requirements of the private school. That may mean that they would not take the State Assessment if the private school was not in the Kansas Quality Performance Accreditation system.

11. If a child in a private school moves from one private school to another and the Services Plan has more services than offered by the new public school providing the special education services, what happens to the child's services?

The new public school may conduct a meeting to review and revise the Services Plan. Unless the parents request all of the services identified by the IEP team, the public school is not required to provide services other than those agreed upon in consultation with the appropriate representatives of private schools and representatives of parents of children with disabilities enrolled in private schools. However, that does not prohibit the new public school from providing the services if it chooses to.

12. What is the obligation of the public school that does not have any private schools within its jurisdiction?

Under State law, the parent of a resident exceptional child, who is attending a private school located outside the district of residence, may request special education and related services. In that case the school of residence must develop an IEP. However, the district of residence is not required to provide any special education or related services outside of its district boundaries.

13. Who makes the final decision regarding the location of the delivery of special education or related services to an exceptional child enrolled in a private school?

The public school, in consultation with the private school and the parents, makes the final decision about the location of the delivery of services. Ultimately, the decision rests with the public school.

14. Must a general education teacher in the private school participate in developing, reviewing, and revising a child's IEP or Services Plan?

A meeting to develop, review, and revise an IEP or a Services Plan must include all of the participants required for an IEP team meeting, including at least one general education teacher of the child (if the child is or may be participating in the general education environment). The general education teacher in the private school would meet the requirement for a general education teacher.

The public school must also ensure that a representative of the private school attends each meeting to develop or revise a child's Services Plan. If the representative cannot attend, the public school must use other methods to assure a representative's participation, including individual or conference telephone calls. The participation of the child's private school teacher could meet this requirement.

15. Are children who are receiving special education or related services from the public school with a Services Plan considered to be enrolled in the public school and counted on the public school's September 20 enrollment count?

Yes. All parentally placed children in private school receiving services with either an IEP or a Services Plan are considered to be enrolled in the public school for special education services and are to be counted on the public school's September 20 enrollment count.

Also, all children for whom the school provides services through a contract with a private school or other agency or institution are considered to be enrolled in the public school and are counted on the public school's September 20 enrollment count.

16. What happens to the proportionate share of funds when the only child in a private school receiving services moves, and there are no more identified children to utilize the funds?

The amount of funds may be carried over for one additional year. If it appears there are no children in a private school in need of special education or related services, the remaining funds may be reallocated.

17. What happens when the district where the private school is located has used its entire proportionate share of funds and a nonresident child is found to be a child with a disability and the parent requests services?

The district where the private school is located is not obligated to provide any services to a nonresident child with a disability once it has expended the required proportionate share of funds. The parent of the nonresident child would have to go to the district of residence to request services. The district of residence can offer services in the resident district, but if the parent refuses, the resident school has met its obligation to make FAPE available.

18. Why might the child count of children with disabilities enrolled by their parents in private schools be different from the annual child count that is reported to the State and Federal departments of education?

The district of residence is required to locate, evaluate and identify children with disabilities enrolled in private schools located within its boundaries. Parents of children voluntarily enrolled in private school may choose to not accept special education and related services. The district would not be found in violation of the law. Once a public school has expended the entire federal proportionate share of funds it has no obligation to provide special education and related services to nonresident children attending a private school located within the district boundaries. These nonresident children would go to the district of residence to request services. If the parent does not accept services being offered at the district of residence these children may not be receiving any services, but would be included in the child count. Additionally, any resident child whose parent refuses services would also be included in the child count. Therefore, any child identified as a child with a disability, even though not receiving special education services, would be included in the child count of children with disabilities enrolled by their parents in private schools.

19. When would a district use a Services Plan and not an IEP for services to parentally placed private school children?

A Services Plan would be used when the district where the private school is located is providing services according to the agreement from the consultation with representatives of private schools and representatives of parents of children with disabilities attending private schools using its proportionate share of funds to serve a nonresident child.

When a parent is a resident of the district and requests special education services the district must offer an IEP and make FAPE available. The parent may refuse any or all of the services. The parent's refusal should be documented by the district. One way to document the offer of FAPE by the district and the refusal by the parent would be to provide the parent with Prior Written Notice and ask for consent for all of the services. The parent may consent to the services they are accepting.

MEMO: Kansas clarification of the term “parent” after IDEA 2004

Recently, I have been asked to address a couple of questions regarding who may make educational decisions for a child with an exceptionality. In consultation with the general counsel of this agency, I am including my response to those questions, below:

(1) May foster parents make educational decisions on behalf of their foster children?

Some confusion on this issue appears to have developed as a result of a change to the definition of the term “parent” in IDEA 2004. At section 602(23), IDEA 2004 defines the term “parent,” in part, by stating that the term “parent” means a natural, adoptive, or foster parent of a child (unless a foster parent is prohibited by State law from serving as a parent). Accordingly, some have interpreted this section to mean that a foster parent now meets the definition of the term “parent” and may make educational decisions for his/her foster child.

It is important to notice, however, that after including foster parents in the definition of the term “parent,” the statute adds the words “unless a foster parent is prohibited by State law from serving as a parent.” Kansas law addresses a foster parent’s authority regarding educational decision making in two separate statutes. First, K.S.A. 38-1513a, states that whenever a child with a disability is in the custody of S.R.S. and the child’s parents are unknown or unavailable, the Secretary of S.R.S. must immediately notify the state board of education and the school district where the child is attending that the child is in need of an education advocate. Second, K.S.A. 72-962(m) defines the term “parent” to include a foster parent “if the foster parent has been appointed the education advocate of an exceptional child.” This second statute effectively prohibits a foster parent from exercising the authority of a parent unless the foster parent is appointed the education advocate for a particular child.

It is, therefore, clear under Kansas law that all exceptional children in the custody of S.R.S., whose parents are unknown or unavailable, require an education advocate to make educational decisions on their behalf. It is also clear that a foster parent may be appointed the education advocate for a foster child. Without such appointment as an education advocate for a particular foster child by the state board of education through Families Together, however, a foster parent does not have authority to make educational decisions for a foster child in their care.

(2) May a child’s parent execute a signed and notarized statement (power of attorney) authorizing another person to make educational decisions regarding the parent’s child?

I believe the answer is that a parent may do so, but only under very limited circumstances. A parent, of course, may make educational decisions for his/her child. However, the term “parent” is specifically defined in the Kansas special education statutes, at K.S.A. 72-962(m). This statutory definition of the term “parent” does not include a person who receives a power of attorney from a parent to make educational decisions. The intent of this statute (as well as other statutes such as K.S.A. 38-1513a – referred to above in question no. 1) is that if there is no person (who meets the statutory definition of the term “parent”) available and willing to make educational decisions for an exceptional child, an education advocate must be appointed. A power of attorney may not be used by a parent to undermine the intent of this statute.

There are, as I stated previously, very limited circumstances in which a parent may effectively execute a power of attorney vesting educational decision making authority in another person. The statute cited above, K.S.A. 72-962(m), includes, in its definition of the term “parent,” the term “person acting as a parent.” The term “person acting as a parent” is defined in K.S.A. 72-962(n) and includes a person, “such as a grandparent, stepparent or other relative with whom the child lives or a person other than a parent who is legally responsible for the welfare of a child.” K.S.A. 72-962(n). Interestingly, however, Kansas regular education statutes, at K.S.A. 72-1046(d)(2), define the term “person acting as a parent” somewhat differently. This regular education statute includes, as part of its definition of the term “person acting as a parent,” the following: “(B) a person, other than a parent, who is liable by law to maintain, care for, or support the child, or who has actual care and control of the child and is contributing the major portion of the cost of support of the child, or who has actual care and control of the child with the written consent of a person who has legal custody of the child, or who has been granted custody of the child by a court of competent jurisdiction.” This definition, as I indicated earlier, is found in a regular education statute rather than a special education statute. However, I believe a parent might successfully argue that it is not contrary to these statutes, as a whole, to use a power of attorney to authorize a person, who meets the definition of a “person acting as a parent” under K.S.A. 72-1046, to make educational decisions for their exceptional child

Therefore, I believe that, as a general rule, a parent may not use a power of attorney to authorize other persons to make educational decisions for their exceptional children. However, in the limited circumstances specified in K.S.A. 72-1046(d)(2), I believe a parent may effectively use a power of attorney to authorize another person to make educational decisions for the parent’s exceptional children. Those circumstances include only situations in which the person receiving the power of attorney is: (1) a person who is liable by law to maintain, care for, or support the child; (2) a person who has actual care and control of the child and is contributing the major portion of the cost of support of the child; (3) a person who has actual care and control of the child with the written consent of a person who has legal custody of the child; or (4) a person who has been granted custody of the child by a court of competent jurisdiction.

I hope this explanation has been helpful in clarifying these two educational decision making issues.

Sincerely,

ZoAnn Torrey
State Director of Special Education

KANSAS STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION PARENT RIGHTS IN SPECIAL EDUCATION (Procedural Safeguards)

Both you and the school share in your child's education. If you or the school has issues or concerns about your child's education, you and your child's teacher should openly discuss the issues. We urge you to be actively involved in your child's education.

As parents of children who are, or may be, exceptional, you have certain rights or procedural safeguards under federal and state laws. These rights are listed in this statement of Parent Rights in Special Education. This list of your rights must be given to you in your native language or in a communication method you can understand. If you would like a more detailed explanation of these rights, please contact the principal at your child's school, a school administrator, the special education director, or the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE), 120 SE 10th Avenue, Topeka, KS 66612; phone (800) 203-9462. Copies of these rights in Braille, audiotape, and other languages are available from your school upon request. For more information about your rights, you may ask for a copy of the Guide to Special Education from Families Together, Inc. (785) 233-4777 or (800) 264-6343, or the Kansas State Department of Education (800) 203-9462.

OPPORTUNITY TO EXAMINE RECORDS

As the parent of a child with an exceptionality, you must be afforded an opportunity to--

- Inspect and review all education records with respect to:
- Identification (process to determine eligibility);
- Evaluation (nature and scope of assessment procedures);
- Placement (educational placement of your child); and
- FAPE (the provision of a free appropriate public education to your child).

INDEPENDENT EDUCATIONAL EVALUATION

You have the right to get an independent educational evaluation of your child if you disagree with the school's evaluation. The school must provide you, upon request for an independent evaluation, information about where an independent educational evaluation may be obtained, and the criteria applicable for independent educational evaluations.

1. What is an independent evaluation?

An "independent educational evaluation" means an evaluation conducted by a qualified examiner who is not employed by the public agency responsible for your child's education.

2. What does "public expense" mean?

"Public expense" means that the school either pays for the full cost of the evaluation or ensures that the evaluation is otherwise provided at no cost to you.

3. What if you request an independent evaluation at public expense?

If you request an independent educational evaluation at public expense, the school must, without unnecessary delay, either:

- ask for a due process hearing to show that its evaluation was appropriate; or
- ensure that an independent educational evaluation is provided at public expense, unless the school demonstrates in a due process hearing that the evaluation which you obtained did not meet the criteria applicable for independent educational evaluations.

If the final decision of the due process hearing is that the school's evaluation is appropriate, you still have the right to an independent educational evaluation, but it will not be paid for by the school.

If you request an independent educational evaluation, the school may ask for the reason(s) why you object to the school's evaluation. However, your explanation is not required and the school may not unreasonably delay either providing the independent educational evaluation at public expense or asking for a due process hearing to defend its evaluation.

Revised 10/04/2005

4. What if you obtain an independent educational evaluation at your expense?

If you obtain an independent educational evaluation at private expense, the results of the evaluation must be considered by the school, if it meets the applicable criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of a free appropriate public education to the child; and may be presented as evidence at a due process hearing regarding your child.

5. What if a hearing officer requests an independent educational evaluation?

If a hearing officer requests an independent educational evaluation as part of a hearing, the cost of the evaluation must be at public expense. If an independent educational evaluation is at public expense, the criteria under which the evaluation is obtained, including the location of the evaluation and the qualifications of the examiner, must be the same as the criteria the school uses when it conducts an evaluation, to the extent the criteria are consistent with your right to an independent educational evaluation. Except for the criteria, a school may not impose conditions or timelines related to obtaining an independent educational evaluation at public expense.

PRIOR NOTICE BY THE SCHOOL

1. How will I be informed of proposed actions regarding my child's special education needs?

Your school will inform you of actions being proposed about your child by giving you written notice.

Written notice must be given before the school--

Proposes or Refuses to initiate or change the:

- Identification (process to determine eligibility);
- Evaluation (nature and scope of assessment procedures);
- Educational Placement (educational placement of your child including graduation); or
- FAPE (the provision of a free appropriate public education to your child).

2. What must be included in the content of the notice?

Written notice must include:

- A description of the action proposed or refused by the school;
- An explanation of why the school proposed or refused to take the action;
- A description of any other options the school considered and the reasons why those options were rejected;
- A description of each evaluation procedure, assessment, record, or report the school used as a basis for the action proposed or refused;
- A description of any other factors that are relevant to the school's proposal or refusal;
- A statement that you have protection under these Parent Rights (procedural safeguards), and how you may get a copy of them; and
- Sources for you to contact to obtain assistance in understanding your rights.

If the school is proposing an action concerning your child, you must be given written notice about the proposed action a reasonable time before the action is taken. If the school refuses to take some action requested by you, you must be given written notice of the refusal within a reasonable time after the decision is made to deny your request. The school must take steps to be sure that you understand the information in any notice given to you.

3. Must the Written Notice be in understandable language?

Written notice must be in language understandable to the general public and in your native language or other principal mode of communication, unless it is clearly not feasible to do so. If this is not a written language, the school must take steps to ensure that the notice is translated orally or by other means into your native language or other mode of communication. If your language is not a written language, the school district must assure that you understand the notice, and it must document that you understand the notice.

4. When will the school take the action described in the notice?

After you have received the written notice, you have the opportunity to consider the actions proposed or refused by the school. You may agree or disagree with the school's proposal or refusal. You can allow the school to start the proposed action by giving consent in writing.

COPY OF PARENT RIGHTS (PROCEDURAL SAFEGUARDS)

A copy of the Parent Rights (procedural safeguards) must be given to you at least one time per year. However a copy of the Parent Rights notification must also be given to you--

- Upon initial referral or parental request for evaluation;
- Upon receipt of your first request for a due process hearing;
- Upon a disciplinary removal of your child from school that would constitute a change of placement; and
- Upon your request.

PARENT CONSENT

1. What does consent mean?

Consent means that--

- You have been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which your consent is sought, in your native language or other mode of communication;
- You understand and agree in writing to the carrying out of this activity for which your consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records (if any) that will be released and to whom; and
- You understand that the granting of consent is voluntary on your part and may be revoked at any time. If you revoke consent, that revocation is not retroactive (i.e., it does not reverse an action that has occurred after the consent was given but before consent was revoked).

Consent is immediate. This means, after you have given your written consent, the school district must start the activity as soon as possible.

2. When must the school obtain my consent?

Your consent is required--

- Before your child is evaluated for the first time to determine whether your child is eligible for special education; [Consent for initial evaluation may not be construed as consent for initial placement.]
- Before your child's special education and related services start for the first time;
- Before your child is tested as part of a reevaluation. Informed parental consent need not be obtained for reevaluation if the school can demonstrate that it has taken reasonable measures to obtain your consent, and you have failed to respond. Reasonable measures include records of telephone calls made or attempted and the results of those calls; copies of correspondence sent to the parents and any responses received; and records of visits made to the parents' home and the results of those visits.
- According to state law, you must also give written consent when the school proposes to change the amount of a service by 25% or more, or to change your child's placement for more than 25% of the school day. Your refusal to consent to these types of proposed changes will not result in a failure to provide your child with a free and appropriate public education.

Your consent is not required before--

- School officials review existing data as part of an evaluation or a reevaluation; or
- School officials administer a test or other assessment that is administered to all children unless, before administration of that test or assessment, consent is required of parents of all children.

3. Can I refuse consent?

Yes. If you refuse consent for initial evaluation or re-evaluation the school can ask you to go to mediation on the issue or, when authorized by law, it can start a due process hearing to decide the issue. The school may not use mediation or due process to override parent refusal to consent to the initial provision of special education and related services. If you refuse consent for a change in the amount of service by 25%, or to change placement for more than 25% of the school day, the public agency must initiate mediation and/or a due process hearing to ensure that your refusal to consent does not result in a failure to provide your child with a free, appropriate, public education.

4. Can I withdraw my consent after it has been given?

Yes. You have the right to change your mind. Giving consent is voluntary. You can revoke (withdraw) your consent at any time by writing the school or the special education director. Revoking consent does not negate an action that has occurred after the consent was given and before the consent was revoked. Again, if you revoke consent, the school can ask you to go to mediation on the issue or it can start a due process hearing to decide the issue.

5. What are the limitations on my consent?

The school must ensure that your refusal to consent to one service or activity does not deny you or your child from receiving other services, benefits, or activities provided by the school.

---

VOLUNTARY MEDIATION

1. What is mediation?

Mediation is a way to discuss and resolve disagreements between you and the school with the help of a trained, impartial third person.

2. When must mediation be available?

Each school must ensure that it has established procedures to allow parties to disputes to resolve the disputes through a mediation process that, at a minimum, must be available whenever a due process hearing is requested regarding a proposal or refusal to initiate or change the identification, evaluation or educational placement of your child or the provision of a free appropriate public education to your child. In no case will a parent's right to a due process hearing be delayed or denied if a parent refuses to participate in mediation, or does not attend a meeting to have the benefits of mediation explained to them.

3. How does mediation occur?

The school must ensure that the mediation process--

- Is voluntary on the part of the parties;
- Is not used to deny or delay your right to a due process hearing or to deny any other rights that you have under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA); and
- Is conducted by a qualified and impartial mediator who is trained in effective mediation techniques.

4. Will a meeting to encourage mediation be required?

- Yes, when parents elect not to mediate, they may be required to meet at a time and location convenient to the parents with a Families Together advocate or an appropriate alternate dispute resolution entity.
- At this meeting the Families Together advocate, or other alternate dispute resolution representative, will explain the benefits of mediation and encourage the parents to use the process.

5. What are the qualifications of an impartial mediator?

An individual who serves as a mediator may not be an employee of --

- Any school, even if different from your school; or
- State agency that receives a subgrant under the IDEA; or
- A state education agency that is providing direct services to a child who is the subject of the mediation process.

In addition, an impartial mediator--

- Must not have a personal or professional conflict of interest; and
- Is not an employee of a school or state agency solely because he or she is paid by the agency to serve as a mediator.

6. How are mediators appointed?

The Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE) maintains a list of individuals who are qualified mediators and knowledgeable in laws and regulations relating to the provision of special education and related services. Mediators are selected on a random basis from a list of qualified mediators. The Kansas State Department of Education bears the cost of the mediation process, including the cost of meetings. The mediation sessions are scheduled in a timely manner and held in a location that is convenient to the parties to the dispute.

7. What happens if agreement is reached?

An agreement reached by the parties to the dispute is set forth in a legally binding written mediation agreement that is enforceable in a state or federal court.

8. Are discussions confidential?

Yes. Discussions that occur during the mediation process must be confidential and may not be used as evidence in any subsequent due process hearings or civil proceedings. The parties to the mediation process are required to sign a confidentiality pledge prior to the commencement of the process.

9. How can I request mediation?

The school has procedures that require you to provide written notice that you are requesting mediation.

IMPARTIAL DUE PROCESS HEARING

1. What is a due process hearing?

A due process hearing is a formal legal process through which any disagreement between you and the school is resolved by an impartial hearing officer.

2. What happens when a due process hearing is requested?

A parent or a school may initiate a hearing on any of the matters relating to the identification, evaluation or educational placement of a child or relating to the provision of services to the child (except that a school may not use mediation or a due process hearing to override a parent's refusal to consent to the initial provision of special education and related services). When you request a due process hearing--

- The school must inform you of the availability of mediation.
- The school must also inform you of any free or low-cost legal and other relevant services in the area, if you request the information.

3. Does the school conduct the due process hearing?

The due process hearing is arranged and paid for by the school district responsible for the education of your child but it is conducted by an impartial hearing officer.

4. How can I request a due process hearing?

The law requires that you or your attorney provide a written due process complaint notice to the school and to the Kansas State Department of Education (which must remain confidential) that you are requesting a due process hearing.

DUE PROCESS HEARING
Contact Person/Agency	What Information Is Needed?
The Special Education Director if your child is in a public school or The Secretary of Social and Rehabilitation Services (SRS) if your child is in a state institution or The Commissioner of the Juvenile Justice Authority if your child is in a state juvenile correctional facility or The Secretary of the Department of Corrections if your child is in a state correctional facility	The name and address of the child's parents; The name and age of the child; The address of the residence of the child; The name of the school the child is attending; A description of the problem and a statement of the facts relating to the problem; A proposal for resolution of the problem; and An indication that a copy of the request was sent to the school and to the Kansas State Department of Education.

If your due process complaint notice does not include all of the information listed above, the school may notify the hearing officer and you that it believes your notice is insufficient and ask the hearing officer to order you to provide all of the required information.

5. What are the qualifications of an impartial due process hearing officer?

A hearing officer

- May not be an employee of the state educational agency or the school that is involved in the education or care of the child (a hearing officer is not considered an employee of an educational agency or school solely because he or she is paid by the agency or school to serve as a hearing officer);
- May not be any person having a personal or professional interest that would conflict with his or her objectivity in the hearing;
- Must possess knowledge of, and the ability to understand the provisions of federal and state special education laws and regulations and related legal interpretations;
- Must possess the knowledge and ability to conduct hearings in accordance with appropriate, standard legal practice; and
- Must possess the knowledge and ability to render and write decisions in accordance with appropriate standard legal practice.

The school must--

- Keep a list of persons who serve as hearing officers.
- The list must include a statement of the qualifications of each hearing officer.

6. What are my due process hearing rights?

a. You and the school district have the right to:

- Be accompanied and advised by an attorney and by individuals with special knowledge or training with respect to the problems of children with exceptionalities;
- Present evidence and confront, cross-examine, and compel the attendance of witnesses;
- Prohibit the introduction of any evidence at the hearing that has not been disclosed to you at least 5 days before the hearing;
- Obtain a written, or, at your option, electronic, verbatim record of the hearing;
- Obtain a written, or, at your option, electronic findings of fact and decision; and
- Amend your complaint, if approved by the hearing officer or consented to by the school district.

b. Additional Disclosure of Information--

- At least 5 business days prior to a hearing, each party must disclose to the other party all evaluations completed by the date and recommendations based on the offering party's evaluations that the party intends to use at the hearing.
- A hearing officer may bar any party that fails to comply from introducing the evaluation or recommendation at the hearing without the consent of the other party.

c. Parent Rights at Hearings

Parents involved in hearings must be given the right to--

- Have the child who is the subject of the hearing present;
- Open the hearing to the public; and
- Receive a record of the hearing and the findings of fact and decision, at no cost to them, no later than 45 calendar days after the request for the hearing, unless an extension of time is allowed by the hearing officer.

d. Finality of Local Level Hearing Decision

A decision made in a local due process hearing is final, unless either party involved in the hearing decides to appeal the decision.

e. Appeal of Decision

Any party aggrieved by the findings and decision in the local due process hearing may appeal to the Kansas State Board of Education. The Board shall provide for an impartial review of the hearing. The official conducting the review shall:

- Examine the entire hearing record;
- Ensure that the procedures at the hearing were consistent with the requirements of due process;
- Seek additional evidence if necessary (If a hearing is held to receive additional evidence, the rights mentioned in subsections "a", "b", and "c" of Question #6, "What are my due process hearing rights?" apply.)
- Afford the parties an opportunity for oral or written argument, or both, at the discretion of the reviewing official;
- Make an independent decision on completion of the review; and
- Give a copy of the written, or, at the option of the parents, electronic, findings of fact and decision to the parties.

f. Finality of State Level Hearing Decision

The decision made by the state reviewing official is final, unless a party files a court action to have the decision changed.

7. What are the timelines for a due process hearing?

a. Local Level Hearings

If you wish to initiate a due process hearing, you must submit your notice of due process hearing to the school district within 2 years of the date that you knew or should have known about the alleged action that forms the basis of your complaint. However, the 2 year timeline may be extended if either of the following has occurred:

- The school made specific misrepresentations that it had resolved the problem forming the basis of your complaint; or
- The school withheld information from you that it was required, by law, to provide to you.

If the school has initiated the due process hearing,

- You have 10 days from the date you receive the notice of due process to send a response to the school that specifically addresses the issues raised in the notice.
- If you believe that the school district's notice of due process is legally insufficient, you have 15 days from the date you receive the notice to notify the hearing officer that you are contesting the sufficiency of the school's notice of due process.

If you have initiated the due process hearing,

- the school district must, within 15 days of receiving your notice of due process, convene a meeting with you and with other relevant members of the IEP team who have specific knowledge of the facts you identified in your complaint to discuss your complaint and the facts related to your complaint to determine whether the issues in your complaint can be resolved without a hearing.
- This meeting must include a representative of the school district who has decision making authority on behalf of the school district.
- The school district may not bring an attorney to this meeting unless you are accompanied by an attorney.
- This resolution meeting is required by law unless both you and the school district agree, in writing, to waive the meeting or agree to use the special education mediation process.

You may amend your due process complaint notice

- if the school district consents to the amendment in writing and is given the opportunity to resolve the amended notice at a meeting with you before a hearing occurs, or
- you may also amend your complaint notice if the hearing officer grants permission for your amendment not later than 5 days before the hearing occurs.
- The same rules for amendment of a due process complaint notice apply to the school district.
- If either party successfully amends their complaint, the timelines stated above start over.

If you are going to use an evaluation, or recommendations based on an evaluation, as evidence at the hearing,

- you must disclose the evaluation or evaluations and the recommendations you intend to use to the school district not less than 5 business days before the hearing.
- Failure to timely disclose this information could result in a hearing officer ruling that the evaluations and recommendations may not be used at the hearing without the consent of the school district.

At the local level, not later than 45 calendar days after the receipt of a request for a hearing--

- A final decision must be reached in the hearing; and
- A copy of the decision must be provided to each of the parties.

A hearing officer may grant specific extensions of time beyond the 45-day period if requested by either party. Each hearing must be conducted at a time and place that is reasonably convenient to the parents and child involved.

b. State Level Reviews

The Kansas State Board of Education must ensure that not later than 20 calendar days after the receipt of a request for a review--

- A final decision is reached in the review; and
- A copy of the decision is mailed to each of the parties.

A reviewing officer may grant specific extensions of time beyond the 20-day period at the request of either party. Each review involving a hearing must be conducted at a time and place that is reasonably convenient to the parents and child involved.

8. *May the school district or I file a court action?

a. *Court Action

Any party who does not agree with the decision of the state review officer has the right to file a court action. The action may be filed in state or federal court. Any action must be filed within 30 days of the date of the delivery of the decision to you. You will have to hire an attorney if you decide to go to court.

In any civil action, the court--

- Shall receive the records of the administrative proceedings;
- Shall hear additional evidence at the request of a party; and
- Basing its decision on the preponderance of the evidence, shall grant the relief that the court determines to be appropriate.

b. *Jurisdiction of District Courts

Federal district courts have jurisdiction of actions brought under the IDEA. The Kansas district courts also have jurisdiction under the Kansas Act for Judicial Review and Civil Enforcement of Agency Actions, K.S.A. 77-601 through 77-627.

9. *How can I recover attorneys' fees?

In any action or proceeding under the IDEA, the court may award reasonable attorneys' fees to a parent who is a prevailing party.

10. *May a court award attorneys' fees to you?

Yes. A court may award reasonable attorneys' fees consistent with the following--

- Fees awarded must be based on rates prevailing in the community in which the due process hearing was conducted for the kind and quality of services furnished.
- No bonus or multiplier may be used in calculating the attorneys' fees.
- Attorney's fees cannot be awarded for actions relating to any due process resolution session or for any meeting of the IEP team unless the meeting is convened as a result of an administrative proceeding or judicial action, or at the discretion of the State for a mediation that is conducted prior to filing of a request for a due process hearing.

11. *May a court choose not to award attorneys' fees?

Yes. Attorneys' fees may not be awarded and related costs may not be reimbursed for services performed subsequent to the time of a written offer of settlement to you if--

- The offer is within the time allowed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or, in the case of an administrative hearing, any time more than 10 calendar days before the hearing;
- The offer is not accepted within 10 calendar days; and
- The court finds that the decision you finally receive is not more favorable to you than the offer of settlement. However, an award of attorneys' fees may be made to you if you win and you are justified in rejecting a settlement offer.

12. *May a court reduce the amount of attorneys' fees awarded?

Yes. A court may reduce the amount of attorneys' fees awarded when the court finds:

- During the action or proceeding, you unreasonably lengthened the final resolution of the case;
- The amount of the attorneys' fees is unreasonable compared to the going rate in the community for similar services by attorneys of reasonably comparable skill, experience, and reputation;
- The time and legal services were excessive considering the nature of the case; or
- Your attorney did not give the school the appropriate notice about the due process hearing.

A court may not reduce the allowance for attorneys' fees if the court finds that the state education agency or school unreasonably delayed the final resolution of the case, or, found there was a violation in the implementation of IDEA.

13. *May a court order you or your attorney to pay the attorney fees of the school?

Yes. A court may order reasonable attorneys' fees to a prevailing party, which is a school district or a state education agency, to be paid by a parent's attorney if the court finds that the parent's complaint or subsequent cause of action is frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation, or if the parent's attorney continues to litigate after the litigation clearly becomes frivolous, unreasonable or without foundation. In addition, a court may order reasonable attorneys' fees to a prevailing party which is a school or a state educational agency to be paid by a parent or a parent's attorney if the court finds that the parent's complaint or subsequent cause of action was presented for any improper purpose, such as to harass, to cause unnecessary delay, or to needlessly increase the cost of litigation.

14. What happens to my child during due process or court proceedings?

Except when your child has violated a school rule or has done something that could have hurt someone, during any due process or court proceedings--

- Unless you and the school agree otherwise, your child stays in the current educational placement;
- If the complaint involves an application for initial admission to school, your child, with your consent, must be placed in public school until the proceedings are finished.
- If a hearing or review officer agrees with you that a change in placement is appropriate, the hearing or review officer may order a different placement for your child. When that occurs, the placement will be treated as an agreement between the State education agency or the local education agency and the parents.

CHANGE OF PLACEMENT FOR DISCIPLINARY REMOVALS FOR CHILDREN WITH DISABILITIES

State and federal laws have special provisions that control what happens if your child violates a school rule or does something that caused, or could easily have caused, an injury to him/herself or someone else. These special provisions say what action the school can take and what your rights are as the child's parent. The possible actions by the school and your rights in these matters are explained below.

1. What actions constitute a change of placement for disciplinary purposes?

For disciplinary purposes, removals of your child from his or her current educational placement, which constitute a change of placement are:

- The removal is for more than 10 consecutive school days;
- Your child is subjected to a series of removals that constitute a pattern because they cumulate to more than 10 school days in a school year, and because of factors such as the length of each removal, the total amount of time your child is removed, and the proximity of the removals to one another; or
- Your child is to be placed in an interim alternative educational setting.

2. When can school officials take action for a child's misbehavior?

Children with disabilities are subject to the same rules of conduct that apply to other children. School officials can take action if a child with a disability does anything listed below:

- Violates any school rule;
- Brings, or gets possession of, a weapon at school or at a school activity;
- Brings, or gets possession of, an illegal drug at school or at a school activity; or
- Does something that caused serious bodily injury to another person, or does something that could easily have caused an injury to the child or to someone else.

3. What action can school officials take for children with disabilities?

School officials can take the following actions--

- If your child violates a school rule, but the misbehavior does not involve a weapon, illegal drugs or dangerous behavior, school officials may move your child to a different educational setting or they can suspend your child from school for up to 10 school days. They can do this each time your child violates a rule. If the total number of suspensions mount up, and they are close together, and show a pattern of removing your child from school, no further suspensions from school can be made without your involvement.
- If your child carries or possesses a weapon to or at school or to or at a school function under the jurisdiction of a State or a local educational agency; or knowingly possesses or uses illegal drugs or sells or solicits the sale of a controlled substance while at school or a school function under the jurisdiction of a State or local educational agency, or inflicts serious bodily injury upon another person while at a school or a school function under the jurisdiction of a State or local educational agency, school personnel may order a change in placement of your child to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for the same amount of time that a child without a disability would be subject to discipline, but for not more than 45 school days.
- If your child violates school rules over and over, or does something that is serious, like damaging the school building, school officials can suspend your child from school for up to 10 school days and start action to have your child removed from school for up to a whole school year.
- If your child does something that is dangerous (that is, something that caused, or could easily have caused, injury to him/herself or to someone else), school officials can suspend your child from school for up to 10 school days. They, also, can start action to either have your child removed from school for up to a whole school year, or to have a due process hearing officer determine a different place for your child to go to school for up to 45 school days.

4. What steps must be followed to change my child's placement for removals of 10 school days or less?

If your child has violated the school's discipline code, the school may change your child's placement to an interim alternative setting, another setting or suspension for a period of time not to exceed 10 school days, to the same extent as a child without a disability.

5. Must educational services be provided if my child has been removed from his or her current placement for 10 school days or less?

No. The school would not be required to provide services to your child during removal from his or her current placement for not more than 10 consecutive school days in the same school year for separate incidents of misconduct.

6. What steps must be followed to change my child's placement for removals of more than 10 school days?

If school officials want to suspend your child from school for more than 10 school days in a row, or to have your child's educational setting changed for up to 45 school days for weapon or drug possession, for infliction of serious bodily injury to another or for other dangerous behavior, school officials must notify you of what they intend to do. The law also states--

- If the behavior was a manifestation of your child's disability, and your child does not have a behavior intervention plan, the IEP team must conduct a functional behavioral assessment and implement a behavioral intervention plan. If your child already has a behavioral intervention plan, the IEP team must meet to review the plan and its implementation, and, modify the plan and its implementation, as necessary, to address the behavior.
- If the behavior was not a manifestation of your child's disability, the IEP team must determine whether it would be appropriate for your child to receive a functional behavioral assessment, behavioral intervention services and modifications, that are designed to address the behavior violation so that it does not recur.

7. Must educational services be provided if my child has been removed from his or her current placement for 10 days or more in a school year?

Yes. After your child has been removed from his or her current placement for more than 10 school days in the same school year, during any subsequent days of removal, the school must provide services to the extent necessary to enable your child to continue to participate in the general education curriculum and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in his or her IEP.

8. What is a "controlled substance"?

A "controlled substance" means a drug or other substance identified under schedules I, II, III, IV or V in section 202(c) of the Controlled Substances Act (21U.S.C. §12(c)). This is a federal law.

9. What is an "illegal drug"?

An "illegal drug" means a controlled substance; but--

- Does not include a substance that is legally possessed or used under the supervision of a licensed health-care professional or that is legally possessed or used under any other authority under the Controlled Substances Act or under any other provisions of federal law.

10. What is a "weapon"?

A "weapon" has the meaning given the term "dangerous weapon" under paragraph (2) of the first subsection (g) of section 930 of Title 18, United States Code. This federal law defines a weapon as "any weapon, device, instrument, material or substance, animate or inanimate, that is used for, or is readily capable of, causing death or serious bodily injury, except that this term does not include a pocket knife with a blade of less than 2.5 inches in length."

11. What is "serious bodily injury"?

"Serious bodily injury" means bodily injury which involves:

- a substantial risk of death;
- extreme physical pain;
- protracted and obvious disfigurement; or
- protracted loss or impairment of the function of a bodily member, organ, or mental faculty.

12. What action can hearing officers take in regard to dangerous behavior?

Hearing officers can take the following actions--

- An IDEA hearing officer may order a change in placement of your child to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for not more than 45 school days, if the hearing officer, in an expedited hearing--
  - Determines the school has demonstrated that maintaining the current placement of your child is substantially likely to result in injury to your child or to others; and
  - Determines that the interim alternative educational setting that is proposed by school personnel who have consulted with your child's special education teacher meets the requirements below.

13. Who determines the interim alternative educational setting?

The interim alternative educational setting is determined by the IEP team, if a weapon, drugs or serious bodily injury are involved. It is proposed by school officials, if dangerous behavior is present. Any interim alternative educational setting in which your child is placed must--

- Be selected so as to enable your child to continue to participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting, and to continue to receive those services and modifications, including those described in your child's current IEP, that will enable your child to progress toward meeting the goals set out in that IEP; and
- receive, as appropriate, a functional behavioral assessment, behavioral intervention services and modifications, that are designed to address the behavior violation so that it does not recur.

14. What is a "manifestation determination review"?

A "manifestation determination review" means a review of the relationship between your child's disability and his or her behavior subject to the disciplinary action.

15. When is a manifestation determination review conducted?

If an action is contemplated involving a removal that constitutes a change of placement for your child--

- Not later than the date on which the decision to take that action is made, you must be notified of that decision and provided with the Parent Rights (procedural safeguards) notice; and
- Immediately, if possible, but in no case later than 10 school days after the date on which the decision to take that action is made, a review must be conducted of the relationship between your child's disability and his or her behavior subject to the disciplinary action -- the manifestation determination review.

16. Who carries out the manifestation determination review?

The manifestation determination review must be conducted by a group of persons that includes school personnel, you and other relevant members of the IEP team. In carrying out the manifestation determination review, the group may determine that the behavior of your child was a manifestation of his or her disability only if it:

- Reviews all relevant information in your child's file, including your child's IEP, any teacher observations, and any relevant information provided by you, and;
- Then determines that either--
  - The conduct in question was caused by, or had a direct and substantial relationship to, your child's disability; or
  - The conduct in question was the direct result of the local educational agency's failure to implement the IEP.

If the group determines that either of these standards were met, the behavior must be considered a manifestation of your child's disability.

17. What happens if the IEP team determines that the behavior was not a manifestation of my child's disability?

If the result of the manifestation determination review is a determination that your child's behavior was not a manifestation of his or her disability--

- The relevant disciplinary procedures applicable to children without disabilities may be applied to your child with a disability in the same manner in which they are applied to children without disabilities, as long as your child continues to be provided services, as determined by your child's IEP team, to the extent necessary to enable your child to appropriately continue to participate in the general education curriculum, although in another setting, and to progress toward meeting the goals set out in his/her IEP.
- If determined to be appropriate by the IEP team, your child will receive a functional behavioral assessment and behavioral intervention services and modifications that are designed to address the behavior violation so that it does not recur.

18. What is my child's placement if I request due process proceedings?

If you request a hearing or an appeal to challenge the manifestation determination decision or the interim alternative educational setting--

- School officials may have your child remain in the interim alternative educational setting for the designated period of the disciplinary removal, or until the hearing officer issues a decision, whichever occurs first (unless you and the school district agree otherwise). Thereafter, your child will return to the previously agreed upon educational placement, unless a hearing officer orders another placement or you and the school agree to another placement.

19. What if I disagree with the outcome of my child's manifestation determination review or disciplinary placement?

If you disagree with the IEP team's determination that your child's behavior was not a manifestation of his or her disability or any decision regarding your child's disciplinary placement, you may request a due process hearing. You must file your request with your local board of education. The school then arranges for an expedited due process hearing by immediately contacting the person on the chart that follows --

EXPEDITED DUE PROCESS HEARING
Contact Person	What Information Is Needed?
Rod Bieker, General Counsel Kansas State Department of Education 120 SE 10 th Avenue Topeka, KS 66612-1182 (785) 296-3204 or (800) 203-9462	Your name and address; Your attorney's name and address, if you have one; The name of the child; The address of the residence of the child; The name of the school the child is attending; A description of the nature of the problem relating to the manifestation determination and/or proposed placement; the facts related to the problem; and A proposed resolution of the problem to the extent known and available to you at the time.

20. How is an expedited hearing conducted?

Expedited due process hearings must be conducted as follows--

- Each of the parties to an expedited due process hearing has the rights afforded to them under the IDEA except that the parties have the right to prohibit the presentation of any evidence at the expedited hearing that has not been disclosed to the opposite party at least two business days before the hearing.
- Each hearing officer must conduct the expedited due process hearing within 20 school days of the date the hearing is requested and provide the decision in the matter to the parties within 10 school days after the hearing;
- A hearing officer in an expedited due process hearing cannot grant any extensions; and
- Either party to an expedited due process hearing may appeal the decision, and the appeal procedures are the same as those for any other due process hearing.
- Any hearing officer for an expedited hearing must meet the same qualifications as for those in all other due process proceedings.

21. Can a hearing officer change my child's placement if he/she is a danger to self or others?

Yes. If the school demonstrates that there is a danger that your child or other students are substantially likely to be injured if your child stays in his or her current placement, the school may request an expedited hearing to obtain an order from a hearing officer to change your child's educational placement to an interim alternative educational placement for up to 45 school days. School officials propose the alternative setting, but the hearing officer finally decides the interim alternative educational setting. If, at the end of 45 school days, the school determines there continues to be a danger that your child or other students may be injured if your child is returned to his or her previous placement, the process may be repeated.

22. Are there any protections for children not yet identified as eligible for special education?

Yes. If your child engages in behavior that violates any rule or code of conduct of the school, you may assert the protections provided for under the IDEA, if the school had knowledge that your child had a disability before your child engaged in the misbehavior. The school will be deemed to have had knowledge that your child was a child with a disability if--

- You have expressed concern in writing to supervisory or administrative school personnel or to a teacher of your child that your child is in need of special education and related services;
- You have requested an evaluation of your child; or
- Your child's teacher or other school personnel have expressed specific concerns about a pattern of behavior or performance of your child to the Director of Special Education or to other supervisory personnel in accordance with the school's child find or special education referral system.

However--

- Your school will not be deemed to have had knowledge, if either:
- The school conducted an evaluation and determined that your child was not a child with a disability;
- You have not allowed an initial evaluation of your child; or
- You have refused initial services for your child.

23. What conditions apply if there is no basis of knowledge?

If a school does not have knowledge that your child is a child with a disability prior to taking disciplinary measures, your child may be subjected to the same disciplinary measures as measures applied to children without disabilities who engage in comparable behaviors consistent with the following limitations--

- If you made a request for an evaluation of your child during the time period in which your child is subjected to disciplinary measures, the evaluation must be conducted in an expedited manner.
- Until the evaluation is completed, your child remains in the educational placement determined by school authorities, which can include suspension or expulsion without educational services.
- If your child is determined to be a child with a disability, taking into consideration information from the evaluation conducted by the school and information provided by you, the school must provide special education and related services in accordance with the IDEA

PLACEMENT OF CHILDREN BY PARENTS IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS WHEN FAPE IS AT ISSUE

1. If I place my child in a private school, who is responsible to pay for the costs?

Except as may be otherwise provided by state law, the school is not required to pay for the cost of education, including special education and related services for your child at a private school, if the school made a free appropriate public education available to your child, but you elected to place your child in a private school. However, the school must include your child if he or she is included in the group of private school students to whom services will be provided under services plans. Disagreements between you and the school regarding the availability of an appropriate program for your child, and the question of financial responsibility, are subject to due process procedures. If the parents of a child with a disability, who previously received special education and related services, under the authority of a public agency, enrolls the child in a private preschool, elementary or secondary school without the consent of or referral by the public agency, a court or hearing officer, may require the agency to reimburse the parents for the cost of that enrollment if the court or hearing officer finds that the agency had not made a free and appropriate education available to the child in a timely manner prior to the enrollment, and that private school is appropriate. A parental placement may be found to be appropriate by a hearing officer or a court even if it does not meet the State standards that apply to education provided by the SEA and LEAs.

2. What must I do if I plan to ask the school district to reimburse me for the costs of a private school?

The cost of reimbursement for your child's private school placement may be reduced or denied if--

- At the most recent IEP meeting that you attended before removing your child from the public school, you did not inform the IEP team that you were rejecting the placement proposed by the school to provide a free appropriate public education to your child. This would include stating your concerns and your intent to enroll your child in a private school at public expense; or
- At least 10 business days (including holidays) before removing your child from the public school, you did not give written notice to the school about your concerns and your intent to enroll your child in a private school at public expense; or
- Before you removed your child from public school, the school informed you, by written notice, of its intent to evaluate your child, including a statement of the purpose of the evaluation that was appropriate and reasonable, but you did not make your child available for the evaluation; or
- A court finds that your actions were unreasonable.

Exceptions--

The cost of reimbursement to you cannot be reduced or denied for failure to give notice to the school if:

- Providing the required notice would likely result in physical harm to your child;
- The school prevented you from giving notice; or
- You had not received written notice of your responsibility to give notice to the school before removing your child from public school and enrolling your child in private school. [This question constitutes the required notice to you of your responsibility to provide the school with notice as described above.]

The cost of reimbursement to you, may, in the discretion of a court or hearing officer, not be reduced or denied for failure to give notice to the school if:

- You cannot read or write in English;
- Providing the required notice would likely result in serious emotional harm to the child.

STATE COMPLAINT PROCEDURES

1. What is a formal complaint investigation?

A formal complaint investigation is a procedure to determine whether the school is complying with federal or state laws and/or regulations regarding the provision of special education and related services to children with exceptionalities.

2. Who investigates formal complaints?

The Kansas State Department of Education has adopted procedures for resolving formal complaints, including complaints filed by you, by an organization or by an individual from another state, which meet the following requirement--

- Complaints must be in writing and be filed with the Formal Complaint Investigator for Special Education at the Kansas State Department of Education.

The state complaint procedures are widely disseminated to parents and other interested individuals, including parent training and information centers, protection and advocacy agencies, independent living centers, and other appropriate entities.

3. What remedies are available for denial of appropriate services to my child?

In resolving a complaint in which it is found that appropriate services are not provided, the Kansas State Department of Education must address--

- How to remediate the denial of those services, including, as appropriate, the awarding of monetary reimbursement or other corrective action appropriate to the needs of your child; and
- Appropriate future provision of services for all children with exceptionalities.

4. How is a formal complaint investigation conducted?

The Kansas State Department of Education must conduct complaint investigations in the following manner--

- Adhere to a time limit of 30 calendar days for investigation of your complaint, unless an extension is granted for extenuating circumstances;
- Carry out an independent on-site investigation, if it is determined that an investigation is necessary;
- Give you the opportunity to submit additional information, either orally or in writing, about the allegations in the complaint;
- Review all relevant information and make an independent determination as to whether the school is violating a requirement of state or federal laws or regulations; and
- Issue a written decision that addresses each allegation in the complaint and contains:
  - Findings of fact and conclusions; and
  - The reasons for the Department's final decision.

The Department may--

- Extend the time limit if exceptional circumstances exist; and
- Include procedures for effective implementation of the Department's final decision, if needed, including:
  - Technical assistance activities;
  - Negotiations; and
  - Corrective actions to achieve compliance.

5. May I request a formal complaint investigation and a due process hearing at the same time?

Yes. In this situation, your complaint would be investigated as follows--

- If a written complaint is received that is also the subject of a due process hearing, or contains multiple issues, of which one or more are part of that hearing, the Kansas State Department of Education must set aside any part of your complaint that is being addressed in the due process hearing, until the conclusion of the hearing. However, any issue in your complaint that is not a part of the due process action must be resolved using the time limit and procedures described above.
- If an issue is raised in your complaint that has been previously decided in a due process hearing:
  - The due process hearing decision is binding; and
  - The Department must inform you to that effect.
- The Department must resolve a complaint alleging the school failed to implement a due process decision.

6. What must I consider when I file a formal complaint?

The Kansas State Department of Education has procedures for you to file a formal complaint. It must be in writing, and you must sign it and mail or personally deliver it to KSDE. The complaint must include--

- A statement that the school has violated a requirement of state or federal law or regulations; and
- The facts on which the statement is based.

The complaint must allege a violation that occurred not more than one year prior to the date that the complaint is received.

7. How can I request a formal complaint investigation?

You can request a complaint investigation by filing a signed complaint with the contact person shown on the chart that follows:

FORMAL COMPLAINT INVESTIGATION
Contact Person	What Information Is Needed?
Formal Complaint Investigator for Special Education Kansas State Department of Education Student Support Services Team 120 SE 10 th Avenue Topeka, KS 66612-1182	Your name and address; The name and age of the child; The address of the residence of the child; The name of the school the child is attending; The specific violation(s) of law or regulation that you believe have occurred; The facts supporting your allegations; What efforts have been made to resolve the concern(s) with the school; and Your proposed solution to the problem(s).

CONFIDENTIALITY AND ACCESS TO EDUCATIONAL RECORDS

Definitions pertaining to records:

- Destruction: means physical destruction or removal of all personal identifiers from information
- Education Record: the type of records covered under the definition of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA)
- Participating Agency: Any agency or institution that collects, maintains, or uses personally identifiable information, or from which information is obtained.

1. May I see my child's educational records?

Schools must maintain the confidentiality of information in your child's educational records. The school can assume that both parents of a child have authority to inspect/review the child's records unless the school has been notified in writing that a parent's rights to see the records have been terminated by a court order.

a. You have the right to:

- Read and review all education records about your child kept by the school.
- Review those records. The school shall respond to your request:
  - without unnecessary delay (not later than 45 calendar days after your request);
  - before any meeting to develop or review your child's individualized education program; and/or
  - before any due process hearing.
- Ask the school to give you an explanation of your child's records.
- Ask the school to give you copies of the records, if not getting copies would keep you from reviewing the records. The school may charge a fee for the copies if it does not keep you from reviewing the records. The school may not charge a fee to search for or gather the records. (Material with a copyright on it such as test protocols may not be copied as a part of the child's education record.)
- Have a representative of your choice, with your written permission, read and review the records.

b. Record of Access

The school must keep a record of those persons, except parents and authorized employees of the school district, who obtain access to your child's record, including names, dates, and purposes for the access.

c. Information on More Than One Child

If any education record includes information on more than one child, you have the right to read and review only the information relating to your child or to be informed of that specific information.

d. The school--

- Must provide parents on request a list of the types and locations of education records collected, maintained, or used by the agency.
May charge a fee for copies of records that are made for parents under this part if the fee does not effectively prevent the parents from exercising their right to inspect and review those records.
- May not charge a fee to search for or to retrieve information.

2. How do I get my child's records changed?

You may ask the school to change information in your child's education record if you believe the information is not correct, is misleading, or violates your child's privacy or other rights. If the school agrees, the record must be changed within a reasonable period of time. If the district refuses to amend the record you will be notified of this in writing. You may ask for a hearing if the school refuses to change the record as you request. If you request a hearing to challenge information in your child's record, the school must provide the hearing. If, as a result of the hearing, the school decides that the information:

- Is not correct, is misleading, or a violation of your child's privacy, the school must change the record and inform you in writing of the change; or
- Is correct, not misleading, or not a violation of your child's privacy, the school must inform you of your right to place in the records a statement giving your reasons for disagreeing with the school's decision. This statement must be kept with the education record for as long as the record is kept by the school and must be included with the record if it is shared with anyone.

3. What minimum requirements exist for the conduct of a hearing?

The hearing to change information in your child's education record must meet, at a minimum, the following requirements:

- The school shall hold the hearing within a reasonable time after it has received the request for the hearing from the parent or eligible student.
- The school shall give the parent or eligible student notice of the date, time, and place, reasonably in advance of the hearing.
- The hearing may be conducted by any individual, including a school official, who does not have a direct interest in the outcome of the hearing.
- The school shall give the parent or eligible student a full and fair opportunity to present evidence relevant to the issues raised. The parent or eligible student may, at their own expense, be assisted or represented by one or more individuals of his or her own choice, including an attorney.
- The school shall make its decision in writing within a reasonable period of time after the hearing.
- The decision must be based solely on the evidence presented at the hearing, and must include a summary of the evidence and the reasons for the decision.
- The hearing will be held in accordance with the procedures outlined in the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act.

4. Must I give consent for disclosure of personally identifiable information in my child's education records?

The school must obtain your written consent, before any personally identifiable information about your child may be released to any person not otherwise entitled under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) to have access to it or used for any purpose other than meeting requirements of IDEA. An educational agency or institution may not release information from education records to participating agencies without parental consent unless authorized to do so under FERPA.

5. What if I do not give consent?

In the event that you do not give consent when requested by the school district, the school can appeal to the local court for an order to permit disclosure.

6. What information is kept and shared with regard to disciplinary actions?

The records of a child with a disability may include a statement of any current or previous disciplinary action that has been taken and transmit the statement to the same extent that the disciplinary information is included in and transmitted with, the student records of nondisabled children. The statement may include a description of any behavior engaged in by the child that required disciplinary action, a description of the action taken, and any other information that is relevant to the safety of the child and other individuals involved with the child. The transmission of any of the child's records must include both the child's current IEP and any statement of current or previous disciplinary action that has been taken against the child.

7. What safeguards are in place for protection of confidential information in my child's education records?

The school must protect the confidentiality of personally identifiable information in your child's record in the following ways:

- At collection, storage, disclosure, and destruction stages;
- One official at each school shall assume responsibility for ensuring the confidentiality of any personally identifiable information;
- All persons collecting or using personally identifiable information must receive training or instruction regarding the state's confidentiality procedures; and
- Each school shall maintain, for public inspection, a current listing of the names and positions of those employees within the agency who may have access to personally identifiable information.

8. May the school destroy my child's education records?

Yes. The school must inform you when the personally identifiable information in your child's education records is no longer needed to provide educational services to your child. The education records must be destroyed at your request.

9. What is directory information?

Part of the education record, known as directory information, includes personal information about your child that can be made public according to your school's student records policy. Directory information may include your child's name, address, and telephone number, and other information typically found in school yearbooks or athletic programs. Other examples are names and pictures of participants in various extracurricular activities or recipients of awards, pictures of students, and height and weight of athletes.

10. Do I have a right to review my child's record when he/she becomes an adult student?

Until your child reaches age 18, you have access to all educational records maintained by the school. When students reach the age of 18, or when they become students at post-secondary education institutions, they become "eligible students" and rights under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) transfer to them, depending upon the age of the child and severity of the disability. However, parents retain access to student records of children who are their dependents for tax purposes. Also, the school must provide any notice required under IDEA to both the student and the parents when the child turns 18.

STATE ENFORCEMENT OF CONFIDENTIALITY POLICIES AND PROCEDURES

K.S.A. 72-6214 stipulates that every local board of education must adopt policies and procedures in accordance with applicable federal laws and regulations to protect the right of privacy of any student and his or her family regarding personally identifiable records, files and data directly related to the student. In the event that this does not occur, the State can impose sanctions on the local school district.

---

REIMBURSEMENT FOR SERVICES

1. Who pays for special education services provided by non-educational public agencies?

If a public agency other than an educational agency fails to provide or pay for the special education and related services in your child's IEP, the school district (or other State agency responsible for developing the child's IEP) shall provide or pay for these services to your child in a timely manner. The school district or State agency may then claim reimbursement for the services from the non-educational public agency that failed to provide or pay for these services and that agency shall reimburse the school district or State agency in accordance with the terms of the interagency agreement or other mechanism recognized for payment.

2. Must I enroll my child in public insurance programs in order for my child to receive FAPE?

No. With regard to services required to provide FAPE, the school district may not require you to sign up for or enroll in public insurance programs in order for your child to receive FAPE.

3. If I allow the school district to bill my private insurance for special education services contained in my child's IEP, must I incur the cost of the deductible or co-payment amount?

No. The school district may not require you to pay any out-of-pocket expenses such as the payment of a deductible or co-pay amount incurred in filing a claim for services contained in your child's IEP. However, the school district may pay the cost that you would otherwise be required to pay.

4. Must I allow the school district to file a claim for health insurance benefits for services provided to my child?

No. School districts may not use a child's benefits under a public insurance program if that use would --

- Decrease available lifetime coverage or any other insured benefit;
- Result in the family paying for services that would otherwise be covered by the public insurance program and that are required for the child outside of the time the child is in school;
- Increase premiums or lead to the discontinuation of insurance; or
- Risk loss of eligibility for home and community-based waivers, based on aggregate health-related expenditures.

5. When is parental consent to the filing of a health insurance claim considered voluntary?

With regard to services required to provide FAPE to your child under Part B of IDEA, the school district may access your private insurance proceeds only if you --

- Have been fully informed of all information relevant to the activity to which consent has been sought, in your native language or other mode of communication;
- Understand and agree in writing to the carrying out of the activity for which your consent is sought, and the consent describes that activity and lists the records (if any) that will be released and to whom; and
- Understand the granting of consent is voluntary on your part and may be revoked at any time.

Each time the school district proposes to access your private insurance proceeds, it must --

- Obtain your consent in accordance with the paragraph above; and
- Inform you that your refusal to permit the school district to access your private insurance does not relieve the district of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided to your child at no cost to you.

RE: "Reasonable Time" to respond to parent request for evaluation

I thought I would share with each of you the results of a recent complaint made to the Kansas State Department of Education (KSDE). In the complaint, the parents alleged that they had made a written request to the school district for a special education evaluation of their child and that the school district responded with a letter indicating that it would be several months before the evaluation would begin. The school district's letter to the parents did not include a notice and consent for evaluation form.

The KSDE complaint report indicated that a parent's written request for an evaluation did not constitute "consent" for an evaluation. Thus, the 60 school-day timeline, in Kansas regulation 91-40-8(h), for completing an evaluation, determining eligibility, developing an IEP and implementing the IEP had not started at the time the complaint was filed.

However, the complaint report stated that the school district was required, under Kansas statute, K.S.A. 72-988(b)(2), to provide the parents with written notice prior to making a proposal, or refusing a parent's proposal, to initiate or change the identification, evaluation, or educational placement, or the provision of a free appropriate public education (FAPE) to a child with an exceptionality. The finding in the report was that the school district's letter to the parents did not constitute notice to the parents of the school district's proposal to evaluate their child because it did not provide the parents with a notice and consent form. The school district's letter also did not notify the parents of a refusal to evaluate their child. Although the statute requires that the school district provide written notice of its proposals or its refusals of parental proposals, it does not specify the time in which the school district must provide such notice to the parents.

The report cited a Kansas Supreme court case stating that when a statute requires notice, but does not fix a time in which the notice must be given, the notice must be given within a "reasonable" time. The court added that a reasonable time is to be determined by the court under the circumstances in each particular case. After reviewing special education laws and regulations regarding time-lines, the conclusion in the complaint report stated that, because there were no unusual circumstances related to the facts of this particular complaint, a reasonable time in which to provide notice would have been 15 school days.

I wanted to apprise you of the conclusions contained in this report. Complaint conclusions will be fairly consistent regarding this matter. We are instructing our complaint investigators that when the school district is required to provide parents with a written notice of the district's proposal or the district's refusal of a parent's proposal (whether oral or written) under K.S.A. 72-988(b)(2) (regarding the initiation, or a change of, identification, evaluation, placement or the provision of FAPE to a child with an exceptionality), unless there is some unusual circumstance, a reasonable time in which to provide such notice to the parents is 15 school days.

MEMORANDUM

To:	Kansas Public School Administrators	Date:	7-13-06
From:	Ruth Santner, Reintegration/Foster Care Program Manager-SRS Anthony Ellis, Program Consultant II-JJA
Subject:	Foster Care Database website address: https://fostercare.nekesc.org

We wanted to provide a brief history and update of the foster care database. This has been a joint venture of KSDE, SRS, and JJA, starting in April 2001 with the development of the EEIF (Educational Enrollment Information Form).

History:

- Foster Care Database provides in electronic form the information previously provided by SRS and JJA provider staff to the schools in paper form through the EEIF—provided each time a child in SRS or JJA custody and in out of home placement experiences a change in school due to a change in placement
- Database developed by NEKESC under contract with KSDE
- Database implemented state wide with the start of the 2003-04 school year
- School personnel have read only access to the EEIF information entered into the database, through use of user ID and password.
- School personnel enter information into the education section of the database for special education students, such as IEP, 504 Plan, etc.
- SRS and JJA provider staff have read only access to the information entered into the education section of the database for special education students
- SRS, JJA, and Department of Education each have database administrators across the state who issue passwords and user IDs to their respective staff, and perform other administrator functions

- Signed releases required to enter child's information into the database—obtained by SRS or JJA provider staff

2005-06 School Year:

- The database administrator for each of the school district continues to be the Special Education Director. The database administrator issues user Ids and passwords for school personnel in that district
- Ownership of database transferred from KSDE to SRS. SRS continues to contract with NEKESC for management and maintenance of the database
- If experiencing technical difficulties with the database, contact:
Ruth Santner (SRS) at 785-368-8186, e-mail: raxs@srskansas.org or Anthony Ellis (JJA) at 785-296-5616, e-mail aellis@ksjja.org
- SRS and JJA providers continue to receive instruction from their respective agencies to enter and update information for children in out of home placement who experience a change in schools due to change in placement
- For children in SRS custody who experience a change in schools, a staff person checks the database to insure entry/update is current—if not, the Provider is contacted as requested to complete these tasks asap
- SRS and JJA Central Office staff made presentations to Special Education Directors regarding the database and have worked to address the concerns expressed about the child's information either not being entered into the database or not having been kept current

Superintendent of Schools
Volusia County Schools
P.O. Box 2410 729
Loomis Avenue
Daytona Beach, Florida 32115-2410

Dear Dr. Smith:

This is in response to your August 31, 2006 letter to the Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP), regarding the parental consent requirements relating to accessing public benefits or insurance in 34 CFR §300.154(d)(2)(iv)(A) of the final regulations for Part B of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (Part B). I apologize for the delay in our response. In your letter, you point out potential effects on local educational agencies (LEAs) if they are required to obtain a separate consent from the parent each time access to Medicaid or other public benefits or insurance is sought to pay for required special education and related services provided to Medicaid-eligible children, and propose for our consideration the following interpretation:

"Due to the very nature of IDEA and its requirements for an Individualized Education Plan (IEP), interpretation of "each time that access to public benefits or insurance is sought" should be consistent with the timeframe of the IEP. School districts should be allowed to obtain consent at the initial development of the IEP and its subsequent reviews. Such an interpretation would lessen what will be a paperwork burden to teachers, service providers and public school systems."

We believe that permitting a public agency to obtain parent consent for a specified amount of services for a specified period of time would be sufficient to enable parents to make an informed decision as to whether to consent before a public agency can access their or their child's public benefits or other public insurance.

This consent may be obtained one time for the specific services, and duration of services identified in a child's individualized education program (IEP), and an LEA would not be required to obtain a separate consent each time a Medicaid agency or other public insurer or public program is billed for the provision of required services. For example, if it is known that a child is to receive three hours per week of occupational therapy (OT) for 36 weeks, parents could be asked to give consent to the public agency's billing of the parent's public benefits or insurance for 108 hours of service. While this type of consent may be obtained at an IEP meeting, it could also be obtained at some point after the IEP is developed.

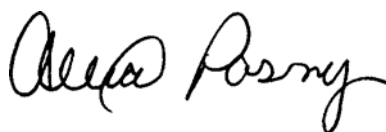

However, if the public agency seeks to use the child's or parents' public benefits or public insurance to pay for additional hours of service (due to the IEP being revised) or the public agency is charging different amounts for such services, and would like to access the child's or parents' benefits or insurance for those additional costs, the public agency must obtain parental consent, covering the additional amount of service or costs to be charged to the child's or parents' public benefits or public insurance.

Based on section 607(e) of the IDEA, we are informing you that our response is provided as informal guidance and is not legally binding, but represents an interpretation by the U.S. Department of Education of the IDEA in the context of the specific facts presented.

I hope that this information is helpful. If you have any questions regarding this letter, please contact Dr. Deborah Morrow, at 202-245-7456.

Sincerely,

Kansas Policy Statement on Multi-Tiered System of Supports

As a district implementing Multi-Tier System of Supports (MTSS), we monitor each student's response to scientific, research-based instruction and intervention through assessments of academic achievement and behavior, repeated at reasonable intervals to gauge individual student progress. Instruction and interventions provided to students are child-centered, delivered by qualified personnel, and research-based to the extent feasible. At any time, if you believe your child may have an exceptionality you have the right to request an evaluation for special education.

For your reference what is required in regulation.....

  - (A) The State's policies regarding the amount and nature of student performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided;
  - (B) Strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning; and
  - (C) The parents' right to request an evaluation.

K.A.R. 91-40-7(c) (proposed)

(2). School personnel have data-based documentation that indicates that prior to, or as a part of the referral, the following were met;

- A. The child was provided appropriate instruction in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel;
- B. The child's academic achievement was repeatedly assessed at reasonable intervals which reflected formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction;

- (b) the educational needs of your child; and
- (c) whether your child is a child with an exceptionality and needs special education and related services.

Included in the review were assessment tools and strategies (e.g. record reviews, interviews, observations, tests, and the student's response to scientific research-based interventions, and information provided by you) that provide relevant information that directly assist the team in determining the educational needs of your child.

Eligibility Determination

The initial evaluation must include a variety of assessment tools and strategies to gather relevant functional, developmental and academic information, including information provided by the parent, that may assist in determining whether the child is an exceptional child, the educational needs of the child, and the content of the child's IEP, including information related to enabling the child to be involved, and progress in the general education curriculum or, for preschool children, to participate in appropriate activities (K.S.A. 72-986(b)(1)). When interpreting evaluation data for the purpose of making an eligibility determination, the team must ensure that the child meets the definition of one of the categories of exceptionality and, as a result of that exceptionality, needs special education and related services (KAR 91-40-1(k)(w); 34 CFR 300.8). This is known as the two-prong test of eligibility. If a child meets the definition of an exceptionality category but does not need special education and related services, s/he will not be determined to be eligible. If the child has a need for special education and related services but does not meet the definition of an exceptionality category, s/he will not be determined to be eligible. In the case of a child who is found to have a disability, but does not need special education and related services, a referral for a Section 504 evaluation may be considered.

1. Determining Whether the Child is a Child with an Exceptionality

"Exceptional children" means children with disabilities and gifted children (KAR 91-40-1 (w)). "Child with a disability" means the following: (1) a child evaluated as having mental retardation, hearing impairments including deafness, speech or language impairments, visual impairments including blindness, emotional disturbance, orthopedic impairments, autism, traumatic brain injury, other health impairments, or specific learning disabilities, deaf-blindness, or multiple disabilities, and who, by reason thereof, needs special education and related services; and (2) for children ages three through nine, a child who is experiencing developmental delays and, by reason thereof, needs special education and related services ((KAR 91-40-1 (k); CFR 300).

When considering the first prong of the two-prong test of eligibility, the team reviews the initial evaluation and other data to determine whether or not the child is a child with an exceptionality. To do this, team members compare the data about the child to see if there is a match to one of the exceptionality categories defined in the regulations. However, even when the data point to a particular area of exceptionality, there are exclusionary factors that must be examined before determining the child is a child with an exceptionality.

Regulations are very clear with regard to the fact that a child must NOT be determined to be a child with an exceptionality if:

- (a) the determinant factor is:
  - Lack of appropriate instruction in reading, including the essential components of reading instruction (defined in section 1208(3) of the ESEA(NCLB) as phonemic awareness, phonics, vocabulary development, reading fluency including oral reading skills, and reading comprehension strategies); or
  - Lack of appropriate instruction in math; or
  - Limited English proficiency; and
- (b) the child does not otherwise meet the eligibility criteria as a child with an exceptionality (KSA 72-986(f); KAR 91-40-10(c); 34 CFR 300.306(b)).

In addition to these exclusionary factors which apply to all categories of exceptionality, there are exclusionary factors specific to certain disabilities that must also be ruled out. Those factors are contained in this document and guidance is provided to assist teams in their evaluation of these factors as they determine eligibility.

If the evaluation data indicates there is a match with a particular category of exceptionality and the team has ruled out the presence of any exclusionary factors, the team may determine that the child meets one of the requirements of eligibility as a child with an exceptionality (Prong 1 of the test of eligibility). If there is not a match or exclusionary factors are present, the team must determine that the child does not meet the eligibility of a child with an exceptionality. However, being gifted or having a disability does not necessarily qualify a child for special education services. Thus teams must also consider the component of the definition which states: "and who, by reason thereof, needs special education and related services."

2. Determining Whether the Child Needs Special Education and Related Services

The second prong of the test of eligibility is to determine whether or not the child needs special education and related services as a result of the exceptionality. It is helpful for teams to remember that by definition special education means specially designed instruction (KAR 91-40-1(KKK); 34 CFR 300.39(a)(1)), and, that specially designed instruction means adapting the content, methodology or delivery of instruction to address the unique needs of a child that result from the child's exceptionality to ensure access of the child to the general education curriculum in order to meet the educational standards that apply to all children (KAR 91-40-1 (III); 34 CFR 300.39(b)(3)(i-(ii))). This implies that in order to have a need for special education, the child has specific needs which are so unique as to require specially designed instruction in order to access and progress in the general education curriculum.

Kansas regulations at KAR 91-40-7(c)(1-2), require that prior to referral for an initial evaluation the school must have data-based documentation of the following: (1) having provided appropriate instruction to the child in regular education settings that was delivered by qualified personnel (2) repeatedly assessing the child's academic achievement at reasonable intervals which reflect formal assessment of the child's progress during instruction; (3) having provided the assessment results to the child's parents; and, (4) that the assessment results indicate an evaluation is appropriate. Gone are the days where school teams can simply indicate the interventions tried with anecdotal remarks to indicate the need for evaluation. The data collected prior to referral must now be documented as indicated above and, if the child goes on for evaluation, that data becomes an integral part of the eligibility determination of need. Whether the school is implementing a system of school-wide multi-tiered model of intervention (MTSS) or uses an individual problem solving approach (SIT, SAT, CARE, etc.) to carry out interventions and document the child's progress, the school will have data regarding the child's needs related to the intensity of instruction and supports required for the child to be successful.

The team must review the evaluation data in such a way as to understand the extent of the child's needs with regard to specially designed instruction. Teams should be able to use the data to describe the intensity of the support needed to assist the child in accessing and progressing in the general education curriculum. It is only through this discussion that the team can determine whether or not the child's need for having adapted content, methodology, or delivery of instruction is so great that it cannot be provided without the support of special education.

If the team determines that the child's need for having adapted content, methodology, or delivery of instruction is so great that it cannot be provided in regular education without the support of special education, the team may determine that the child needs special education and related services (Prong 2 of the eligibility test). If the data suggests the child's needs for instruction can be provided within regular education without the support of special education and related services, the team must determine that the child is not in need of special education and related services.

Examples of Sources of Data

1. General Education Interventions or Results of Screening/General Education Curriculum Progress Data that the child was provided appropriate instruction in general education settings, including repeated assessments of achievement at reasonable intervals, reflecting formal assessment of child progress during instruction. Includes records of interventions attempted and data collected during monitoring and evaluation of interventions and data collected through screening measures.
2. Record Review Information provided by the parents, current classroom-based assessments, information from previous services providers, prior screenings, previous evaluations, reports from other agencies, portfolios, discipline records, cumulative file, health records, portfolios, performance in relationship to curricular standards, and other records.
3. Interview (Parent and other caregivers, Student, Teacher) Parents, teachers, and the child can all typically provide insight into areas of strengths and needs. Interviews can also provide information about significant historical events in the child's life as well as about his performance in the classroom and other settings. May include instructional history, social history, medical information, and/or developmental history.
4. Observation Structured observations, rating scales, ecological instruments (e.g., EBASS, TIES-II), behavioral interventions, functional analysis of behavior and instruction, anecdotal notes, and other observations (conducted by parents, teachers, related services personnel, and others). The purpose of the observation is to help the evaluation team understand the extent to which the child's skills are impacting his/her ability to participate and progress in a variety of settings.
5. Tests Standardized norm-referenced tests are helpful if the information being sought is to determine how a child compares to a national group of children of the same age or grade. Criterion-reference tests are helpful in determining if the child has mastered skills expected of a certain age or grade level. Tests may include individual measures of ability or aptitude, curriculum-based assessments (e.g., CBA, CBM, or CBE), performance-based assessments (i.e., rubric scoring), or other skill measures such as individual reading inventories. Diagnostic testing might include measures of reading, math, written language, or other academic skills, or tests of motor functioning, speech/language skills, adaptive behavior, or self-concept, or appropriate tests of any domain of concern.

Autism

KAR 91-40-1

(f) "Autism" means a developmental disability significantly affecting verbal and nonverbal communication and social interaction, generally evident before age three but not necessarily so, that adversely affects a child's educational performance. Other characteristics often associated with autism are engagement in repetitive activities and stereotyped movements, resistance to environmental change or change in daily routines, and unusual responses to sensory experiences. The term shall not apply if a child's educational performance is adversely affected primarily because the child has an emotional disturbance.

Exclusionary Criteria:

Exclusionary Factor

A child must NOT be determined to be a child with an exceptionality if: the determinant factor is:

- Lack of appropriate instruction in reading, including the essential components of reading instruction (defined in section 1208(3) of the ESEA(NCLB);
- Lack of appropriate instruction in math; or
- Limited English proficiency ;
- and the child does not otherwise meet the eligibility criteria as a child with an exceptionality

How to Evaluate

Evidence shows that the student's previous reading instruction and curriculum addressed phonemic awareness, phonics, vocabulary development, reading fluency including oral reading skills, and reading comprehension strategies. This evidence may come from (a) an evaluation of the school's basal curriculum and supplemental materials, and (b) that the student actually received instruction provided by highly qualified teachers using appropriate basal curriculum and supplemental materials.

Evidence shows that the student's previous math instruction and curriculum addressed math calculation, problem solving, and conceptual understanding. This evidence may come from (a) an evaluation of the school's basal curriculum and supplemental materials, and (b) that the student actually received instruction provided by highly qualified teachers using appropriate basal curriculum and supplemental materials.

If the student being evaluated is an English Language Learner, provide evidence that the student was provided with appropriate accommodations and interventions to address it. Consider things such as: proficiency in English and in the student's native language, amount of time in the country, level of education in the student's native country, etc. If, in spite of appropriate accommodations and interventions, the student's learning difficulties persist, this factor is ruled out.

Evidence shows that the student's learning difficulties are due to factors other than those associated with the criteria for disabilities as defined in IDEA. For example, frequent moves, incarceration, substance abuse, etc.

The term shall not apply if a child's educational performance is adversely affected primarily because the child has an emotional disturbance.

The team should rule out the presence of an emotional disturbance. If the data the team collects matches the indicators for emotional disturbance, the student should be identified as a child with an emotional disturbance rather than a child with autism.

Learning Disability

KAR 91-40-1

(mmm) "Specific learning disability" means a disorder in one of more of the basic psychological processes involved in understanding or using language, spoken or written, that may manifest itself in an imperfect ability to listen, think, speak, read, write, spell, or to do mathematical calculations, including perceptual disabilities, brain injury, minimal brain dysfunction, dyslexia, and developmental aphasia. The term shall not include learning problems that are primarily the result of any of the following:

(1) Visual, hearing, or motor, disabilities; (2) mental retardation; (3) emotional disturbance; or (4) environmental, cultural, or economic disadvantage.

KAR 91-40-11

(b) A group evaluating a child for a specific learning disability may determine that the child has such a disability only if the following conditions are met:

(1) The child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or meet state-approved grade-level standards, if any, in one or more of the following areas, when the child is provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age and grade level: (A) Oral expression; (B) listening comprehension; (C) written expression; (D) basic reading skill; (E) reading fluency skills; (F) reading comprehension; (G) mathematics calculation; and (H) mathematics problem solving.

Traumatic Brain Injury

KAR 91-40-1

"Traumatic brain injury" means an acquired injury to the brain, caused by an external physical force, resulting in total or partial functional disability or psychosocial impairment, or both, that adversely affects educational performance. The term shall apply to open or closed head injuries resulting in impairments in one or more areas, including the following: (1) cognition; (2) language; (3) memory; (4) attention; (5) reasoning; (6) abstract thinking; (7) judgment; (8) problem-solving; (9) sensory, perceptual and motor abilities; (10) psychosocial behavior; (11) physical functions; (12) information processing; and (13) speech. The term shall not include brain injuries that are congenital or degenerative or that are induced by birth trauma.

Exclusionary Criteria:

Exclusionary Factor

A child must NOT be determined to be a child with an exceptionality if: the determinant factor is:

- Lack of appropriate instruction in reading, including the essential components of reading instruction (defined in section 1208(3) of the ESEA(NCLB));
- Lack of appropriate instruction in math; or
- Limited English proficiency ;
- and the child does not otherwise meet the eligibility criteria as a child with an exceptionality

How to Evaluate

Evidence shows that the student's previous reading instruction and curriculum addressed phonemic awareness, phonics, vocabulary development, reading fluency including oral reading skills, and reading comprehension strategies. This evidence may come from (a) an evaluation of the school's basal curriculum and supplemental materials, and (b) that the student actually received instruction provided by highly qualified teachers using appropriate basal curriculum and supplemental materials.

Evidence shows that the student's previous math instruction and curriculum addressed math calculation, problem solving, and conceptual understanding. This evidence may come from (a) an evaluation of the school's basal curriculum and supplemental materials, and (b) that the student actually received instruction provided by highly qualified teachers using appropriate basal curriculum and supplemental materials.

If the student being evaluated is an English Language Learner, provide evidence that the student was provided with appropriate accommodations and interventions to address it. Consider things such as: proficiency in English and in the student's native language, amount of time in the country, level of education in the student's native country, etc. If, in spite of appropriate accommodations and interventions, the student's learning difficulties persist, this factor is ruled out.

Evidence shows that the student's learning difficulties are due to factors other than those associated with the criteria for disabilities as defined in IDEA. For example, frequent moves, incarceration, substance abuse, etc.

The term shall not include brain injuries that are congenital or degenerative or that are induced by birth trauma.	The term TBI is not used for a person who is born with a brain injury. It also is not used for brain injuries that happen during birth. Evidence is provided that the brain injury was sustained after some period of normal development.
The term shall not include brain injuries that are the result of brain tumors, brain infections, cerebral vascular accident (strokes), or poisonings.	The term TBI is not used for a person who sustained a brain injury as a result of a brain tumor, brain infection, cerebral vascular accident (stroke), or poisoning. ## Reporting Requirements

When the initial evaluation and eligibility determination are completed, the evaluation team must prepare a written evaluation/eligibility report. The report must include not only the evaluation results, but also document the eligibility determination.

The evaluation report serves as the documentation of the child's eligibility. The evaluation report and the documentation of eligibility must be provided, at no cost, to the parent (KAR 91-40-10(b); 34 CFR 300.306(a)(2)). There are specific requirements for reporting the eligibility determination (KAR 91-40-10(a), (e); 34 CFR 300.311). The report must include a statement of:

- a. whether the child is a child with an exceptionality;
- b. the basis for making the determination;
- c. the relevant behavior noted during the observation of the child (and for LD the relationship of that behavior to the child's academic functioning);
and
- d. the educationally relevant medical findings, if any;

And for a child determined to have a learning disability, the report must also include documentation of the following:

- (i) the child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or to meet State-approved grade-level standards when provided with learning experiences and instruction appropriate for the child's age or State-approved grade-level standards,
- (ii) AND
  - the child does not make sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade-level standards when using a process based on the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention;
  - OR
  - the child exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, State-approved grade-level standards, or intellectual development.

(iii) The determinate factor for why the child does not achieve adequately for the child's age or does not make sufficient progress to meet age or State-approved grade level standards, or exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses, is not primarily the result of:

- A visual, hearing or motor disability;
- mental retardation;
- emotional disturbance;
- cultural factors;
- environmental or economic disadvantage; or
- limited English proficiency.

(iv) If the child has participated in a process that assesses the child's response to scientific, research-based intervention (RI/MTSS), the report must also document

- o the instructional strategies used; and
- o the student-centered data collected.

Documentation that the child's parents were notified about the process, including the following information:

- o the State's policies regarding the amount and nature of student performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided;
- o strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning; and
- o the parent's right to request an evaluation (K.A.R. 91-40-10(e), (f); K.A.R. 91-40-9(a)(2)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.309(a)(3); 34 C.F.R. 300.311(a)).

Evaluation/Eligibility Report Checklist

The written evaluation report must contain:

- The determination of whether the child has an exceptionality (KAR 91-40-10(a)(1)(A))
- The basis for making the determination (KAR 91-40-10(a)(1)(B))
- Relevant behavior noted during the observation of the child (KAR 91-40-10(a)(1)(C))
- The Relationship of that behavior to the child's academic functioning (KAR 91-40-10(a)(1)(D))
- Educationally relevant medical findings, if any (KAR 91-40-10(a)(1)(E))
- Signatures of each team member indicating whether the report reflects their conclusion (KAR 91-40-10(a)(2))
- If not, the team member(s) must submit a separate statement presenting their conclusion (KAR 91-40-10(a)(2))

If the child was identified with a specific learning disability (SLD) in addition to the above it must also contain:

- An assurance that the determination was made in accordance with applicable laws and regulations (KAR 91-40-10(e)(2))

Documentation of whether the child:

- does not achieve adequately for the child's age or to meet state-approved grade-level standards (KAR 91-40-10(e)(5)(A))
- does not make sufficient progress to meet age or state-approved standards or exhibits a pattern of strengths and weaknesses in performance, achievement, or both, relative to age, state-approved grade level standards or intellectual development (KAR 91-40-10(e)(5)(B))
- Determination of the team concerning the effect of the following factors on the child's achievement: visual, hearing, or motor skills disability; mental retardation; emotional disturbance; cultural factors; environmental or economic disadvantaged; or limited English proficiency (KAR 91-40-10(e)(6))

If the child participated in a response to intervention (RtI) process the following items must be included in addition to those listed above:

- The instructional strategies used (KAR 91-40-10(f)(1))
- The student-centered data collected (KAR 91-40-10(f)(1))

Documentation that parents were notified about:

- The state's policies regarding the amount and nature of student performance data that would be collected and the general education services that would be provided (KAR 91-40-10(f)(2)(A))
- Strategies for increasing the child's rate of learning (KAR 91-40-10(f)(2)(B))
- The parents' right to request an evaluation (KAR 91-40-10(f)(2)(C))

REGULAR EDUCATION PRESCHOOL TEACHER AT THE IEP/IFSP MEETING

IDEA-2004 regulations establish the requirements for IEP/IFSP teams to include a regular education teacher of the child. The IEP/IFSP team of each child must include “at least one regular education teacher of the child (if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment).” (34 CFR 300.321(a)(2))

“A regular education teacher of a child with a disability, as a member of an IEP team, must, to the extent appropriate, participate in the development, review and revision of the child’s IEP. This participation shall include assisting in making the following determination [in order for the child to participate in appropriate activities (general curriculum)]:

- (1) The appropriate positive behavioral interventions and supports and other strategies for the child;
- (2) The supplementary aids and services, program modifications, and support for school personnel that will be provided to assist the child to:
  - Advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals;
  - Be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum and to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities; and
  - Be educated and participate with other children with disabilities and nondisabled children in these activities.” (34 CFR 300.324(a)(3)); 34 CFR 300.320(a)(4)

“Regular education teacher” means a person who, under state standards, is qualified to provide instruction to children without disabilities of the same age as the child with a disability. In the case of preschool age children, the person must be knowledgeable about age-relevant developmental activities or milestones that typically developing children of the same age would be performing or would have achieved. (The Kansas “State Standard” is that the teacher must meet the requirements of the administering agency.)

“Regular education teacher of the child” means a regular education teacher who is, or is anticipated to be, the child’s teacher and is knowledgeable about appropriate activities of typically developing peers, so the teacher is able to determine how the child’s disabilities affect the child’s participation (involvement and progress) in those appropriate activities.

“...if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment.”

- If a public agency provides regular education preschool services to children without disabilities, then the teacher for these services would be the regular education teacher of any preschool age child with a disability in that regular education preschool program. (300.321(a)(2) and 300.324(a)(3))
- If a public agency makes kindergarten available to children without disabilities, then the kindergarten teacher would appropriately be the regular education teacher who would be a member of the IEP/IFSP team for a kindergarten age child with a disability who is, or may be, participating in the regular education kindergarten environment.

- If the child with a disability is or may be participating in a regular education environment for children without disabilities, which is not provided by the public agency, the agency should invite the regular education preschool teacher. However, if the teacher does not attend the IEP/IFSP meeting the public agency shall designate attendance by an appropriate person who, under state standards, is qualified to serve children without disabilities of the same age as the child with a disability.
- The regular education preschool teacher attending the IEP/IFSP meeting shall be the teacher of the child with a disability or the anticipated teacher of the child (such as the kindergarten teacher if a child is transitioning into kindergarten) or a representative kindergarten teacher from the child's home school. If the child is not in a regular education preschool environment and is not expected to be participating in a regular education preschool environment or Kindergarten during the term of the IEP/IFSP, as determined by the IEP/IFSP team, then a regular education teacher is not required to attend the IEP/IFSP meeting.
- If the child with a disability is receiving special education services in a regular education preschool environment such as Head Start, Even Start, 4 year old at risk, or private educational preschool, the lead teacher of the preschool program shall be the regular education teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting.

The following information provides guidance for determining the regular education teacher for specific environments where a child with a disability may be receiving special education services, and how the state regulations address the issue of dual representation, "If qualified to do so, an agency member of the IEP/IFSP team may serve in the role of two or more required members of a child's IEP/IFSP team." (KAR 91-40-17(i)).

Home Setting Only

When a child with a disability receives special education services in the home, or the home of a child care provider, the parent or child care provider is not considered to be a regular education teacher of the child. In this situation, there is no regular education teacher of the child. The parent must be invited to participate in all IEP/IFSP meetings. Also, the parent should consider inviting the child care provider to attend IEP/IFSP meetings in order to share information about the child and to learn of the type of support they might be able to provide in the child care environment.

Community-Based Preschool Setting

For preschool children with disabilities who are enrolled in a community-based early childhood education program, the state has determined that a preschool teacher who meets the administering agency's requirements is qualified to be the regular education teacher of the child. Therefore, a Head Start teacher, or the teacher of any other public or private early childhood education program who meets the qualifications of the administering agency, is to serve as the regular education teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting. The preschool teacher must be the lead teacher of the child's classroom.

If a Head Start teacher, or a regular education teacher in another preschool program who meets the required state standards, is also a certified/licensed ECSE teacher and is providing regular education services and special education services to the child with a disability under an IEP/IFSP (under the supervision of a USD/Cooperative/Interlocal), this teacher may serve as both the regular education teacher and the special education teacher of the child.

When a child with a disability receives special education services in a regular education preschool program that is not operated by the LEA, the LEA is required to invite the regular education teacher of the child. If the regular education teacher of the child is not at the IEP/IFSP meeting the LEA shall designate attendance by an appropriate person who, under state standards, is qualified to serve children without disabilities of the same age as the child with a disability.

School-Based Regular Education Preschool Setting

If the public school operates an early childhood program, in which the child with a disability is enrolled, the teacher of the program would be the regular early childhood teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting. For a child attending kindergarten, the kindergarten teacher is the regular education teacher of the child.

Reverse Mainstreaming Setting Only

If a child with a disability is served in a reverse-mainstream early childhood special education setting and it is anticipated that the child will continue in that setting, a regular education teacher is not required to attend the IEP/IFSP meeting. If a school determines that a regular education teacher should attend an IEP/IFSP meeting, and the ECSE teacher of a child is also certified/licensed in early childhood education, the teacher may serve in the role of both the special education teacher and the regular education teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting, so long as there is not another regular education teacher of the child. If it is anticipated that the child will be transitioning to kindergarten during the year the IEP/IFSP is in effect, the kindergarten teacher should be the regular education teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting.

Early Childhood Special Education Setting Only

If a child with a disability is not in a regular education preschool environment and is not anticipated to be participating in a regular education preschool environment or Kindergarten during the term of the IEP/IFSP, then a regular education teacher is not required to attend the IEP/IFSP meeting. However, if a school determines that a regular education teacher should attend an IEP/IFSP meeting, and the early childhood special education (ECSE) teacher of a child is also licensed in early childhood education, the teacher may serve in the role of both the special education teacher and the regular education teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting. If it is anticipated that the child will be transitioning to kindergarten during the year the IEP/IFSP is in effect, the kindergarten teacher should be the regular education teacher at the IEP/IFSP meeting.

Initial Eligibility for Part B Services, including Transition from Part C

For an initial IEP/IFSP meeting, if the child with a disability is, or is anticipated to be, participating in a regular education preschool program, the current regular education preschool teacher or anticipated regular education teacher would serve in the role of the regular education teacher. If the child is not in a regular education preschool environment and is not anticipated to be participating in a regular education preschool environment or Kindergarten during the term of the IEP/IFSP, as determined by the IEP/IFSP team, then a regular education teacher is not required to attend the IEP/IFSP meeting.

Extent of Participation of the Regular Education Teacher

The federal Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) indicates that, the regular education teacher of a child with a disability, as a member of the IEP/IFSP team, must, to the extent appropriate, participate in the development, review and revision of the child's IEP/IFSP, including assisting in, (1) the determination of appropriate positive behavioral interventions and supports and other strategies for the child; and (2) the determination of supplementary aids and services, program modifications, and supports for school personnel that will be provided to assist the child. While a regular education teacher must be a member of the IEP/IFSP team if the child is, or may be, participating in the regular education environment, the teacher need not (depending upon the child's needs and the purpose of the specific IEP/IFSP team meeting) be required to participate in all decisions made as part of the IEP/IFSP meeting or to be present throughout the entire IEP/IFSP. Depending upon the specific circumstances, however, it may not be necessary for the regular education teacher to participate in discussions and decisions regarding, for example, the physical therapy needs of the child, if the teacher is not responsible for implementing that portion of the child's IEP/IFSP. The extent to which it would be appropriate for the regular education teacher member of the IEP/IFSP team to participate in IEP/IFSP meetings must be decided on a case-by-case basis.

Comparison of Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP) and the Individualized Education Program (IEP) Content

IFSP	IEP
A statement of the child's present levels of physical development (including vision, hearing, and health status), cognitive development, communication development, social or emotional development, and adaptive development	A statement of the child's present levels of academic achievement and functional performance, including, how the disability affects the child's participation in appropriate activities. This could include talking, singing songs, playing with friends, pretending, interacting with adults, participating in small and/or large groups, climbing up and down play equipment, running, walking, coloring, painting, constructing with blocks or other materials, feeding self, dressing etc.
A statement of the family's resources, priorities and concerns related to enhancing the development of the child with a disability as identified through the assessment of the family, and with their concurrence. This statement, while optional, should guide the team in writing outcomes for the child and family.	In developing the IEP, the IEP Team must consider the concerns of the parents for enhancing the education of their child. This information can be documented in the present levels of academic achievement and functional performance or may be written in the "special considerations" section of the IEP.
A statement of the measurable results or measurable outcomes expected to be achieved for the child (including pre-literacy and language skills, as developmentally appropriate for the child) and family, and the criteria, procedures, and timeliness used to determine—1) The degree to which progress toward achieving the results or outcomes is being made; and 2) Whether modifications or revisions of the results, outcomes or services are necessary.	A statement of measurable annual goals, including academic and functional goals designed to, a) meet the child's needs that result from the child's disability to enable the child to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum (participation in appropriate activities), and b) meet each of the child's other educational needs that result from the child's disability. The IEP must also include a description of how the child's progress toward meeting the annual goals will be measured; and identify when/how child progress on these goals will be reported (such as through the use of quarterly or other periodic reports, concurrent with the issuance of report cards)
A statement of the specific early intervention services, based on peer-reviewed research (to the extent practicable), that are necessary to meet the unique needs of the child and the family to achieve the results or outcomes including-the length, duration, frequency, intensity, and method of delivering the services;	A statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services, based on peer-reviewed research to the extent practicable, to be provided to the child, or on behalf of the child, and a statement of the program modifications or supports for school personnel that will be provided to enable the child—(i) To advance appropriately toward attaining the annual goals; a) To be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum(appropriate activities) and b) to participate in extracurricular and other nonacademic activities;

IFSP
A statement of natural environments in which early intervention services will be provided, including a justification of the extent, if any, to which services will not be provided in the natural setting (place where the child would be if he/she didn't have a disability).	An explanation of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with non-disabled children (e.g why they will not be served in early childhood settings)
The projected date for when services begin and the anticipated length of the services. It must also include how often the service will occur, the amount of time (for example 30 minutes versus an hour), location, payment for services, and the method of delivering the early intervention services (i.e., direct service, consultation), and identify medical and other services that the child or family needs or is receiving through other sources, but that are neither required nor funded under Part C. If those services are not currently being provided then the IFSP must include a description of the steps the service coordinator or family may take to assist the child and family in securing those other services.	The projected date for the beginning and ending date of service, any modification needed, and frequency (how often), location, and duration (length) of services. The amount of time, for example, could include 30 minutes of direct service with a speech-language pathologist 3 days per week or an hour consultation with an early childhood special educator 1 hour per week.

A review of the IFSP must be conducted every six months, or more frequently if conditions warrant, or if the family requests such a review. The purpose of the periodic review is to determine—1) The degree to which progress toward achieving the outcomes is being made; and 2) Whether modification or revision of the outcomes or services is necessary. In addition to the 6-month periodic review, a meeting must be conducted on at least an annual basis to evaluate and revise the IFSP as appropriate.	A description of how the child's progress toward the annual goals will be measured, including how the child's parent will be regularly informed about the child's progress. This will include information about whether or not the child is progressing enough to reach his/her goals for the year. Review periodically, but not less than annually, to determine whether the annual goals are being met.
The contents of the IFSP must be fully explained to the parents and informed consent must be obtained prior to the provision of early intervention services described in the IFSP. The IFSP therefore requires one signature from the parent to be in effect.	Parent signature on the IEP indicates that the parent participated in the development of the IEP as a team member. Before the initial provision of special education and related services can be provided to the child, Prior Written Notice and Informed written consent must be obtained from the parent.
The identification of the service coordinator from the profession most immediately relevant to the child's or family's needs (or who otherwise is qualified to carry out all applicable responsibilities) who will be responsible for the implementation of the plan and coordinate with other agencies and persons.	No comparable requirement. However, best practice indicators suggest that Part B programs take an active role in coordinating services for families who have children with disabilities. Specific coordination activities may be written in the "special considerations" section of the IEP.

IFSP	IEP
The Infant Toddler Network must establish a transition plan not fewer than 90 days--and, at the discretion of all of the parties, not more than nine months--before the child's third birthday; including steps for the child and family to exit the Part C program, enter the Part B program (or other services if found not eligible) and any transition services needed as a part of that process. At least nine months before the child's third birthday, the Infant Toddler Network must notify the school district in which the child resides, that the child will reach the age of eligibility for services under Part B.	For children transitioning into Part B from Part C, the IEP Team must consider using an IFSP that contains the IFSP content (including the natural environments statement and an educational component that promotes school readiness and incorporates pre-literacy, language, and numeracy skills), and that is developed in accordance with the IEP procedures The IFSP may serve as the IEP of the child if it is consistent with State policy; and is agreed to by both the agency and the child's parents. If an IFSP is used the school district must provide the parents a detailed explanation of the differences between an IFSP and an IEP; and if the parents choose an IFSP, obtain written informed consent.

Please note: Regardless of which plan is used for children age 3 and older, procedural safeguards for Part B of IDEA apply (i.e., Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE), Extended School Year (ESY)).

IEP Team Considerations
(The child's IEP must reflect these considerations.)

What are the strengths of the child?
How have the child's strengths been utilized to address the child's needs on the IEP?
What are the parents' concerns, if any, for enhancing the education of their child?
How are the parents' concerns for the education of their child addressed on the IEP?
Are there any potential harmful effects of the recommended placement on the student and/or the quality of services for the student? (Do the positive effects of the placement outweigh the potential harmful effects?)

Will the child participate in regular physical education or does the child require specially designed adapted physical education? (Children with disabilities only.)

Are extended school year services necessary since the benefits accrued to the child during the regular school term will be significantly jeopardized as a result of a break in educational programming? (Children with disabilities only.)

IEP Team Consideration of Evaluation Results and Special Factors		If yes, where is this need addressed in the IEP?

Olathe District Schools
DOCUMENTATION OF NEED FOR EXTENDED SCHOOL YEAR SERVICES

---

---

Student Name: _____

IEP Meeting Date: _____

Directions for using this form:

During the IEP team meeting in which eligibility for ESY is determined, the IEP team should review and discuss each factor below, including the “Questions to consider:”, and determine which, if any, factors support the need for Extended School year services for this student. Each factor should be marked with a checkmark to indicate if Extended School Year Services are needed in that area or not. A copy of this form must accompany the ESY information sent to Patty Shelhorn at WDSC-A, as well as accompany the IEP sent into Joyce Wist in Records at WDSC-A.

FACTORS FOR TEAM CONSIDERATION AND SUPPORTIVE DATA:

REGRESSION/RECOUPMENT: The IEP team must determine if without ESY services, there is a likelihood of substantial regression in an identified area of need addressed by the IEP caused by a school break and a failure to recover those lost skills in a reasonable time following the school break (e.g., six to eight weeks after summer break). Regression, for the purpose of this document, is a substantial loss of any skill addressed by the IEP. Some degree of loss in skills typically occurs with all students during normal school breaks and would not be considered substantial.

Questions to consider:

- Does regression/recoupment data suggest that this student’s skill losses over breaks are excessive and that it takes an unacceptably long period of time (more than 6 weeks) for lost skills to be regained upon return?
- What is the relative impact of short breaks on student performance?

Describe data considered:

- Regression/Recoupment data for this student indicate that ESY services are needed.
- Regression/Recoupment data for this student indicate that ESY services are not needed.

DEGREE AND/OR RATE OF PROGRESS: The IEP team must review the student's progress toward the IEP goals and determine if without these services, the student's degree or rate of progress toward those goals, objectives or benchmarks will prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her educational placement during the regular school year.

Questions to consider:

- Is there any pattern to the timing of progress (or lack of progress) that would indicate a need for ESY services?
- Does the student make progress at expected levels given the nature/severity of the child's disability?

Describe data considered:

- The degree and/or rate of progress for this student indicate that ESY services are needed.
- The degree and/or rate of progress for this student indicate that ESY services are not needed.

EMERGING SKILLS/BREAKTHROUGH OPPORTUNITIES: The IEP team must review all IEP goals and determine if any of these skills are at a breakthrough point. The IEP team must then determine if the interruption in services and instruction on those goals, objectives or benchmarks by the school break is likely to prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her educational program during the regular school year without these services.

Questions to consider:

- Has the student reached a critical point of instruction or behavior management where a break in programming would have serious, detrimental effects?

Describe data considered:

- Emerging skills/breakthrough opportunities for this student indicate that ESY services are needed.
- Emerging skills/breakthrough opportunities for this student indicate that ESY services are not needed.

INTERFERING BEHAVIORS: The IEP team must determine if without ESY services any interfering behavior(s) such as ritualistic, aggressive or self-injurious behavior(s) targeted by IEP goals will prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her educational program during the school year. The team must also determine that the interruption of programming which addresses the interfering behavior(s) is likely to prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her educational programming during the next school year.

Questions to consider:

- Does the student's behavior (or interruption of programming addressing the behavior) prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her educational program?

Describe data considered:

- Interfering behaviors for this student indicate that ESY services are needed.
- Interfering behaviors for this student indicate that ESY services are not needed.

NATURE AND/OR SEVERITY OF THE DISABILITY: The IEP team must determine if without ESY services, the nature and/or severity of the student's disability is likely to prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her educational program during the regular school year.

Questions to consider:

- Could ESY Services markedly slow the rate of degeneration anticipated due to a student's medical condition?
- Are the services an integral part of a program for populations of students with the same disabling condition and would a break in programming have a serious, detrimental effect?
- Are there any other individual circumstances that make the provision of ESY services critical so that this child can learn or participate in school activities upon return to school?

Describe data considered:

- The nature and/or severity of the disability for this student indicate that ESY services are needed.
- The nature and/or severity of the disability for this student indicate that ESY services are not needed.

SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES OR OTHER FACTORS: The IEP team must determine if without ESY services there are special circumstances that will prevent the student from receiving benefit from his/her education program during the regular school year. Indicate which, if any, factors are applicable in this case:

- Ability of the child's parents to provide the educational structure at home;
- Ability of the child to interact with children without disabilities;
- Areas of the child's curriculum, which need continuous attention; and
- The child's vocational needs.

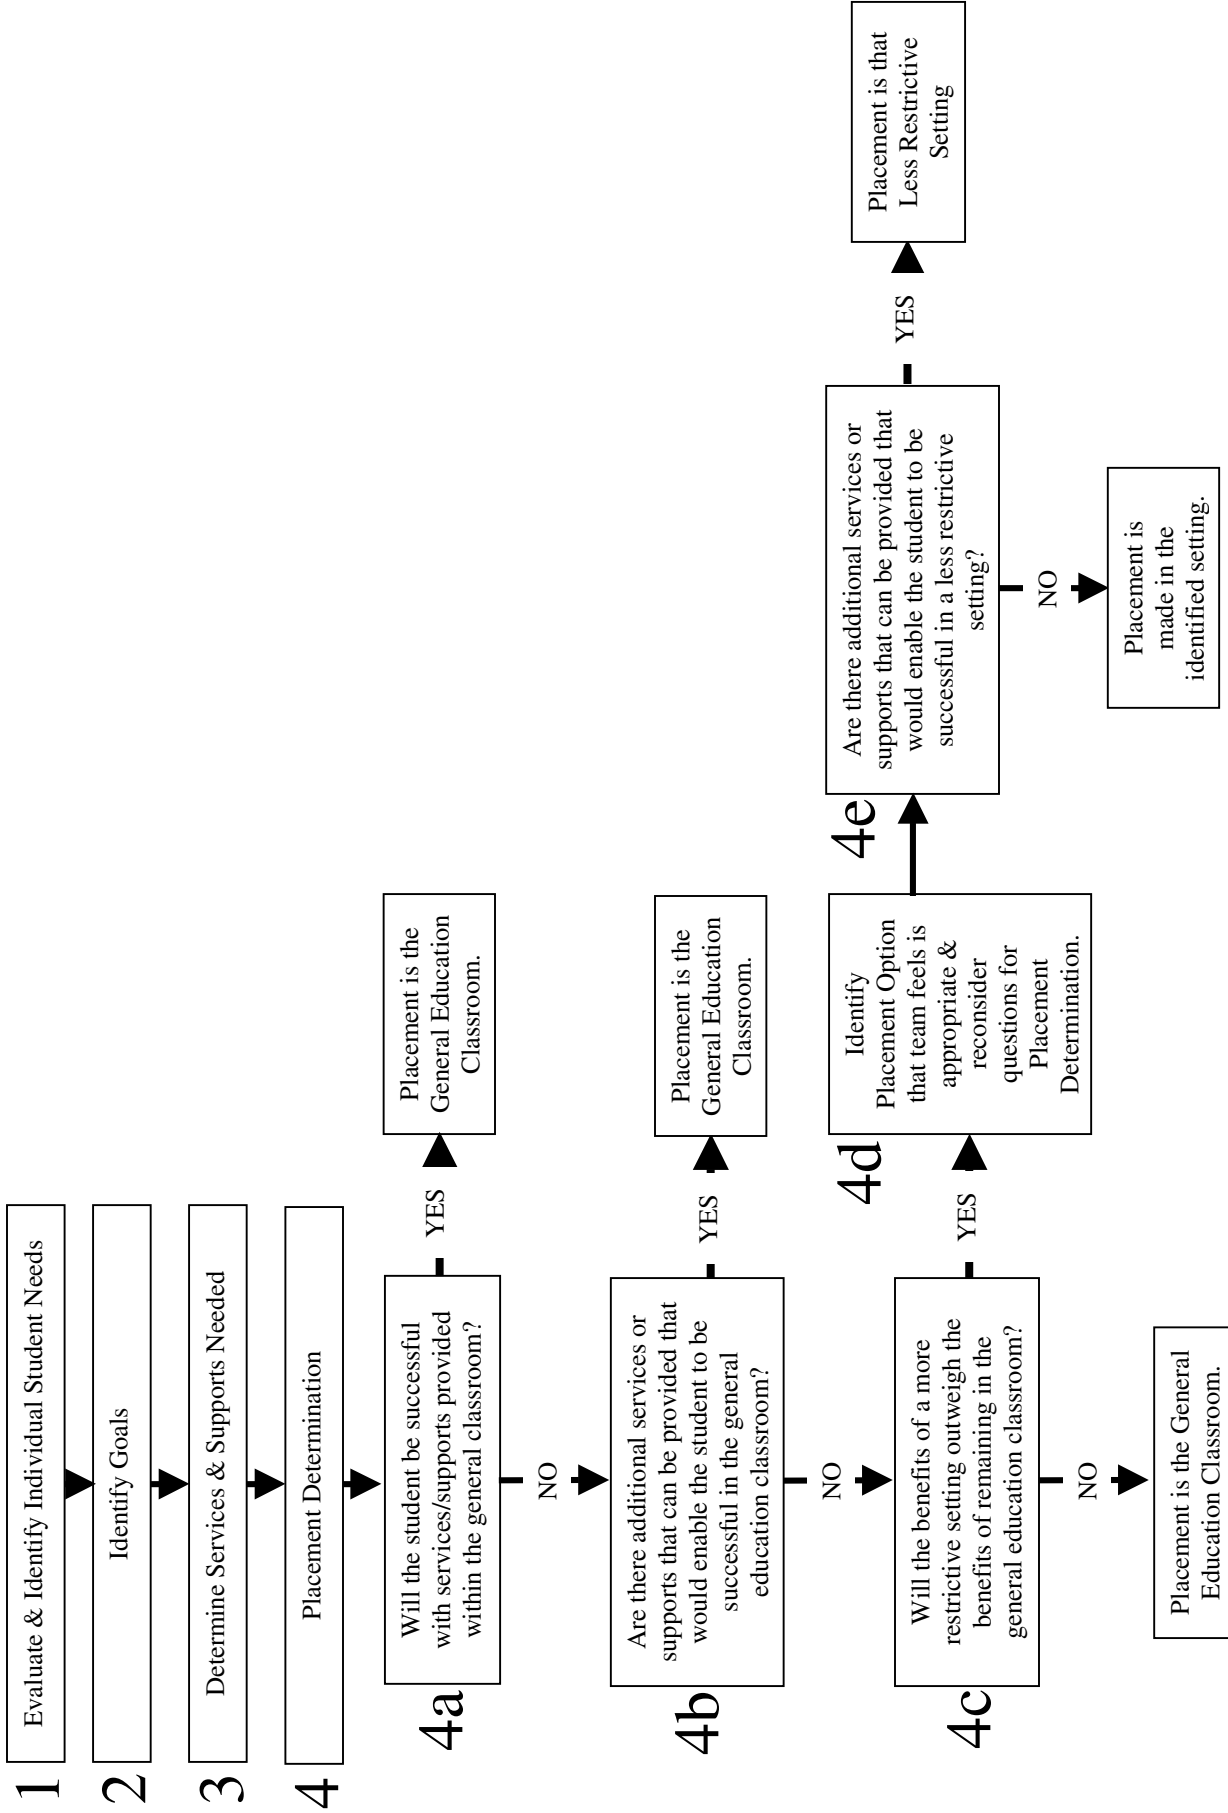

Describe data considered:

- Special circumstances or other factors for this student indicate that ESY services are needed.
- Special circumstances or other factors for this student indicate that ESY services are not needed.

If no empirical data are available on regression, then the need may be shown by expert opinion or prospective criteria established by the IEP team. The IEP Team should include their Special Service Coordinator to assist in this documentation. This decision should be based upon an examination that includes, but is not limited to the following:

- Documented regression and recoupment time;
- Review of the current IEP goals, objectives or benchmarks;
- Progress on goals in consecutive IEPs;
- Observation and data from teachers, therapists, parents, and others having direct contact with the student before and during breaks in educational programming;
- Data and observations regarding the student's performance after long weekends, vacations, and past summer breaks;
- Assessment of information maintained on the student, including pretest and post-test data; and
- Curriculum-based assessment, including pretest and post-test data; and other relevant factors.
- Progress notes/reports;
- Standardized tests;
- Behavior logs;
- Parent interviews;
- Attendance information;
- Other objective evidence; and
- Expert opinions.

LRE Decision Tree

1	Evaluate &amp; Identify Needs – For the IEP Team to be able to make any decisions for a student they must clearly understand the student’s needs. Think beyond academics and consider function as well. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Does the team understand how the disability manifests itself within the general education classroom?</li> <li>Does the team understand what it is about the student’s disability that prevents the student from being successful in the general education classroom?</li> </ul>
2	Identify Goals – After the team completely understands the student’s needs they can then prioritize the needs and identify the goals for the student (both post-school and annual goals). Using their understanding of the two questions above the team can determine what the student needs to become more independent and successful within the general education classroom.
3	Determine Services &amp; Supports Needed to Achieve Goals &amp; Meet Other Needs – After the goals for the student have been identified that team then moves to determining what services and supports need to be provided to enable the child to achieve those goals and to address the other needs identified in the present levels but do not have goals written for them. The services that the team needs to consider are special education, related services, program modifications, supplementary aids &amp; services and supports for school personnel. When making these decisions the team needs to keep in mind how much support the student needs to be successful. Too much support can build dependence in a child but providing the wrong type of services can prevent the student from being able to function in more independent ways. In addition to all of these considerations it’s important to remember, by law, a child with a disability cannot be removed from age-appropriate general classrooms solely because of needed modifications in the general education curriculum. Some questions to keep in mind when making service decisions include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Are there skills that could be taught to the student in order to reduce the amount of support she/he needs?</li> <li>Is the focus every year on making the student as independent as possible?</li> </ul> Note: The following are placement decisions not service decisions, they are not considered at this point: Resource Room, Pull-Out, Self-Contained, Inclusion, Center Based, BD/ED Program.
4	Determine Placement – Once the team has determined the services that the student needs then the discussion can move to placement, where services will be provided. To assist with this decision process the following questions lead the team through the placement discussion.
4a	Can the services determined necessary be provided within the general education classroom? – When having this conversation try to focus on whether services could be provided in the general education classroom and not how we typically provide services. The discussion of whether the services can be provided in the general education classroom must be done for each individual student based on their specific needs. If the team determines it is possible to provide the services in the general education classroom then the least restrictive environment for the student is the general education classroom.
4b	If not, are there additional services or supports that can be provided that would enable the student to be successful within the general education classroom? – If the team determines that the services as originally identified as necessary are unable to be provided in the general education classroom the next discussion should be whether additional supports or services could be provided that would allow the student to remain within the general education classroom. When making the decisions the team should consider the same issues of student independence as was considered in Step 3.
4c	If not, will the benefits of a more restrictive setting outweigh the benefits of remaining in the general education classroom? – If the team determines that it is not possible to provide additional services and supports in the general education classroom to meet the needs of the student then the consideration of placement options outside of the general education classroom are then considered. The team should move in small incremental steps away from the general education classroom and at each movement in the continuum the team should readdress questions in 4a and 4b for that placement. It is not until this point in the placement determination does the team consider placement options such as pull-out, resource room, etc. In making this decision, the team should consider (a) whether reasonable efforts have been made to accommodate the student, (b) the educational benefits, both academic and social that are available in each setting, (c) the possible negative effect of the inclusion of the student on the education of other students, and (d) the harmful effects of a more restrictive environment on the student.
4d	Identify Placement Option that team feels is appropriate &amp; reconsider questions for Placement Determination – If it is determined that the general classroom is not appropriate, based on the student’s needs and the services to be provided, the team identifies a reasonable and appropriate placement.
4e	Are there additional services or supports that can be provided that would enable the student to be served in a less restrictive setting? – The team needs to consider whether program modifications could occur or additional services could be provided which would enable the student to be appropriately served in a less restrictive setting. Even if these program modifications have never before been provided in the less restrictive setting, it should still be considered. When making the decision the team should consider the same issues of student independence as described in Step 3. Placement in the less restrictive setting should occur if additional modifications or supports would make that setting appropriate for the student.

MEMORANDUM OF CLARIFICATION 94-A

TO: All Superintendents and Directors of Special Education

FROM: Director, Student Support Services

DATE: May 20, 1994

RE: 94-A Kansas State Board of Education Policy on Least Restrictive Environment

This memorandum is written notification of revocation of Student Support Services Policy Letter 91-1: Least Restrictive Environment. This policy letter is replaced by the Kansas State Board of Education Policy on Least Restrictive Environment for Students with Disabilities dated March 8, 1994 and Response to Questions Regarding the Issue of Inclusion of Special Education Students for the Senate Education Committee dated March 30, 1994.

Rationale: On March 8, 1994 the Kansas State Board of Education adopted a policy statement on least restrictive environment for students with disabilities. On March 30, 1994, the State Board responded to questions from the Senate Education Committee regarding the issue of inclusion. As a result of these two new initiatives in the realm of least restrictive environment, the Student Support Services has decided to revoke Policy Letter 91-1: Least Restrictive Environment dated January 7, 1991 and replace it with the least restrictive environment policy statement adopted by the State Board of Education and response to questions put forth by the Senate Education Committee.

The State Board of Education adopted the policy statement on least restrictive environment to clarify its position and give guidance to schools in carrying out federal requirements of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. The federal law involves the practice of including students with disabilities in the regular education classroom to the maximum extent appropriate.

Under the new policy statement, removing children with disabilities from the regular education environment occurs only when the nature or severity of the disability is such that, even using supplementary aids and services, education cannot be achieved in the regular classroom. Each student's individual needs will determine placement. The policy statement contends that placement decisions can no longer be based on categorical labels. However, individual strengths and needs should determine the student's program.

The responses to the questions regarding inclusion put forth by the Senate Education Committee should be helpful to Superintendents and Special Education Directors dealing with the vast array of special education service options available to students with disabilities. Emphasis is given to placing the student with a disability in his or her neighborhood school. Including all children with disabilities in the regular education classroom will also require additional teacher training in order to equip teachers with the tools and skills they need to address curriculum, diversity in the classroom and teaming concepts.

The policy statement adopted by the State Board of Education and response to questions put forth by the Senate Education Committee are enclosed.

March 8, 1994 Kansas State Board of Education Policy on Least Restrictive Environment for Students with Disabilities

Background

Since the enactment of The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), a variety of terms have been coined to reference the practice of educating students with disabilities with students who are not disabled. Mainstreaming, the Regular Education Initiative (REI), integration, and inclusion have been used frequently and interchangeably. Given the absence of State or Federal definition, these terms mean different things to different people. This policy is intended to set forth guidance to local education agencies in carrying out the requirement of IDEA that, to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities including children in public or private institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are not disabled, and that special classes, separate schooling, or other removal of children with disabilities from the regular educational environment occurs only when the nature or severity of the disability is such that education in regular classes with the use of supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily. This is the legal premise which provides the basis for including students with disabilities in general education.

Historically, students with disabilities have been separated from their nondisabled peers based upon the belief that quality instruction to address their unique needs could only be provided in special separate settings by personnel with special education or related services credentials. The result has been the creation of a separate system of education and a dilution of the instructional resources available to all students. This dual system, while perhaps a necessary step in the evolution of educational practice, promoted an exclusionary philosophy and the separation of students with disabilities from their nondisabled peers. Frequently, students with disabilities have been educated in separate schools or in classrooms located in cluster arrangements rather than in their neighborhood schools. The result for students with disabilities has been little or no access to the general education classroom, as well as a lack of opportunities to develop friendships with nondisabled classmates. Special and general educators have taught in isolation without opportunity for collaboration, accountability and a mutual responsibility for all children and youth in Kansas.

In contrast, inclusive educational programs are those which serve all students, including those with disabilities, in the context of general education. Students are removed from the general education environment only when it is clear that they cannot succeed in that environment even with adequate supplemental aids and services. The amount of time spent outside of the general education classroom is determined by the student's individualized education program (IEP). Placement decisions are based on the student's unique needs rather than on categorical characteristics. It is critical that the placement process be carefully considered with opportunity for participation by the affected parties - - parents, students and school personnel. The cost of providing inclusive education may be a factor in determining placement when that cost has a significant adverse affect on the other students in the school district. As stipulated in 34 CFR 300.552(c), [u]nless the IEP of a child with a disability requires some other arrangement, the child is educated in the school that he or she would attend if nondisabled. Placement is reviewed annually, but may be changed whenever the IEP Team deems necessary. A change of placement is indicated when a student with a disability is so disruptive in a general education setting that the education of other students is significantly impaired or when the safety of others is endangered.

Important Points

- * Schools should value each student regardless of his or her abilities or disabilities.
- * Schools should provide dynamic, individualized and innovative learning opportunities for ALL students.
- * Schools should strive to provide education based on the needs of individual students with disabilities as determined by a well designed-IEP.

- * Schools should facilitate outcomes-based education by combining all of the specialized resources at the school to enhance learning of all students at the school.

Factors Involved in Student Placement

It is imperative that each student's individual needs determine placement. Placement should reflect the setting in which the student's needs can best be met when providing the educational services needed to implement the student's IEP. Placement decisions must not be based solely on any of the following factors: category of handicapping condition, configuration of the service delivery system, availability of educational or related services; availability of space; curriculum content; or methods of curriculum delivery. Individual strengths and needs should determine the student's program. The type and intensity of special education and related services required for the student to derive educational benefit must be made available.

In the field of education, the value of diversity is beginning to be recognized, as well as the value of individualizing each student's education, to address his/her diverse learning styles, strengths and needs. Kansas students who have disabilities benefit from receiving their education in general education settings alongside their nondisabled classmates. Similarly, Kansas students who do not have identified disabilities also benefit from inclusive educational programs by learning to appreciate diversity and value the achievement of those with disabilities. The Board recognizes the need for a full continuum of special education service options, but supports the age-appropriate, general education classroom in the school the student would attend if not disabled as the placement of choice for Kansas students with disabilities. Instead of a separate track educational system, schools are encouraged to strive toward a unified system that values and includes students of varying levels of ability.

Important Points

- * Placement is comprised of the setting of the educational program and the educational program itself.
- * Placement shall not be made based upon the student's categorical label nor upon administrative convenience.
- * Special education is not a place - it is services which may be provided in any setting.

Supplemental Aids and Services in the Classroom

When students with disabilities are included, adequate resources must be provided from the outset to the general education program. Support can be provided at many levels. Supplementary aids and services include, but are not limited to, materials or equipment provided in conjunction with general education classroom instruction, consulting specialists, itinerant teachers, resource rooms, tutoring, instructional support provided by paraprofessional personnel, assistive technology, readers and interpreters. Support may take the form of teacher consultation or direct instruction by the special educator in the classroom. Teacher training is also a vital support. Training in curriculum models which address diversity in the classroom, as well as training in skills of collaboration, are key elements of successful teacher inservice training plans. Practices which have been proven effective include: teaming arrangements involving general and special education staff and parents working together collaboratively to support students with and without disabilities; special and general educators teaching together; and the provision of related services and other needed supports within the context of the general educational program.

Support in the general education classroom must be more than a token effort. It should not be assumed that even an extremely skilled teacher and supportive peers can adequately include a student with disabilities without direct support from special educators. Support must be provided at the level needed in order for the student with disabilities to derive educational benefit from his/her educational program. The responsibility for ensuring adequate programming remains with the school district and the IEP process.

Introduction

VISION STATEMENT

A school, a community, a society in which hearing acuity is incidental, barriers are minimized, human potential is maximized and people are judged by their contributions and their character. (The extent to which a person does or does not hear becomes irrelevant.)

MISSION STATEMENT

TOTAL ACCESSIBILITY TO LANGUAGE, COMMUNICATION AND EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE IN A VISUAL ENVIRONMENT. The education and student life programs at KSSD not only support this mission for our students, but also work to be an integral part of that mission.

BELIEF STATEMENT

All students can and will learn and have the right to an academically rigorous and culturally rich environment. Both American Sign Language and English are equally valued and Deaf culture and heritage are an integral part of the total school program.

OBJECTIVES

The following objectives support the mission of the Kansas State School for the Deaf:

- Involve parents and families of deaf children as important participants in the educational process and strengthen their skills as contributors to communication, language, and social and cognitive growth.
- Create a total educational environment including the school, student life facilities, and extracurricular programs with interdisciplinary teams planning for each student's social, emotional, academic, and physical development.
- Develop in each child a native fluency in one or more languages, and through that language make accessible the same outcomes accessed by Kansas public school children.
- Help each student acquire the skills and interests necessary to function in each cultural group with which the student identifies and to recognize and respect other cultures.
- Strengthen educational quality and accountability through performance-based curricula and evaluation systems, strengthen positive environments, and develop environments that empower the learners and staff.
- Expand career, lifelong learning, and applied technical preparation which is relevant to the changed nature of work in an informational society.
- Extend and update, for educators and other professional staff, the professional competence and leadership excellence that is essential to quality education.

- Increase the Kansas School for the Deaf leadership role in the community, including the promulgation of awareness of deafness, the delivery of services to persons who are deaf, and the development of community employment opportunities for the deaf.
- Provide services to deaf children with special needs, as programs for these children are developed and appropriately funded.
- Expand the capacity of the Kansas School for the Deaf to function as a resource center for all programs and agencies serving deaf and hard-of-hearing children in Kansas.

Section 1:

INSTRUCTION

P-1000 EDUCATION PROGRAMS

P-1000 Education Programs

The Kansas State School for the Deaf will adhere to state and federal laws and regulations regarding the education of children with disabilities, including any related policies as may be issued by the Kansas State Board of Education. KSSD will offer programs and services within available state resources that assist Kansas schools in meeting their responsibility to provide a free and appropriate public education to their students who are deaf or hard of hearing. This includes assisting LEA's throughout the state in their efforts to identify and serve deaf and hard-of-hearing children.

P-1100 TITLE IX

The Kansas State School for the Deaf does not discriminate because of sex (gender) in the education programs or activities that it operates. This requirement not to discriminate in education programs and activities extends to employment and to admission.

No student or employee of the Kansas State School for the Deaf shall, based on sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity conducted by the Kansas School for the Deaf.

More specifically, the Kansas School for the Deaf will treat its students without discrimination based on sex regarding access to and participation in course offerings, athletics, counseling, employment assistance and extracurricular activities as prescribed by the Title IX regulations.

Grievance procedures have been adopted and posted on bulletin boards and are available from the Human Resources office. All new employees receive/sign for a copy at time of orientation.
(P-6750)

P-1200 ADVISORY COMMITTEE/SITE COUNCIL

A combined KSSD Advisory Committee/Site Council will convene at least twice per year. Representation will be included from:

- Kansas Association of the Deaf
- Kansas Commission for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing
- Johnson County Mental Health Services
- Kansas Educational Foundation for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing
- Olathe Club of the Deaf
- KSSD Alumni Association
- KSSD Parent Teacher Staff Organization

- Johnson County Community College
- Kansas Rehabilitation Services
- KSSD Teachers
- KSSD Student Life
- KSSD Related Services
- KSSD Student Body Council

P-1300 SCHOOL ACCREDITATION

KSSD shall fulfill all requirements for accreditation by KSDE and by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. This includes the requisite length of school year and fulfilling all state and federal individualized education program requirements as agreed upon at IEP meetings.

P-1400 CONFIDENTIALITY (FERPA)

KSSD will ensure the protection of confidentiality of any personally identifiable data, records, or files collected during the student's evaluation or maintained during their educational tenure. All student records will be maintained, accessed, released to outside parties, or disposed of as specified by law and regulation.

P-1500 REDUCTION BY TERMINATION AND RECALL

The certificated staff may be reduced by termination owing to a decrease in the number of students, causes over which KSSD has no control, and/or State Board approved modification of existing programs. Certificated staff may be recalled as conditions permit.

P-1600 PLACEMENT OPTIONS

KSSD serves as a placement option among the continuum of options mandated by federal law. In addition, students attending KSSD have, as a placement option, participation in Olathe Public School classes. Such placement must result from the recommendation of the IEP team.

P-1700 COMMUNICATION

Deaf students must communicate and interact in two different cultures. Consequently, American Sign Language and English are both valued and are an integral part of the total school program.

It is a part of the KSD mission to develop in each child a native fluency in one or more languages, and through that language make accessible the same outcomes accessed by children in Kansas Public Schools.

American Sign Language (ASL) is recognized as the language that characterizes communication among most of our students. ASL is a first and native language. English is taught as a second language. Consequently, during a child's early, formative years an environment rich in first language communication (ASL) is considered essential for building the foundation needed to establish fluency in a second language (English).

All means of acquiring a second language facility are implemented as appropriate and indicated on Individualized Education Programs (IEPs). These include reading, writing, speech and language therapy, use of amplification, and ASL instruction.

All persons communicating in the KSSD environment are asked to "sign all the time" to the extent possible.

The Superintendent of KSSB shall develop a plan to address bullying on KSSB property, in KSSB vehicles and at KSSB sponsored-activities and events. The plan shall be submitted to the State Board of Education for its approval. When approved, the Superintendent shall assure that the plan is implemented.

As used in this Policy, the following definitions apply.

(ii) damaging a student’s or staff member’s property;

(iii) placing a student or staff member in reasonable fear of harm to the student or staff member; or

(iv) placing a student or staff member in reasonable fear of damage to the student’s or staff member’s property; or

Digest of Inquiry

[Date Not Provided]

- What criteria apply to the grading schemes of students with disabilities?
- What criteria apply to grades, class ranking, and honor roll of students with disabilities?
- What criteria apply to graduation of students with disabilities?
- What criteria apply to the issuance of diplomas for students with disabilities?

Digest of Response

September 30, 1996

Modifications in Grading Schemes Okay Where Similarly Used with Nondisabled Population

In cases where a student with a disability receives special education accommodations in the regular classroom, it may be permissible for a school district to use modified grading systems if also used for the general student population. However, grades can not be modified and eligibility for honors awards can not be decided on the basis of special education status alone and the student's IEP should discuss any applicable alternative grading. When a student with a disability takes a general education class for no credit, it is permissible to exclude the student from grading and evaluate the student based on IEP objectives. Collaboration of general and special education teachers in grading students with disabilities is allowed. A school district may not identify special education classes on a high school student's transcript in order to indicate that the student has received modifications in the general classroom. However, course designations with more general connotations which do not give rise to a suggestion of special education programs are not violative of Section 504 and Title II of the ADA and this determination largely depends upon how the labels are used in a specific state or region. A school district can use asterisks or other symbols on a transcript to designate a modified curriculum in general education provided the grades and courses of all students are treated in a like manner. A school can disclose the fact that a student has taken special education courses to a post-secondary institution in instances where the parent and the student have knowledge of what information is on the transcript and have given written consent.

Eligibility Standards for Class Rank/Honors Must Not Arbitrarily Exclude Grades Earned in Special Ed

It is permissible for school districts to set eligibility criteria for class ranking or honors, provided it does not "arbitrarily discount" or "exclude grades" received by students with disabilities with the assistance of special education services. Weighted grading systems pass legal muster under Section 504 and ADA Title II where the district can show that such a system is based on "objective rating criteria". The use of "core courses" for honors, class ranking, or participation in certain activities is also allowed where all students receive the opportunity to take such courses and are similarly situated. The varying academic levels of the students is not a factor in that consideration.

Students with Disabilities May Not Be Precluded from Participating in Main Graduation Ceremony

Neither Section 504 nor Title II of the ADA contain a provision which requires an IEP meeting before a student eligible for special education under those laws graduates from high school, although the IDEA specifically addresses this subject. Since graduation is a "significant change in placement", a student's IEP should reflect the criteria necessary for graduation. While there is no express requirement under these laws mandating a "formal" determination on this issue by an evaluation team or notice of procedural safeguards to parents where this criteria has been attained, such procedures are advisable. Special education eligibility under Section 504 and Title II of the ADA terminates when the student graduates or reaches the maximum age for eligibility in the relevant state--whichever event comes first. Students who meet graduation criteria are entitled to the same treatment as the nondisabled population, and this means that they have the same rights to participate in graduation ceremonies as any other nondisabled student of the same age would have. While separate services or activities may be applicable in accordance with the "comparable facilities" provision at 34 CFR 104.34(c), eligible students with disabilities can not be prevented from partaking in the district's "main graduation ceremony" under any circumstances.

Students with Disabilities Entitled to Diplomas Under Same Circumstances as Nondisabled Population

Based on interpretations of the IDEA, Section 504 and Title II of the ADA students who have satisfied the requirements of their educational programs are entitled to receive a diploma under similar circumstances where a nondisabled student would receive a diploma. That diploma should be like the one a nondisabled student would receive, and any variation in wording may be permissible provided it is not based upon disability. When using different wording, it must reflect "objective criteria and each possibility must be available to all students on a nondiscriminatory basis." An opinion from the Office of Public Instruction or OCR is advisable prior to using different wording. Section 504 and Title II of the ADA permit schools to modify or adjust graduation requirements for students with disabilities.

This responds to your request that the U.S. Department of Education, Office for Civil Rights (OCR) review the Special Education Bulletin, dated July, 1995, distributed by your office to local school districts in the State of Montana. Specifically, you have asked OCR to comment whether the bulletin places greater requirements on local school districts than are contained in the applicable Federal statutes.

We were not provided information concerning which bulletin responses particularly generated these concerns; therefore, we shall respond to each item in the order presented in the bulletin. In general, we are in full agreement with the responses provided in the bulletin. Over-all, the bulletin responses are concise, impress us as being thoughtfully researched and written, and satisfactorily state the requirements contained in Section 504 and Title II, except where otherwise noted in our review comments.

OCR has enforcement authority over the subject matter covered in the bulletin under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (Section 504), and its implementing regulation contained in 34 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR), Part 104, for educational institutions that receive Federal funds from the Department. OCR also has been delegated enforcement authority over educational institution "public entities" under Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (Title II), and its implementing regulation contained in 28 CFR, Part 35. Our comments are therefore exclusively relegated to these two statutes and their implementing regulations.

Your bulletin in part references the Individual with Disabilities in Education Act (IDEA), and its implementing regulation contained at 34 CFR, Part 300. It should be made absolutely clear that OCR has no enforcement authority under IDEA. While we strive to reconcile the requirements of all three statutes and their implementing regulations in order to facilitate the implementation of a Free Appropriate Public Education (FAPE) for all school-age children with disabilities, regardless of the exact disability involved, there are some differences. Where significant, we will point them out.

In Section 504, there are two separate provisions that apply to the bulletin responses. One is § 104.4, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability. This provision requires that with respect to grades, class ranking, honor rolls, graduation, and diplomas, students with disabilities must be treated the same as all other students. The other is the part of Section 504 (§§ 104.31-36) that spells out the responsibilities of a preschool, elementary, and secondary school to provide a FAPE to an otherwise qualified school-age child with a disability.

In Title II, there are no specific provisions explicitly referring to pre-school, elementary and secondary school-age children or that mention the provision of FAPE, as there are in IDEA and Section 504. By agreement with the U.S. Department of Justice, the lead enforcement agency for the Americans with Disabilities Act, FAPE issues are covered under the discrimination prohibition provisions of § 35.130 of Title II.

The bulletin responses cover six pages and 15 individual subjects. We shall not repeat each individual response verbatim, but will only summarize where appropriate. Your enclosed bulletin is incorporated into this response for purposes of distribution to other interested parties. Much of the contents of your bulletin is based on opinions previously issued either by OCR, the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitation Services (OSERS), or the Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP), as noted on page six of the bulletin.

Grades

1. May a student with a disability who receives special education accommodations in a general education classroom be given modified grades?

We agree with your conclusion, and particularly with the discussion that the student's individualized education program (IEP) should discuss any grading modifications that may apply, particularly with respect to subjects completed in a general education setting.

As a general observation, it would be suspect if a school district discounted special education courses or otherwise depreciated special education course grades on a categorical basis. Districts may indicate course modifications made or alternative grades awarded in any subject or course, with qualifications, as explained further throughout this correspondence.

In summary, school districts cannot modify grades or determine eligibility for honors awards on the basis of the student's special education status, alone. To do so raises a strong inference that children with disabilities, who usually are the students classified as "special education students," are being treated differently on the basis of their disabilities. Alternate grading systems may be appropriate, as you suggest, if they are available to all students, not just students with disabilities.

2. May a student with a disability enrolled in a general education class for reasons other than mastery of the course content (example, learning social skills) be excluded from the class grading and evaluated on specific objectives on the IEP?

We agree with your response that classes taken for no credit as part of the IEP may solely be graded based upon criteria outlined in the particular student's IEP.

3. Can a general education teacher and a special education teacher assign the grade for a student with a disability in a general education classroom?

A collaborative grading effort between two or more educators is entirely appropriate in such circumstances. Again, this should be discussed in the IEP.

4. May classes be identified as special education classes on the high school student's transcript to indicate that the student has had a modified curriculum in general class?

This is an emphatic no, as you indicate in bold letters in your response. However, we must point out that there is yet no definitive standards enunciated in any court or OCR decision to indicate exactly what terms are permissible to use and what are not.

We generally agree with the examples contained in your response. It is much better to use terms such as "basic, level 1, practical," etc., as opposed to "special education." The former may be terms also applicable to remedial courses taken by persons without disabilities for a variety of reasons. This will always be a factual determination made in each individual set of circumstances.

Other examples of permissible transcript "labeling" or designations used may include "I.S. [independent study]" or "modified curriculum," if these terms are also used in other courses besides special education, such as the gifted and talented program.

Examples of transcript labels that should be carefully reviewed are "L.C. [learning center]," "H.B. [homebound instruction]," "resource room," "P.E. requirement waived--medical," "PF [peer facilitator used]," or "S.O.S. (special opportunity school)." We understand that these terms are often used on transcripts of "at risk" students who may not have disabilities, or at least have not been identified as such.

To summarize, if the course designation suggests that it only is used in special education programs involving students with disabilities covered by Section 504 or Title II, it may be a violation. If it has a more general connotation, it may not be violative. The response to this question may largely depend on regional as well as state-wide usage practices.

5. May asterisks or other symbols or codes be written on a high school student transcript to indicate that the student has had a modified curriculum in a general education?

The bulletin response indicating that modifications or exceptions to the grading scale may be identified on the academic transcript as long as grades and courses of all students, and not just students with disabilities, are similarly treated is generally correct. For example, if the modification code system covers enhanced or greater difficulty course-work completed by gifted and talented program students as well as students taking remedial courses, it may not necessarily violate Section 504 or Title II to also include special education courses. The key will be to determine if the modification identification tends to focus on students with disabilities as a category. If it does, it strongly suggests that it may be prohibited under Section 504 or Title II.

Further, since academic transcripts should not be released to prospective employers or postsecondary educational institutions without the permission of the student, the school district should take steps to notify each student of what his or her academic transcript contains in the way of such modification notations, if any, before releasing it to another party.

6. May a student with a disability or parent, when appropriate, disclose the student's participation in special education services to a post-secondary educational institution?

Your affirmative response frames this question, we believe, in an acceptable context. Voluntary disclosure can assist the student, but the parent or student must know what is on the transcript and give written consent "specific to the information sent."

Grades, Class Ranking and Honor Roll

1. Must grades earned in special education classes or in general education classes with the support of special education services be included in district wide GPA standings? (This leads to a ranking of students by GPA for honor roll and college scholarship purposes.)

The short answer is that grades earned by students with disabilities cannot categorically be disregarded or excluded, even if earned with the support of special education services. If a school district wishes to establish standards for eligibility for class ranking or honors, it may do so, as long as it does not arbitrarily discount or exclude grades earned by students with disabilities.

One method for doing this is to develop and implement an uncomplicated system of weighted grades. This is usually done by assigning points to a letter grade based on the degree of difficulty of subject matter completed. This system will stand scrutiny under Section 504 and Title II as long as it can be demonstrated that the weighting system is based on objective rating criteria. To work, the system must be fair and simple to understand.

For example, an "A" earned in advanced algebra may be rated worth 5 points in a student's over-all honors competition compared with another "A" in basic arithmetic given a weight of only one point. One obvious advantage of this system is that it should not discourage brighter students from taking more challenging courses. A "B" or even a "C" earned in a tougher course can still be worth more points for purposes of academic comparisons than an "A" in a less challenging subject. If such a system is utilized, the school district will have the responsibility to justify the various weights assigned, if challenged.

Another possibility is to establish a list of "core courses" which must be completed in order to be eligible for honors, class ranking or participation in certain activities. As stated in your bulletin response, the fact that all students may not be able to perform at higher academic levels is not determinative, as long as all students and not only those with disabilities are similarly affected, and all are eligible to take these subjects, if desired.

2. May a school district implement a weighted grading system that arbitrarily assigns lower grade weights to all special education courses?

The clear answer here is no, as stated in your response. If a weighting system is used, each subject or course must be analyzed separately and assigned a degree of difficulty factor based on its individual contents. In most situations, the faculty or administrative decision should be accorded great deference if any challenge develops, particularly if the school district can produce a record explaining the process and criteria used to assign various weights to each course or subject.

Graduation

1. Is an Individualized Education Program meeting required before a student with disabilities graduates from high school?

The affirmative response given in the bulletin is presumably based on IDEA and Montana state statutes. There is no specific requirement on this procedure contained in either Section 504 or Title II. IDEA, on the other hand, covers this subject in detail.

2. Are procedural safeguards required when a student with disabilities graduates from high school?

Clearly, the graduation of a special education student receiving an education in accordance with an IEP constitutes a "significant change in placement." Under Section 504 and Title II, the student's most recent IEP should anticipate the student's graduation by describing the criteria that must be met by the student in order to do so. If this criteria is achieved, however, there is no explicit Section 504 or Title II requirement that expressly provides that a formal determination must be made on this point by an evaluation team, along with providing the parents notice of procedural safeguards.

We believe, however, that as a recommendation, it has great merit. Our observation assumes, to some extent, that there is no question that as a result of a previous evaluation team meeting, the parents are cognizant of their Section 504 procedural safeguards, or "due process" rights, and giving them notice of these rights again would not be required, although it would certainly be acceptable to do so.

3. May a student who has graduated from public high school receive special education services under IDEA until the age of 21?

The response primarily addresses the requirements under IDEA. Under Section 504 or Title II, the school district has the responsibility of providing a qualified student a FAPE until the student is graduated or achieves the maximum age for eligibility for public education in that state, whichever happens first.

4. May an IEP team plan a special education program for a student with disabilities to graduate when the student is age 21?

Under Section 504 or Title II, a student who has met graduation requirements, irrespective of age, cannot be treated differently on the basis of disability. A qualified student with a disability is eligible to participate in whatever graduation ceremony a student of similar age without disabilities would be eligible to participate.

Section 504 or Title II does not address participation of a student with disabilities in a separate graduation service or activity. Section 104.34 (c), Comparable facilities, may apply, if a separate service or activity is undertaken by the school district. Eligible students with disabilities cannot be precluded, in any event, from participation in the school district's main graduation ceremony, if the student wishes to do so.

Diploma

1. Are all special education students who are enrolled in public school eligible to receive a diploma?

The affirmative bulletin response cites IDEA and the Administrative Rules of Montana (ARM) as the legal basis for this decision. Section 504 and Title II interpretations reach the same result.

2. May a school district use different wording on the diploma received by a student with a disability?

We agree with the bulletin response that the diploma awarded to each student must be similar in all "significant respects." Variation in wording may not necessarily be a violation of Section 504 or Title II, so long as the variation is not based on disability as a category of students.

If different diploma wording is used, the bulletin response is correct that the requirements for being awarded a particular diploma must be based upon objective criteria and each possibility must be available to all students on a nondiscriminatory basis.

If the school district wishes, each diploma may contain language that refers to the individual's academic transcript for the exact courses or subjects completed.

Because of the infinite number of wording variations possible to use on a diploma, we recommend that an opinion be obtained in advance from either the Office of Public Instruction or OCR.

3. May requirements for granting a diploma be waived for students with disabilities?

The succinct answer to this question is yes. There are no restrictions in either Section 504 or Title II that would prohibit a school district from modifying or adjusting graduation requirements, consistent with the student's IEP.

Because of the wide-spread interest demonstrated in the subject matter of your bulletin, we are sharing its contents and our comments with other school districts who have inquired on these subjects.

Summary of Performance And Recommendations

Student Name: Cody

Date: May 5 2006

Dear Cody;

Now that you have graduated or are beyond the age of eligibility for special education services, we are providing you with this Summary of Performance and Recommendations. We are offering you this information to assist you as you plan for your future. It is divided into two parts. The first part summarizes your current academic achievement and functional performance. The second part provides recommendations for how you might receive assistance in meeting the goals that you have been working toward for your post high school life.

Your Post-secondary Goals:

As state on your previous EIP, you would like to receive training for another job. You are also interested in under water welding and plan to live at home for awhile.

Part I: Summary of your Academic Achievement and Functional Performance:

You have successfully met high school requirements. Your academic achievement levels are as follows. Word recognition is at an 8th grade instructional level; reading comprehension is at a 6th grade instructional level. Math computation is at an 8th grade level using a calculator. Writing skills are poor and handwriting is often illegible. You have good common sense in everyday life skills. You may have difficulty obtaining and keeping a job based upon poor attendance for school/work study. Auditory hands on learning are your preferred models.

Part II: Recommendations to Assist You:

I would recommend to you to seek jobs that will fit your interest, ability and lifestyle. You may need assistance with job seeking through family members. You may also benefit from getting assistance from vocational rehabilitation services. You will need to reestablish contact if you so decide to seek assistance. Their number is 620-555-1212. You may want to keep a copy of your most recent IEP and obtain information from your spec file from the Special Education Coop. At some point in your life/career you may find it helpful to further your reading, writing and math skills.

We have enclosed a copy of this document for your parents. We will also place a copy in our records. If you have questions concerning this document, please contact:

Summary of Performance And Recommendations

Student Name: Donnetta

Date: May 5 2006

Dear Donnetta;

Now that you have graduated or are beyond the age of eligibility for special education services, we are providing you with this Summary of Performance and Recommendations. We are offering you this information to assist you as you plan for your future. It is divided into two parts. The first part summarizes your current academic achievement and functional performance. The second part provides recommendations for how you might receive assistance in meeting the goals that you have been working toward for your post high school life.

Your Post-secondary Goals:

Donnetta, your goal as indicated on the most recent IEP document is to obtain work in a factory doing packaging or assembly work. A long-range goal is to live as independently as possible in your own apartment once you have secured a good-paying job.

Part I: Summary of Your Academic Achievement and Functional Performance:

Donnetta, you have met all requirements for graduation on May 20, 2006 from Northern Heights High School. Your academic performance is well below that of your same age peers but within expectations based upon intellectual abilities. Your reading comprehension, writing, and math skills are not at levels that lend themselves to completely independent adult functioning in the home or work environment. While you are able to do many things and accomplish academic tasks specifically targeted to an appropriate learning level, and do these very well, progression through the high school curriculum required specially designed instruction and a majority of academic time in the learning resource room setting.

Part II: Recommendations to Assist You:

Donnetta, through learning and work experiences available to you during your high school enrollments, you have demonstrated good work ethic in monitored settings. Your vocational rehabilitation assessment indicates a need for a highly structured work setting with a supervisor or job coach to frequently remind and prompt for tasks. Further recommendations include short, written sentences or picture-symbols should be used in the workplace whenever possible. Additionally, continued learning through job training would be beneficial. Your learning style benefits from concrete examples and from repetition to grasp new ideas. A calculator is recommended for all applied math tasks.

Requesting copies of pertinent information currently contained in your spec file may be helpful should you choose to further your training or as sources of necessary information in requesting post-high school services. Additionally, utilization of agencies such as Vocation Rehabilitation and Community Developmental Disabilities Organization is encouraged.

We have enclosed a copy of this document for your parents. We will also place a copy in our records. If you have questions concerning this document, please contact:

Model Notification of Rights under FERPA for Elementary and Secondary Schools

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) affords parents and students over 18 years of age ("eligible students") certain rights with respect to the student's education records. These rights are:

(1) The right to inspect and review the student's education records within 45 days of the day the School receives a request for access.

Parents or eligible students should submit to the School principal [or appropriate school official] a written request that identifies the record(s) they wish to inspect. The School official will make arrangements for access and notify the parent or eligible student of the time and place where the records may be inspected.

(2) The right to request the amendment of the student's education records that the parent or eligible student believes are inaccurate.

Parents or eligible students may ask the School to amend a record that they believe is inaccurate. They should write the School principal [or appropriate school official], clearly identify the part of the record they want changed, and specify why it is inaccurate. If the School decides not to amend the record as requested by the parent or eligible student, the School will notify the parent or eligible student of the decision and advise them of their right to a hearing regarding the request for amendment. Additional information regarding the hearing procedures will be provided to the parent or eligible student when notified of the right to a hearing.

(3) The right to consent to disclosures of personally identifiable information contained in the student's education records, except to the extent that FERPA authorizes disclosure without consent.

One exception, which permits disclosure without consent, is disclosure to school officials with legitimate educational interests. A school official is a person employed by the School as an administrator, supervisor, instructor, or support staff member (including health or medical staff and law enforcement unit personnel); a person serving on the School Board; a person or company with whom the School has contracted to perform a special task (such as an attorney, auditor, medical consultant, or therapist); or a parent or student serving on an official committee, such as a disciplinary or grievance committee, or assisting another school official in performing his or her tasks.

A school official has a legitimate educational interest if the official needs to review an education record in order to fulfill his or her professional responsibility.

[Optional] Upon request, the School discloses education records without consent to officials of another school district in which a student seeks or intends to enroll. [NOTE: FERPA requires a school district to make a reasonable attempt to notify the parent or student of the records request unless it states in its annual notification that it intends to forward records on request.]

(4) The right to file a complaint with the U.S. Department of Education concerning alleged failures by the School District to comply with the requirements of FERPA. The name and address of the Office that administers FERPA are:

Family Policy Compliance Office
U.S. Department of Education
400 Maryland Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20202-5901

[NOTE: In addition, a school may want to include its directory information public notice, as required by § 99.37 of the regulations, with its annual notification of rights under FERPA.]

PROVIDER MANUAL

Local Education Agency

PART II LOCAL EDUCATION AGENCY PROVIDER MANUAL

This is the provider specific section of the manual. This section (Part II) was designed to provide information and instructions specific to Local Education Agency (LEA) providers. It is divided into three subsections: Billing Instructions, Benefits and Limitations, and Appendices.

The Billing Instructions subsection explains the method of billing applicable to LEA services.

The Benefits and Limitations subsection defines specific aspects of the scope of LEA services allowed within the Kansas Medical Assistance Program (KMAP).

The Appendix subsection contains information concerning procedure codes. These appendices were developed to make finding and using procedure codes easier for the biller.

HIPAA Compliance

As a participant in KMAP, providers are required to comply with compliance reviews and complaint investigations conducted by the Department of Health and Human Services as part of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) in accordance with section 45 of the code of regulations parts 160 and 164. Providers are required to furnish the Department of Health and Human Services all information required by the Department during its review and investigation. The provider is required to provide the same forms of access to records to the Medicaid Fraud and Abuse Division of the Kansas Attorney General's Office upon request from such office as required by K.S.A. 21-3853 and amendments thereto.

A provider who receives such a request for access to or inspection of documents and records must promptly and reasonably comply with access to the records and facility at reasonable times and places. KMAP beneficiaries will be assigned to one or more Medical Assistance benefit plans. The assigned plan or plans will be listed on the beneficiary ID card. These benefit plans entitle the beneficiary to certain services. From the provider's perspective, these benefit plans are very similar to the type of coverage assignment in the previous Medicaid Management Information System (MMIS). If there are questions about service coverage for a given benefit plan, contact the Medical Assistance Customer Service Center at 1-800-933-6593 or 785-274-5990.

BENEFITS AND LIMITATIONS

8400. MEDICAID

Medicaid reimburses LEAs for all medically necessary services for the child to receive a free and appropriate public education, as documented on the child's Individualized Educational Program (IEP). Payment is made to LEAs approved by the Kansas Health Policy Authority (KHPA) for services provided through KMAP as listed in Appendix I.

Providers of Medicaid reimbursable services in an LEA shall have appropriate credentials as described in the Medicaid State Plan and as required by the Kansas State Department of Education. Professionals are expected to supervise the work of same-type paraprofessionals and confine the scope of practice to the usual and customary for their profession/paraprofession.

KAN Be Healthy screens may be provided and billed by an LEA for eligible Medicaid beneficiaries, including those without an IEP or an Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP). In the LEA setting, Registered Nurses (RNs) who have KBH certification may be used to provide and bill KBH screens under the LEA provider number. Please refer to Appendix I for a complete list of codes that may be used to bill KBH screens in the LEA setting.

Services delivered by an LEA do not require a referral from the child's Medicaid managed care provider (PCCM or HMO).

Services must be medically necessary and may be habilitative or rehabilitative for maximum reduction of disability and restoration to the best possible functional level. Services which are educationally necessary but not medically necessary will not be covered. Services must be approved and provided by an Early Childhood Intervention (ECI), Head Start, or LEA program.

Therapy should be provided only for individuals with a Physician Treatment Plan, an IEP or an IFSP. A physician's order is required for physical, speech, occupational, and other therapies. Therapy codes must be billed as one unit equals one visit unless the description of the code specifies the unit.

Occupational therapy services must be provided by a registered occupational therapist or by a certified occupational therapy assistant working under the supervision of a registered occupational therapist.

Physical therapy services must be provided by a registered physical therapist or by a certified physical therapy assistant working under the supervision of a registered physical therapist.

Supervision must be clearly documented. This may include, but is not limited to, the registered occupational or physical therapist initializing each treatment note written by the certified occupational or physical therapy assistant, or the registered occupational or physical therapist writing "Treatment was supervised" followed by his or her signature.

8400. MEDICAID

Nursing attendant care services may be billed by LEAs for students with those services in their IEPs. Specific services allowed include:

S9123 Nursing Care, in the home; by RN, per hour ~~Skilled Nursing Service~~
S9124 Nursing care, in the home; by LPN, per hour ~~LPN Care~~

The LEA may use its own employees or contracted staff from another agency to provide these services.

Physician-selected ICD-9-CM diagnosis codes must identify the condition for which the beneficiary is receiving services. An appropriate diagnosis code would be 783.40.

Documentation of all services performed is required and must include:

- Date, time, and description of each service delivered and by whom (name, designation of profession or paraprofession)
- Assessment and response to intervention/service
- Progress toward achieving individualized long- and short-term goals

The Kansas Medicaid Fraud Control Act (K.S.A. 2004 Supp. 21-3844 to 21-3855) requires that providers keep records for five years from the date of payment or, if the claim does not pay, the date when the provider submitted the claim.

Services provided by LEA providers are by law at no cost to the family. Because the services are at no charge to the family, most insurance companies consider these services as not covered by their policies. Therefore, KHPA does not require LEA providers to seek payment from private insurance companies to be eligible to receive Medicaid reimbursement. Similarly, KHPA will not seek reimbursement from the insurance companies.

However, KHPA does require all Medicaid providers to report insurance resources of which they become aware. This reporting assists KHPA in billing for other services that the other insurance company covers, such as hospitalization.

This policy does not prevent LEA providers from billing and collecting from insurance companies which do cover these services. If a provider anticipates that an insurance company will cover the services and the parents give the provider permission to bill the insurance, this private resource should be accessed prior to accessing taxpayer funded Medicaid.

The party making the demand agrees to reimburse the mediator for all expenses related to contesting the subpoena. This includes attorney fees, plus the mediator's hourly rate during the mediation process.

A record of the mediation discussions will not be maintained, and no recording (electronic or otherwise) is permitted.

You have five days from the date you receive this notice to advise us of any hearing officers on the list that you wish to disqualify. The school may appoint from this list any hearing officer who has not been disqualified by you. If you disqualify all of the hearing officers on the list, the school will, within 3 business days after receiving your notice of disqualification of all of the hearing officers on the list, notify the Kansas State Department of Education of the following: (a) your name and address; (b) the name and address of your attorney, if known; and (c) the names of the hearing officers who were disqualified by you. At that time, the school will request that the Kansas State Department of Education appoint a hearing officer for this case.

7. We are also required to inform you of free or low-cost legal and other relevant services. To fulfill this requirement, we refer you to Kansas Legal Services 1-800-723-6953 and to the Disability Rights Center of Kansas 1-877-776-1541. Families Together (1-800-264-6343) is the Parent Information Center and can help parents understand their rights and due process procedures.

8. Please be advised that a mediation process is also available to help resolve special education disputes. The costs of mediation are borne by the state. Thus, there are no costs for mediation to either the parents or the local school district. The mediator is an impartial professional who is: (a) knowledgeable in special education law; (b) not connected with the school district; and (c) selected for the mediation by the state department of education.

Case Summary

Just as parents can seek an expedited hearing to dispute a student's placement in an IAES following a serious disciplinary infraction, LEAs can request an expedited hearing to ask that potentially dangerous students be kept out of mainstream classrooms. OSEP informed a professor of special education law that districts are entitled to speed up the appellate process when it believes that a child with a disability is substantially likely to injure himself or other people if he does not remain in an IAES. In a letter to the professor, OSEP Director Alexa Posny clarified that returning a child to the placement from which he was removed essentially amounts to maintaining the child's current educational placement. "If the LEA believes that 'maintaining the current educational placement of the child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others,' the LEA may appeal that determination by filing a due process complaint to request an expedited due process hearing under 34 CFR 300.532(a)," Posny wrote. The director also noted that an LEA can repeat the procedure if it believes that the child continues to pose a safety threat after 45 days in an IAES.

Professor, Department of Special Education

Salt Lake City, Utah 84112

Dear Ms. Huefner:

This letter is in response to your letter dated October 3, 2006, in which you request clarification regarding 34 CFR §§ 300.532(a) and 300.533 of the final regulations for Part B of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (Part

B). The final Part B regulations, published in the Federal Register on August 14, 2006 at 71 Fed. Reg. 46540 became effective on October 13, 2006.

You ask for clarification of the language in 34 CFR § 300.532(a) which gives a parent or a local educational agency (LEA) the right to request an expedited due process hearing. That regulation provides that "[t]he parent of a child with a disability who disagrees with any decision regarding placement under §§ 300.530 and 300.531 or the manifestation determination under § 300.530(e), or an LEA that believes that maintaining the current placement of the child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or others, may appeal the decision by requesting a hearing. The hearing is requested by filing a complaint pursuant to §§ 300.507 and 300.508(a) and (b)." 34 CFR § 300.532(a). You seek clarification regarding what decision would be the subject of the LEA's appeal in the expedited hearing, since you believe that no change in placement to an interim alternative educational setting could occur until the hearing officer issues a decision in favor of the LEA. We believe that the language "appeal the decision" refers to a situation where a child has been removed from the current placement pending the manifestation determination, and the LEA seeks a hearing officer's intervention to challenge the decision to return the child to the current placement as a result of the manifestation determination.

Except for drugs, weapons, or serious bodily injury offenses under 34 CFR § 300.530(g), (where a child can be immediately removed for not more than 45 school days regardless of whether the misconduct is a manifestation of the child's disability), the Part B regulations provide that a child is returned to the placement from which he or she was removed for ten days following a determination that the behavior giving rise to the disciplinary action was a manifestation of the child's disability, unless the parent and the LEA agree to a change of placement as part of the modification of the behavioral intervention plan. 34 CFR § 300.530(f)(2). The return of the child to the placement from which the child was removed under these circumstances is tantamount to "maintaining the current placement of the child." If the LEA believes that "maintaining the current placement of the child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others" the LEA may appeal that determination by filing a due process complaint to request an expedited due process hearing under 34 CFR § 300.532(a). The hearing officer may order a change of placement under 34 CFR § 300.532(b)(2)(ii) to an appropriate interim alternative educational setting for not more than 45 school days if the hearing officer agrees with the LEA that maintaining the current educational placement of the child is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others. Under 34 CFR § 300.532(b)(3), these procedures may be repeated if the LEA believes that returning the child to the original placement is substantially likely to result in injury to the child or to others.

Regarding 34 CFR § 300.533 (Placement during appeals) you indicate that you do not understand the meaning of this provision when an LEA requests a hearing to remove a child from his or her current placement, and ask why an LEA is permitted to remove the child to an interim educational setting before a hearing decision is issued. The regulation at 34 CFR § 300.533 is clear that when an appeal has been made under 34 CFR § 300.532, by either the parent or the LEA, the child's "stay-put" placement is the interim alternative educational setting selected by the child's individualized education program (IBP) Team. In most instances, we believe that the child would be placed in an interim alternative educational setting pursuant to the LEA's authority provided under 34 CFR §§ 300.530 and 300.531 prior to the LEA's request for an expedited due process hearing, and the LEA would be requesting that the hearing officer extend the child's placement in the interim alternative educational setting for an additional 45 school days. As explained in the Analysis of Comments and Changes published with the final Part B regulations, 34 CFR § 300.533, which implements section 615(k)(4)(A) of the reauthorized IDEA, reflects "... Congress's clear intent that, when there is an appeal under section 615(k)(3) of the Act by the parent or the public agency, the child shall remain in the interim alternative educational setting chosen by the IEP Team pending the hearing officer's decision or until the time period for the disciplinary action expires, whichever occurs first unless the parent and the public agency agree otherwise." Assistance to States for the Education of Children with Disabilities and Preschool Grants for Children with Disabilities, Final Rule, 71 Fed. Reg. 46540.46726 (Aug. 14, 2006).

Based on section 607(e) of the IDEA, we are informing you that our response is provided as informal guidance and is not legally binding, but represents an interpretation by the U.S. Department of Education of the IDEA in the context of the specific facts presented.

We hope this information is responsive to your request and provides the clarification you need. If you have further questions, please do not hesitate to contact this office.

Guidelines for the Use of Seclusion Rooms and Restraint on Children with Disabilities

Guideline 1. Definitions. As used in these guidelines, the following terms shall have the meanings specified herein: (a) "Children with disabilities" has the meaning specified in K.S.A. 72-962 and amendments thereto.

(b) "Imminent risk of harm" means an immediate and impending threat of a person causing substantial physical injury to self or others. Violent action that is destructive of property may involve a substantial risk of injury to a person.

(c) "Individualized education plan" and "IEP" have the meaning specified in K.S.A. 72-962 and amendments thereto.

(d) "Mechanical restraint" means any device or object used to limit a person's movement, except that a protective or stabilizing device either ordered by a person appropriately licensed to issue the order for the device or required by law shall not be considered to be a mechanical restraint. This term does not include any device used by a law enforcement officer, campus police officer, or school security officer in carrying out law enforcement duties.

(e) "Physical restraint" means bodily force used to substantially limit a person's movement, except that consensual, solicited, or unintentional contact and contact to provide comfort, assistance, or instruction shall not be deemed to be physical restraint.

(f) "School employees" means teachers, paraprofessionals, providers of related services, administrators, and support staff.

(g) "Seclusion room" means a room or other confined area in which a child with a disability is placed in isolation from other persons for a limited time as a behavior intervention strategy and from which the student is prevented from having egress.

Guideline 2. Seclusion rooms; use and restrictions. (a) No child with a disability should be subjected to unreasonable, unsafe, or unwarranted use of seclusion rooms. Therefore, a child should be placed in a seclusion room only as a behavior intervention strategy and not for purposes of discipline or punishment, or for the convenience of staff.

(b) Any child with a disability should be placed in a seclusion room only if this action is specified in the student's IEP or behavior intervention plan (BIP) or if the behavior of the student presents an imminent risk of harm.

(c) Unless the behavior of a child with a disability presents an imminent risk of harm, the child should not be placed in a seclusion room unless other less-restrictive, positive behavior intervention strategies specified in the child's IEP or BIP, as appropriate to the behavior exhibited by the child, have been implemented but were ineffective.

(d)(1) If the IEP team of a child with a disability determines, based upon the results of a functional assessment of behavior and other relevant information, that an appropriate behavior intervention plan for the child should include the use of a seclusion room, the IEP team should include this information in the child's IEP or BIP and specify the location of each seclusion room to be used, the maximum length of any period of seclusion, the number of times during a single school day that the child is to be placed in a seclusion room, and any other relevant matter agreed to by the IEP team.

(2) The IEP team also should specify the data to be collected to determine whether placement of the child in a seclusion room is effective with the child, including the number of times that the use of a seclusion room within a fixed period of time could signify the need for an IEP team meeting, and a date by which a review of the effectiveness of this intervention should shall be made and the name of each reviewer. A parent must be given the opportunity to participate in this review. The initial review date should be scheduled for a date not exceeding 45 school days after the IEP team meeting. Of course, an IEP team meeting may be requested at any time to review and consider making changes in the use of this behavior intervention strategy.

(e) A child with a disability should not be placed in a seclusion room if the child is known to have any medical condition that a licensed health care provider has indicated, in a written statement that is provided to the school and that is on file with the school, precludes this action.

(f) A child with a disability should not be placed in a seclusion room except by a school employee who has had training in the appropriate use of seclusion rooms, including getting a child to a seclusion room, placing a child in a seclusion room, and supervising a child while the child is in the room. The training shall be consistent with nationally-recognized training programs, such as Mandt or Nonviolent Crisis Intervention, to ensure the safe use of this behavior intervention strategy.

(g) While a child with a disability is in a seclusion room, the school employee who is supervising the student should have the ability to see and hear the student at all times.

(h) Not more than one child with a disability should be placed in the same seclusion room at the same time.

Guideline 3. Seclusion rooms; size and characteristics. Each seclusion room to be used for any particular child should be of a size that is appropriate to the child's chronological and developmental age, size, and behavior.

(b) Each seclusion room should have a ceiling height that is comparable to the ceiling height of the other rooms in the building in which it is located and should be equipped with heating, cooling, ventilation, and lighting systems that are comparable to the systems that are in use in the other rooms of the building in which it is located.

(c) Each seclusion room should be free of any object that poses a danger to the child with a disability who is being placed in the room.

(d) Any seclusion room should be equipped with a door that locks only if the lock is equipped with a device that automatically disengages the lock in case of an emergency, such as a fire or tornadic weather.

Guideline 4. Physical restraint and mechanical restraint; use and restrictions. (a) No child with a disability should be subjected to unreasonable, unsafe, or unwarranted use of physical restraint as provided in this guideline. A child with a disability should not be subjected to any form of mechanical restraint.

(b) Except as provided in paragraph (c), no school employee should use physical restraint on any child with a disability. Physical restraint should not be used for discipline, punishment, or the convenience of staff.

(c)(1) A school employee should use physical restraint on a child with a disability only if the child's behavior presents an imminent risk of harm or the child is involved in an altercation. Except to intercede in an altercation, each school employee applying physical restraint should use a method of physical restraint in which the employee has received training and should apply the physical restraint in a manner that is proportionate to the circumstances and to the child's size and age and the severity of the child's behavior.

(2) School employees should be provided training in using an appropriate method of physical restraint and in determining the circumstances in which the use of physical restraint is appropriate. The training should be consistent with nationally-recognized training programs, such as Mandt or Nonviolent Crisis Intervention, to ensure that school employees are trained in the proper use of physical restraint to prevent harm to students or others.

Guideline 5. Seclusion rooms and physical restraint; reports and notification.

(a)(1) When any child with a disability is placed in a seclusion room or is subjected to physical restraint, the procedures specified in this guideline, or others providing for parental notification, should be implemented.

(2) As soon as possible after use of the seclusion room or physical restraint, the school employee who used the seclusion room or physical restraint, or an employee who witnessed its use, should document the use of the seclusion room or the physical restraint. This documentation should be completed not later than the school day following the day on which the seclusion room or physical restraint is used, and a copy of the documentation provided to the parent of the child when the documentation is completed.

(b)(1) Each school that uses a seclusion room as defined in guideline 1 must submit annually to the state director of special education the following information:

(A) The name of the school and the grades offered at the school; and

(B) The length, width and height of each of the seclusion rooms located in the school.

(2) Each school that uses a seclusion room must submit a quarterly report to the state director of special education that includes the following information:

(A) The number of students placed in seclusion during the reporting period;

(B) the maximum amount of time any child was in seclusion on a single occasion; and

(C) the maximum number of times during a single day that a student was placed in a seclusion room.

(c) The state director of special education will compile the reports from the schools and provide the results to the State Special Education Advisory Council, which is to consider the information and make any recommendations it believes appropriate to the State Board of Education.

SEC. 612. STATE ELIGIBILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL- A State is eligible for assistance under this part for a fiscal year if the State submits a plan that provides assurances to the Secretary that the State has in effect policies and procedures to ensure that the State meets each of the following conditions:

(1) FREE APPROPRIATE PUBLIC EDUCATION-

(A) IN GENERAL- A free appropriate public education is available to all children with disabilities residing in the State between the ages of 3 and 21, inclusive, including children with disabilities who have been suspended or expelled from school.

(B) LIMITATION- The obligation to make a free appropriate public education available to all children with disabilities does not apply with respect to children--

(i) aged 3 through 5 and 18 through 21 in a State to the extent that its application to those children would be inconsistent with State law or practice, or the order of any court, respecting the provision of public education to children in those age ranges; and

(ii) aged 18 through 21 to the extent that State law does not require that special education and related services under this part be provided to children with disabilities who, in the educational placement prior to their incarceration in an adult correctional facility--

(I) were not actually identified as being a child with a disability under section 602; or

(II) did not have an individualized education program under this part.

(C) STATE FLEXIBILITY- A State that provides early intervention services in accordance with part C to a child who is eligible for services under section 619, is not required to provide such child with a free appropriate public education.

(2) FULL EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY GOAL- The State has established a goal of providing full educational opportunity to all children with disabilities and a detailed timetable for accomplishing that goal.

(3) CHILD FIND-

(A) IN GENERAL- All children with disabilities residing in the State, including children with disabilities who are homeless children or are wards of the State and children with disabilities attending private schools, regardless of the severity of their disabilities, and who are in need of special education and related services, are identified, located, and evaluated and a practical method is developed and implemented to determine which children with disabilities are currently receiving needed special education and related services.

(B) CONSTRUCTION- Nothing in this title requires that children be classified by their disability so long as each child who has a disability listed in section 602 and who, by reason of that disability, needs special education and related services is regarded as a child with a disability under this part.

(4) INDIVIDUALIZED EDUCATION PROGRAM- An individualized education program, or an individualized family service plan that meets the requirements of section 636(d), is developed, reviewed, and revised for each child with a disability in accordance with section 614(d).

(5) LEAST RESTRICTIVE ENVIRONMENT-

- (A) IN GENERAL- To the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities, including children in public or private institutions or other care facilities, are educated with children who are not disabled, and special classes, separate schooling, or other removal of children with disabilities from the regular educational environment occurs only when the nature or severity of the disability of a child is such that education in regular classes with the use of supplementary aids and services cannot be achieved satisfactorily.
- (B) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENT-
- (i) IN GENERAL- A State funding mechanism shall not result in placements that violate the requirements of subparagraph (A), and a State shall not use a funding mechanism by which the State distributes funds on the basis of the type of setting in which a child is served that will result in the failure to provide a child with a disability a free appropriate public education according to the unique needs of the child as described in the child's IEP.
  - (ii) ASSURANCE- If the State does not have policies and procedures to ensure compliance with clause (i), the State shall provide the Secretary an assurance that the State will revise the funding mechanism as soon as feasible to ensure that such mechanism does not result in such placements.
- (6) PROCEDURAL SAFEGUARDS-
- (A) IN GENERAL- Children with disabilities and their parents are afforded the procedural safeguards required by section 615.
  - (B) ADDITIONAL PROCEDURAL SAFEGUARDS- Procedures to ensure that testing and evaluation materials and procedures utilized for the purposes of evaluation and placement of children with disabilities for services under this title will be selected and administered so as not to be racially or culturally discriminatory. Such materials or procedures shall be provided and administered in the child's native language or mode of communication, unless it clearly is not feasible to do so, and no single procedure shall be the sole criterion for determining an appropriate educational program for a child.
- (7) EVALUATION- Children with disabilities are evaluated in accordance with subsections (a) through (c) of section 614.
- (8) CONFIDENTIALITY- Agencies in the State comply with section 617(c) (relating to the confidentiality of records and information).
- (9) TRANSITION FROM PART C TO PRESCHOOL PROGRAMS- Children participating in early intervention programs assisted under part C, and who will participate in preschool programs assisted under this part, experience a smooth and effective transition to those preschool programs in a manner consistent with section 637(a)(9). By the third birthday of such a child, an individualized education program or, if consistent with sections 614(d)(2)(B) and 636(d), an individualized family service plan, has been developed and is being implemented for the child. The local educational agency will participate in transition planning conferences arranged by the designated lead agency under section 635(a)(10).
- (10) CHILDREN IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS-
- (A) CHILDREN ENROLLED IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS BY THEIR PARENTS-
    - (i) IN GENERAL- To the extent consistent with the number and location of children with disabilities in the State who are enrolled by their parents in private elementary schools and secondary schools in the school district served by a local educational agency, provision is made for the participation of those children in the program assisted or carried out under this part by providing for such children special education and related services in accordance with the following requirements, unless the Secretary has arranged for services to those children under subsection (f):
      - (I) Amounts to be expended for the provision of those services (including direct services to parentally placed private school children) by the local educational agency shall be equal to a proportionate amount of Federal funds made available under this part.
      - (II) In calculating the proportionate amount of Federal funds, the local educational agency, after timely and meaningful consultation with representatives of private schools as described in clause (iii), shall conduct a thorough and complete child find process to determine the number of parentally placed children with disabilities attending private schools located in the local educational agency.

- (III) Such services to parentally placed private school children with disabilities may be provided to the children on the premises of private, including religious, schools, to the extent consistent with law.
  - (IV) State and local funds may supplement and in no case shall supplant the proportionate amount of Federal funds required to be expended under this subparagraph.
  - (V) Each local educational agency shall maintain in its records and provide to the State educational agency the number of children evaluated under this subparagraph, the number of children determined to be children with disabilities under this paragraph, and the number of children served under this paragraph.
- (ii) CHILD FIND REQUIREMENT-
- (I) IN GENERAL- The requirements of paragraph (3) (relating to child find) shall apply with respect to children with disabilities in the State who are enrolled in private, including religious, elementary schools and secondary schools.
  - (II) EQUITABLE PARTICIPATION- The child find process shall be designed to ensure the equitable participation of parentally placed private school children with disabilities and an accurate count of such children.
  - (III) ACTIVITIES- In carrying out this clause, the local educational agency, or where applicable, the State educational agency, shall undertake activities similar to those activities undertaken for the agency's public school children.
  - (IV) COST- The cost of carrying out this clause, including individual evaluations, may not be considered in determining whether a local educational agency has met its obligations under clause (i).
  - (V) COMPLETION PERIOD- Such child find process shall be completed in a time period comparable to that for other students attending public schools in the local educational agency.
- (iii) CONSULTATION- To ensure timely and meaningful consultation, a local educational agency, or where appropriate, a State educational agency, shall consult with private school representatives and representatives of parents of parentally placed private school children with disabilities during the design and development of special education and related services for the children, including regarding--
- (I) the child find process and how parentally placed private school children suspected of having a disability can participate equitably, including how parents, teachers, and private school officials will be informed of the process;
  - (II) the determination of the proportionate amount of Federal funds available to serve parentally placed private school children with disabilities under this subparagraph, including the determination of how the amount was calculated;
  - (III) the consultation process among the local educational agency, private school officials, and representatives of parents of parentally placed private school children with disabilities, including how such process will operate throughout the school year to ensure that parentally placed private school children with disabilities identified through the child find process can meaningfully participate in special education and related services;
  - (IV) how, where, and by whom special education and related services will be provided for parentally placed private school children with disabilities, including a discussion of types of services, including direct services and alternate service delivery mechanisms, how such services will be apportioned if funds are insufficient to serve all children, and how and when these decisions will be made; and
  - (V) how, if the local educational agency disagrees with the views of the private school officials on the provision of services or the types of services, whether provided directly or through a contract, the local educational agency shall provide to the private school officials a written explanation of the reasons why the local educational agency chose not to provide services directly or through a contract.
- (iv) WRITTEN AFFIRMATION- When timely and meaningful consultation as required by clause (iii) has occurred, the local educational agency shall obtain a written affirmation signed by the representatives of participating private schools, and if such representatives do not provide such affirmation within a reasonable period of time, the local educational agency shall forward the documentation of the consultation process to the State educational agency.

(v) COMPLIANCE-

(I) IN GENERAL- A private school official shall have the right to submit a complaint to the State educational agency that the local educational agency did not engage in consultation that was meaningful and timely, or did not give due consideration to the views of the private school official.

(II) PROCEDURE- If the private school official wishes to submit a complaint, the official shall provide the basis of the noncompliance with this subparagraph by the local educational agency to the State educational agency, and the local educational agency shall forward the appropriate documentation to the State educational agency. If the private school official is dissatisfied with the decision of the State educational agency, such official may submit a complaint to the Secretary by providing the basis of the noncompliance with this subparagraph by the local educational agency to the Secretary, and the State educational agency shall forward the appropriate documentation to the Secretary.

(vi) PROVISION OF EQUITABLE SERVICES-

(I) DIRECTLY OR THROUGH CONTRACTS- The provision of services pursuant to this subparagraph shall be provided--

(aa) by employees of a public agency; or

(bb) through contract by the public agency with an individual, association, agency, organization, or other entity.

(vii) PUBLIC CONTROL OF FUNDS- The control of funds used to provide special education and related services under this subparagraph, and title to materials, equipment, and property purchased with those funds, shall be in a public agency for the uses and purposes provided in this title, and a public agency shall administer the funds and property.

(B) CHILDREN PLACED IN, OR REFERRED TO, PRIVATE SCHOOLS BY PUBLIC AGENCIES-

(i) IN GENERAL- Children with disabilities in private schools and facilities are provided special education and related services, in accordance with an individualized education program, at no cost to their parents, if such children are placed in, or referred to, such schools or facilities by the State or appropriate local educational agency as the means of carrying out the requirements of this part or any other applicable law requiring the provision of special education and related services to all children with disabilities within such State.

(ii) STANDARDS- In all cases described in clause (i), the State educational agency shall determine whether such schools and facilities meet standards that apply to State educational agencies and local educational agencies and that children so served have all the rights the children would have if served by such agencies.

(C) PAYMENT FOR EDUCATION OF CHILDREN ENROLLED IN PRIVATE SCHOOLS WITHOUT CONSENT OF OR REFERRAL BY THE PUBLIC AGENCY-

(i) IN GENERAL- Subject to subparagraph (A), this part does not require a local educational agency to pay for the cost of education, including special education and related services, of a child with a disability at a private school or facility if that agency made a free appropriate public education available to the child and the parents elected to place the child in such private school or facility.

(ii) REIMBURSEMENT FOR PRIVATE SCHOOL PLACEMENT- If the parents of a child with a disability, who previously received special education and related services under the authority of a public agency, enroll the child in a private elementary school or secondary school without the consent of or referral by the public agency, a court or a hearing officer may require the agency to reimburse the parents for the cost of that enrollment if the court or hearing officer finds that the agency had not made a free appropriate public education available to the child in a timely manner prior to that enrollment.

(iii) LIMITATION ON REIMBURSEMENT- The cost of reimbursement described in clause (ii) may be reduced or denied--

(I) if--

(aa) at the most recent IEP meeting that the parents attended prior to removal of the child from the public school, the parents did not inform the IEP Team that they were rejecting the placement proposed by the public agency to provide a free appropriate public education to their child, including stating their concerns and their intent to enroll their child in a private school at public expense; or

(18) MAINTENANCE OF STATE FINANCIAL SUPPORT-

(A) IN GENERAL- The State does not reduce the amount of State financial support for special education and related services for children with disabilities, or otherwise made available because of the excess costs of educating those children, below the amount of that support for the preceding fiscal year.

(B) REDUCTION OF FUNDS FOR FAILURE TO MAINTAIN SUPPORT- The Secretary shall reduce the allocation of funds under section 611 for any fiscal year following the fiscal year in which the State fails to comply with the requirement of subparagraph (A) by the same amount by which the State fails to meet the requirement.

- (C) WAIVERS FOR EXCEPTIONAL OR UNCONTROLLABLE CIRCUMSTANCES- The Secretary may waive the requirement of subparagraph (A) for a State, for 1 fiscal year at a time, if the Secretary determines that--

  - (ii) the State meets the standard in paragraph (17)(C) for a waiver of the requirement to supplement, and not to supplant, funds received under this part.
- (D) SUBSEQUENT YEARS- If, for any year, a State fails to meet the requirement of subparagraph (A), including any year for which the State is granted a waiver under subparagraph (C), the financial support required of the State in future years under subparagraph (A) shall be the amount that would have been required in the absence of that failure and not the reduced level of the State's support.
- (19) PUBLIC PARTICIPATION- Prior to the adoption of any policies and procedures needed to comply with this section (including any amendments to such policies and procedures), the State ensures that there are public hearings, adequate notice of the hearings, and an opportunity for comment available to the general public, including individuals with disabilities and parents of children with disabilities.

(i) among local educational agencies in the State; or

(ii) compared to such rates for nondisabled children within such agencies.

(B) REVIEW AND REVISION OF POLICIES- If such discrepancies are occurring, the State educational agency reviews and, if appropriate, revises (or requires the affected State or local educational agency to revise) its policies, procedures, and practices relating to the development and implementation of IEPs, the use of positive behavioral interventions and supports, and procedural safeguards, to ensure that such policies, procedures, and practices comply with this title.

(23) ACCESS TO INSTRUCTIONAL MATERIALS-

(A) IN GENERAL- The State adopts the National Instructional Materials Accessibility Standard for the purposes of providing instructional materials to blind persons or other persons with print disabilities, in a timely manner after the publication of the National Instructional Materials Accessibility Standard in the Federal Register.

(B) RIGHTS OF STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCY- Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to require any State educational agency to coordinate with the National Instructional Materials Access Center. If a State educational agency chooses not to coordinate with the National Instructional Materials Access Center, such agency shall provide an assurance to the Secretary that the agency will provide instructional materials to blind persons or other persons with print disabilities in a timely manner.

(C) PREPARATION AND DELIVERY OF FILES- If a State educational agency chooses to coordinate with the National Instructional Materials Access Center, not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act of 2004, the agency, as part of any print instructional materials adoption process, procurement contract, or other practice or instrument used for purchase of print instructional materials, shall enter into a written contract with the publisher of the print instructional materials to--

(24) OVERIDENTIFICATION AND DISPROPORTIONALITY- The State has in effect, consistent with the purposes of this title and with section 618(d), policies and procedures designed to prevent the inappropriate overidentification or disproportionate representation by race and ethnicity of children as children with disabilities, including children with disabilities with a particular impairment described in section 602.

(25) PROHIBITION ON MANDATORY MEDICATION-

- (A) IN GENERAL- The State educational agency shall prohibit State and local educational agency personnel from requiring a child to obtain a prescription for a substance covered by the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.) as a condition of attending school, receiving an evaluation under subsection (a) or (c) of section 614, or receiving services under this title.
- (B) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION- Nothing in subparagraph (A) shall be construed to create a Federal prohibition against teachers and other school personnel consulting or sharing classroom-based observations with parents or guardians regarding a student's academic and functional performance, or behavior in the classroom or school, or regarding the need for evaluation for special education or related services under paragraph (3).
- (b) STATE EDUCATIONAL AGENCY AS PROVIDER OF FREE APPROPRIATE PUBLIC EDUCATION OR DIRECT SERVICES- If the State educational agency provides free appropriate public education to children with disabilities, or provides direct services to such children, such agency--

- (c) EXCEPTION FOR PRIOR STATE PLANS-
- (1) IN GENERAL- If a State has on file with the Secretary policies and procedures that demonstrate that such State meets any requirement of subsection (a), including any policies and procedures filed under this part as in effect before the effective date of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act of 2004, the Secretary shall consider such State to have met such requirement for purposes of receiving a grant under this part.
  - (2) MODIFICATIONS MADE BY STATE- Subject to paragraph (3), an application submitted by a State in accordance with this section shall remain in effect until the State submits to the Secretary such modifications as the State determines necessary. This section shall apply to a modification to an application to the same extent and in the same manner as this section applies to the original plan.
  - (3) MODIFICATIONS REQUIRED BY THE SECRETARY- If, after the effective date of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act of 2004, the provisions of this title are amended (or the regulations developed to carry out this title are amended), there is a new interpretation of this title by a Federal court or a State's highest court, or there is an official finding of noncompliance with Federal law or regulations, then the Secretary may require a State to modify its application only to the extent necessary to ensure the State's compliance with this part.

- (1) IN GENERAL- If, on the date of enactment of the Education of the Handicapped Act Amendments of 1983, a State educational agency was prohibited by law from providing for the equitable participation in special programs of children with disabilities enrolled in private elementary schools and secondary schools as required by subsection (a)(10)(A), or if the Secretary determines that a State educational agency, local educational agency, or other entity has substantially failed or is unwilling to provide for such equitable participation, then the Secretary shall, notwithstanding such provision of law, arrange for the provision of services to such children through arrangements that shall be subject to the requirements of such subsection.
  - (2) PAYMENTS-
    - (A) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNTS- If the Secretary arranges for services pursuant to this subsection, the Secretary, after consultation with the appropriate public and private school officials, shall pay to the provider of such services for a fiscal year an amount per child that does not exceed the amount determined by dividing--

- (i) the total amount received by the State under this part for such fiscal year; by
- (ii) the number of children with disabilities served in the prior year, as reported to the Secretary by the State under section 618.

(B) WITHHOLDING OF CERTAIN AMOUNTS- Pending final resolution of any investigation or complaint that may result in a determination under this subsection, the Secretary may withhold from the allocation of the affected State educational agency the amount the Secretary estimates will be necessary to pay the cost of services described in subparagraph (A).

(C) PERIOD OF PAYMENTS- The period under which payments are made under subparagraph (A) shall continue until the Secretary determines that there will no longer be any failure or inability on the part of the State educational agency to meet the requirements of subsection (a)(10)(A).

(3) NOTICE AND HEARING-

(A) IN GENERAL- The Secretary shall not take any final action under this subsection until the State educational agency affected by such action has had an opportunity, for not less than 45 days after receiving written notice thereof, to submit written objections and to appear before the Secretary or the Secretary's designee to show cause why such action should not be taken.

(B) REVIEW OF ACTION- If a State educational agency is dissatisfied with the Secretary's final action after a proceeding under subparagraph (A), such agency may, not later than 60 days after notice of such action, file with the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such State is located a petition for review of that action. A copy of the petition shall be forthwith transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Secretary. The Secretary thereupon shall file in the court the record of the proceedings on which the Secretary based the Secretary's action, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

(C) REVIEW OF FINDINGS OF FACT- The findings of fact by the Secretary, if supported by substantial evidence, shall be conclusive, but the court, for good cause shown, may remand the case to the Secretary to take further evidence, and the Secretary may thereupon make new or modified findings of fact and may modify the Secretary's previous action, and shall file in the court the record of the further proceedings. Such new or modified findings of fact shall likewise be conclusive if supported by substantial evidence.

(D) JURISDICTION OF COURT OF APPEALS; REVIEW BY UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT- Upon the filing of a petition under subparagraph (B), the United States court of appeals shall have jurisdiction to affirm the action of the Secretary or to set it aside, in whole or in part. The judgment of the court shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari or certification as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

SEC. 613. LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCY ELIGIBILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL- A local educational agency is eligible for assistance under this part for a fiscal year if such agency submits a plan that provides assurances to the State educational agency that the local educational agency meets each of the following conditions:

(1) CONSISTENCY WITH STATE POLICIES- The local educational agency, in providing for the education of children with disabilities within its jurisdiction, has in effect policies, procedures, and programs that are consistent with the State policies and procedures established under section 612.

(2) USE OF AMOUNTS-

(A) IN GENERAL- Amounts provided to the local educational agency under this part shall be expended in accordance with the applicable provisions of this part and--

- (i) shall be used only to pay the excess costs of providing special education and related services to children with disabilities;
- (ii) shall be used to supplement State, local, and other Federal funds and not to supplant such funds; and

- (iii) shall not be used, except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), to reduce the level of expenditures for the education of children with disabilities made by the local educational agency from local funds below the level of those expenditures for the preceding fiscal year.
- (B) EXCEPTION- Notwithstanding the restriction in subparagraph (A)(iii), a local educational agency may reduce the level of expenditures where such reduction is attributable to--
  - (i) the voluntary departure, by retirement or otherwise, or departure for just cause, of special education personnel;
  - (ii) a decrease in the enrollment of children with disabilities;
  - (iii) the termination of the obligation of the agency, consistent with this part, to provide a program of special education to a particular child with a disability that is an exceptionally costly program, as determined by the State educational agency, because the child--
    - (I) has left the jurisdiction of the agency;
    - (II) has reached the age at which the obligation of the agency to provide a free appropriate public education to the child has terminated; or
    - (III) no longer needs such program of special education; or
  - (iv) the termination of costly expenditures for long-term purchases, such as the acquisition of equipment or the construction of school facilities.
- (C) ADJUSTMENT TO LOCAL FISCAL EFFORT IN CERTAIN FISCAL YEARS-
  - (i) AMOUNTS IN EXCESS- Notwithstanding clauses (ii) and (iii) of subparagraph (A), for any fiscal year for which the allocation received by a local educational agency under section 611(f) exceeds the amount the local educational agency received for the previous fiscal year, the local educational agency may reduce the level of expenditures otherwise required by subparagraph (A)(iii) by not more than 50 percent of the amount of such excess.
  - (ii) USE OF AMOUNTS TO CARRY OUT ACTIVITIES UNDER ESEA- If a local educational agency exercises the authority under clause (i), the agency shall use an amount of local funds equal to the reduction in expenditures under clause (i) to carry out activities authorized under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.
  - (iii) STATE PROHIBITION- Notwithstanding clause (i), if a State educational agency determines that a local educational agency is unable to establish and maintain programs of free appropriate public education that meet the requirements of subsection (a) or the State educational agency has taken action against the local educational agency under section 616, the State educational agency shall prohibit the local educational agency from reducing the level of expenditures under clause (i) for that fiscal year.
  - (iv) SPECIAL RULE- The amount of funds expended by a local educational agency under subsection (f) shall count toward the maximum amount of expenditures such local educational agency may reduce under clause (i).
- (D) SCHOOLWIDE PROGRAMS UNDER TITLE I OF THE ESEA- Notwithstanding subparagraph (A) or any other provision of this part, a local educational agency may use funds received under this part for any fiscal year to carry out a schoolwide program under section 1114 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, except that the amount so used in any such program shall not exceed--
  - (i) the number of children with disabilities participating in the schoolwide program; multiplied by
  - (ii)(I) the amount received by the local educational agency under this part for that fiscal year; divided by
  - (II) the number of children with disabilities in the jurisdiction of that agency.
- (3) PERSONNEL DEVELOPMENT- The local educational agency shall ensure that all personnel necessary to carry out this part are appropriately and adequately prepared, subject to the requirements of section 612(a)(14) and section 2122 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.
- (4) PERMISSIVE USE OF FUNDS-
  - (A) USES- Notwithstanding paragraph (2)(A) or section 612(a)(17)(B) (relating to commingled funds), funds provided to the local educational agency under this part may be used for the following activities:

- (i) SERVICES AND AIDS THAT ALSO BENEFIT NONDISABLED CHILDREN- For the costs of special education and related services, and supplementary aids and services, provided in a regular class or other education-related setting to a child with a disability in accordance with the individualized education program of the child, even if 1 or more nondisabled children benefit from such services.

The statement may include a description of any behavior engaged in by the child that required disciplinary action, a description of the disciplinary action taken, and any other information that is relevant to the safety of the child and other individuals involved with the child. - (1) any reduction or withholding of payments to the State shall be proportionate to the total funds allotted under section 611 to the State as the number of eligible children with disabilities in adult prisons under the supervision of the other public agency is proportionate to the number of eligible individuals with disabilities in the State under the supervision of the State educational agency; and

  - (2) INCREASE IN FUNDS- If the amount available for allocations to States under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year is equal to or greater than the amount allocated to the States under this section for the preceding fiscal year, those allocations shall be calculated as follows:
    - (A) ALLOCATION-

        - (III) allocate 15 percent of those remaining funds to States on the basis of the States' relative populations of all children aged 3 through 5 who are living in poverty.

(3) DECREASE IN FUNDS- If the amount available for allocations to States under paragraph (1) for a fiscal year is less than the amount allocated to the States under this section for the preceding fiscal year, those allocations shall be calculated as follows:

(A) ALLOCATIONS- If the amount available for allocations is greater than the amount allocated to the States for fiscal year 1997, each State shall be allocated the sum of--

(i) the amount the State received under this section for fiscal year 1997; and

(B) RATABLE REDUCTIONS- If the amount available for allocations is equal to or less than the amount allocated to the States for fiscal year 1997, each State shall be allocated the amount the State received for fiscal year 1997, ratably reduced, if necessary.

(2) ADMINISTRATION OF PART C- Funds described in paragraph (1) may also be used for the administration of part C.

(f) OTHER STATE-LEVEL ACTIVITIES- Each State shall use any funds the State reserves under subsection (d) and does not use for administration under subsection (e)--

(1) for support services (including establishing and implementing the mediation process required by section 615(e)), which may benefit children with disabilities younger than 3 or older than 5 as long as those services also benefit children with disabilities aged 3 through 5;

- (3) for activities at the State and local levels to meet the performance goals established by the State under section 612(a)(15);
- (4) to supplement other funds used to develop and implement a statewide coordinated services system designed to improve results for children and families, including children with disabilities and their families, but not more than 1 percent of the amount received by the State under this section for a fiscal year;

(g) SUBGRANTS TO LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES-

(1) SUBGRANTS REQUIRED- Each State that receives a grant under this section for any fiscal year shall distribute all of the grant funds that the State does not reserve under subsection (d) to local educational agencies in the State that have established their eligibility under section 613, as follows:

(A) BASE PAYMENTS- The State shall first award each local educational agency described in paragraph (1) the amount that agency would have received under this section for fiscal year 1997 if the State had distributed 75 percent of its grant for that year under section 619(c)(3), as such section was then in effect.

(B) ALLOCATION OF REMAINING FUNDS- After making allocations under subparagraph (A), the State shall--

- (i) allocate 85 percent of any remaining funds to those local educational agencies on the basis of the relative numbers of children enrolled in public and private elementary schools and secondary schools within the local educational agency's jurisdiction; and
- (ii) allocate 15 percent of those remaining funds to those local educational agencies in accordance with their relative numbers of children living in poverty, as determined by the State educational agency.

(2) REALLOCATION OF FUNDS- If a State educational agency determines that a local educational agency is adequately providing a free appropriate public education to all children with disabilities aged 3 through 5 residing in the area served by the local educational agency with State and local funds, the State educational agency may reallocate any portion of the funds under this section that are not needed by that local educational agency to provide a free appropriate public education to other local educational agencies in the State that are not adequately providing special education and related services to all children with disabilities aged 3 through 5 residing in the areas the other local educational agencies serve.

(h) PART C INAPPLICABLE- Part C does not apply to any child with a disability receiving a free appropriate public education, in accordance with this part, with funds received under this section.

AGENCY: Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services, Department of Education.

ACTION: Final regulations.

SUMMARY: The Secretary issues final regulations governing the Assistance to States for Education of Children with Disabilities Program and the Preschool Grants for Children with Disabilities Program. These regulations are needed to implement changes made to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, as amended by the Individuals with Disabilities Education Improvement Act of 2004 (Act or IDEA).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: These regulations implement changes in the regulations governing the Assistance to States for Education of Children with Disabilities Program and the Preschool Grants for Children with Disabilities Program necessitated by the reauthorization of the IDEA. With the issuance of these final regulations, part 301 has been removed and the regulations implementing the Preschool Grants for Children with Disabilities Program are included under subpart H of these final regulations.

On June 21, 2005, the Secretary published a notice of proposed rulemaking in the Federal Register (70 FR 35782) (NPRM) to amend the regulations governing the Assistance to States for Education of Children with Disabilities Program, the Preschool Grants for Children with Disabilities Program, and Service Obligations under Special Education Personnel Development to Improve Services and Results for Children with Disabilities. In the preamble to the NPRM, the Secretary discussed, on pages 35783 through 35819, the changes proposed to the regulations for these programs; specifically, the amendments to 34 CFR part 300, the removal of 34 CFR part 301 and relocation of those provisions to subpart H of 34 CFR part 300, and the amendments to 34 CFR part 304.

Final regulations for 34 CFR Part 304—Special Education-Personnel Development to Improve Services and Results for Children with Disabilities were published in the Federal Register (71 FR 32396) on June 5, 2006, and became effective July 5, 2006.

Major Changes in the Regulations

The following is a summary of the major substantive changes in these final regulations from the regulations proposed in the NPRM (the rationale for each of these changes is discussed in the Analysis of Comments and Changes section of this preamble):

Subpart A—GeneralDefinitions*

- The definition of child with a disability in § 300.8 has been revised as follows:

(1) Section 300.8(b) (Children aged three through nine experiencing developmental delays) has been changed to clarify that the use of the term “developmental delay” is subject to the conditions described in § 300.111(b).

(2) The definition of other health impairment in § 300.8(c)(9)(i) has been changed to add “Tourette Syndrome” to the list of chronic or acute health problems.

- The definition of excess costs in § 300.16 has been revised to clarify that the computation of excess costs may not include capital outlay and debt service. In addition, a new “Appendix A to Part 300—Excess Cost Calculation” has been added to provide a description (and an example) of how to calculate excess costs under the Act and these regulations.

- The definition of highly qualified special education teacher in § 300.18 has been revised, as follows:

(1) Section 300.18(b), regarding requirements for highly qualified special education teachers in general, has been modified to clarify that, when used with respect to any special education teacher teaching in a charter school, highly qualified means that the teacher meets the certification or licensing requirements, if any, set forth in the State’s public charter school law.

(2) A new § 300.18(e), regarding separate “high objective uniform State standards of evaluation” (HOUSSE), has been added to provide that a State may develop a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers, provided that any adaptations of the State’s HOUSSE would not establish a lower standard for the content knowledge requirements for special education teachers and meets all the requirements for a HOUSSE for regular education teachers. This provision also clarifies that a State may develop a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers, which may include single HOUSSE evaluations that cover multiple subjects.

(3) Section 300.18(g) (proposed § 300.18(f)) (“Applicability of definition to ESEA requirements; and clarification of new special education teacher”) has been revised as follows: (1) The heading has been revised, and (2) the language changed to clarify when a special education teacher is considered “new” for some purposes.

(4) Section 300.18(h) (proposed § 300.18(g)) has been modified to clarify that the highly qualified special education teacher requirements also do not apply to private school teachers hired or contracted by LEAs to provide equitable services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities under § 300.138.

- The definition of Indian and Indian tribe in § 300.21 has been changed to clarify that nothing in the definition is intended to indicate that the Secretary of the Interior is required to provide services or funding to a State Indian tribe that is not listed in the Federal Register list of Indian entities recognized as eligible to receive services from the United States, published pursuant to Section 104 of the Federally Recognized Indian Tribe List Act of 1994, 25 U.S.C. 479a-1.

- The definition of parent in § 300.30 has been revised to substitute “biological” for “natural” each time it appears in the definition, and to add language clarifying that to be considered a parent under this definition a “guardian” must be a person generally authorized to act as the child’s parent, or authorized to make educational decisions for the child.

- The definition of related services in § 300.34 has been revised as follows:

(1) Section 300.34(a) (General) has been modified to (A) add the statutory term “early identification and assessment of disabilities in children,” which was inadvertently omitted from the NPRM, (B) combine “school health services” and “school nurse services,” and (C) remove the clause relating to a free appropriate public education under “school nurse services” because it duplicates the clause in § 300.34(c)(13).

(2) Section 300.34(b) has been changed to (A) expand the title to read “Exception; services that apply to children with surgically implanted devices, including cochlear implants,” and (B) clarify, in new paragraph (b)(1), that related services do not include a medical device that is surgically implanted, the optimization of that device’s functioning (e.g., mapping), maintenance of that device, or the replacement of that device.

(3) A new § 300.34(b)(2) has been added to make clear that nothing in paragraph (b)(1) of § 300.34 (A) limits the right of a child with a surgically implanted device (e.g., a cochlear implant) to receive related services, as listed in § 300.34(a), that are determined by the IEP Team to be necessary for the child to receive FAPE; (B) limits the responsibility of a public agency to appropriately monitor and maintain medical devices that are needed to maintain the health and safety of the child, including breathing, nutrition, or operation of other bodily functions, while the child is transported to and from school or is at school; or (C) prevents the routine checking of an external component of a surgically-implanted device to make sure it is functioning properly, as required in § 300.113(b).

(4) The definition of interpreting services in § 300.34(c)(4) has been changed to clarify that the term includes (A) transcription services, such as communication access real-time translation (CART), C-Print, and TypeWell for children who are deaf or hard of hearing, and (B) special interpreting services for children who are deaf-blind.

(5) The definition of orientation and mobility services in § 300.34(c)(7) has been changed to remove the term “travel training instruction.” The term is under the definition of special education, and is defined in § 300.39(b)(4).

(6) The definition of school nurse services in 300.34(c)(13) has been expanded and re-named school health services and school nurse services. The expanded definition clarifies that “school nurse services” are provided by a qualified school nurse, and “school health services” may be provided by a qualified school nurse or other qualified person.

• A definition of scientifically based research has been added in new § 300.35 that incorporates by reference the definition of that term from the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, as amended, 20 U.S.C. 6301 et seq. (ESEA).

With the addition of the new definition in § 300.35, the definitions in subpart A, beginning with the definition of secondary school, have been renumbered.

• The definition of special education in § 300.39 (proposed § 300.38) has been revised to remove the definition of vocational and technical education that was included in proposed § 300.38(b)(6).

• The definition of supplementary aids and services in § 300.42 (proposed § 300.41) has been modified to specify that aids, services, and other supports are also provided to enable children with disabilities to participate in extracurricular and nonacademic settings.

Subpart B—State Eligibility

FAPE Requirements

• Section 300.101(c) has been revised to clarify that a free appropriate public education (FAPE) must be available to any individual child with a disability who needs special education and related services, even though the child has not failed or been retained in a course, and is advancing from grade to grade.

• Section 300.102(a)(3), regarding exceptions to FAPE, has been changed to clarify that a regular high school diploma does not include an alternative degree that is not fully aligned with the State’s academic standards, such as a certificate or a general educational development credential (GED).

• Section 300.105, regarding assistive technology and proper functioning of hearing aids, has been re-titled “Assistive technology,” and proposed paragraph (b), regarding the proper functioning of hearing aids, has been moved to new § 300.113(a).

• Section 300.107(a), regarding nonacademic services, has been revised to specify the steps each public agency must take, including the provision of supplementary aids and services determined appropriate and necessary by the child’s IEP Team, to provide nonacademic and extracurricular services and activities in the manner necessary to afford children with disabilities an equal opportunity for participation in those services and activities.

• Proposed § 300.108(a), regarding physical education services, has been revised to specify that physical education must be made available to all children with disabilities receiving FAPE, unless the public agency enrolls children without disabilities and does not provide physical education to children without disabilities in the same grades.

• A new § 300.113, regarding routine checking of hearing aids and external components of surgically implanted medical devices, has been added, as follows:

(1) Paragraph (a) of § 300.113 requires each public agency to ensure that hearing aids worn in school by children with hearing impairments, including deafness, are functioning properly.

(2) A new § 300.113(b)(1) requires each public agency to ensure that the external components of surgically implanted medical devices are functioning properly. However, new § 300.113(b)(2) has been added to make it clear that, for a child with a surgically implanted medical device who is receiving special education and related services, a public agency is not responsible for the post-surgical maintenance, programming, or replacement of the medical device that has been surgically implanted (or of an external component of the surgically implanted medical device).

Least Restrictive Environment

• Section 300.116(b)(3) and (c) regarding placements, has been revised to remove the qualification “unless the parent agrees otherwise” from the requirements that (1) the child’s placement be as close as possible to the child’s home, and (2) the child is educated in the school he or she would attend if not disabled.

• Section 300.117 (Nonacademic settings) has been changed to clarify that each public agency must ensure that each child with a disability has the supplementary aids and services determined by the child’s individualized education program (IEP) Team to be appropriate and necessary for the child to participate with nondisabled children in the extracurricular services and activities to the maximum extent appropriate to the needs of that child.

Children With Disabilities Enrolled by Their Parents in Private Schools

• Section 300.130 (definition of parentally-placed private school children with disabilities) has been revised to clarify that the term means children with disabilities enrolled by their parents in private, including religious, schools or facilities, that meet the definition of elementary school in § 300.13 or secondary school in § 300.36.

• A new § 300.131(f), regarding child find for out-of-State parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, has been added to clarify that each LEA in which private (including religious) elementary schools and secondary schools are located must include parentally-placed private school children who reside in a State other than the State in which the private schools that they attend are located.

- Section 300.133, regarding expenditures for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, has been revised, as follows:

(1) A new § 300.133(a)(2)(ii), has been added to clarify that children aged three through five are considered to be parentally-placed private school children with disabilities enrolled by their parents in private, including religious, elementary schools, if they are enrolled in a private school that meets the definition of elementary school in § 300.13.

(2) A new § 300.133(a)(3) has been added to specify that, if an LEA has not expended for equitable services for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities all of the applicable funds described in § 300.133(a)(1) and (a)(2) by the end of the fiscal year for which Congress appropriated the funds, the LEA must obligate the remaining funds for special education and related services (including direct services) to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities during a carry-over period of one additional year.

- Section 300.136, regarding compliance related to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, has been revised to remove the requirement that private school officials must submit complaints to the SEA using the procedures in §§ 300.151 through 300.153.

- Section 300.138(a), regarding the requirement that services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities must be provided by personnel meeting the same standards as personnel providing services in the public schools, has been modified to clarify that private elementary school and secondary school teachers who are providing equitable services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities do not have to meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements in § 300.18.

- Section 300.140, regarding due process complaints and State complaints, has been revised to make the following changes:

(1) Section 300.140(b)(1) (proposed § 300.140(a)(2)), regarding child find complaints, has been changed to clarify that the procedures in §§ 300.504 through 300.519 apply to complaints that an LEA has failed to meet the child

(2) A new paragraph (b)(2) has been added to provide that any due process complaint regarding the child find requirements (as described in § 300.140(b)(1)) must be filed with the LEA in which the private school is located and a copy of the complaint must be forwarded to the SEA.

(3) A new § 300.140(c), regarding State complaints by private school officials, has been added to clarify that (A) any complaint that an SEA or LEA has failed to meet the requirements in §§ 300.132 through 300.135 and 300.137 through 300.144 must be filed in accordance with the procedures described in §§ 300.151 through 300.153, and (B) a complaint filed by a private school official under § 300.136(a) must be filed with the SEA in accordance with the procedures in § 300.136(b).

- A new § 300.148(b), regarding disagreements about FAPE, has been added (from current § 300.403(b)) to clarify that disagreements between a parent and a public agency regarding the availability of a program appropriate for a child with a disability, and the question of financial reimbursement, are subject to the due process procedures in §§ 300.504 through 300.520.

State Complaint Procedures

- Section 300.152(a)(3)(ii) (proposed paragraph (a)(3)(B)) has been revised to clarify that each SEA's complaint procedures must provide the public agency with an opportunity to respond to a complaint filed under § 300.153, including, at a minimum, an opportunity for a parent who has filed a complaint and the public agency to voluntarily engage in mediation consistent with § 300.506.

- Section 300.152(b)(1)(ii), regarding time extensions for filing a State complaint, has been revised to clarify that it would be permissible to extend the 60-day timeline if the parent (or individual or organization if mediation or other alternative means of dispute resolution is available to the individual or organization under State procedures) and the public agency agree to engage in mediation or to engage in other alternative means of dispute resolution, if available in the State.

- Section 300.152(c), regarding complaints filed under § 300.152 and due process hearings under § 300.507 and §§ 300.530 through 300.532, has been revised to clarify that if a written complaint is received that is also the subject of a due process hearing under §§ 300.507 or 300.530 through 300.532, or contains multiple issues of which one or more are part of a due process hearing, the State must set aside any part of the complaint that is being addressed in the due process hearing until the conclusion of the hearing. However, any issue in the complaint that is not part of the due process hearing must be resolved using the time limit and procedures described elsewhere in the State complaint procedures. A new paragraph (c)(3) also has been added to require SEAs to resolve complaints alleging a public agency's failure to implement a due process hearing. This is the same requirement in current § 300.661(c)(3).

Methods of Ensuring Services

- Section 300.154(d), regarding children with disabilities who are covered by public benefits or insurance, has been revised to clarify that the public agency must (1) obtain parental consent each time that access to the parent's public benefits or insurance is sought, and (2) notify parents that refusal to allow access to their public benefits or insurance does not relieve the public agency of its responsibility to ensure that all required services are provided at no cost to the parents.

Additional Eligibility Requirements

- Section 300.156(e), regarding personnel qualifications, has been revised (1) to add "or a class of students," to clarify that a judicial action on behalf of a class of students may not be filed for failure of a particular SEA or LEA employee to be highly qualified, and (2) to substitute the word "employee" for "staff person," to be more precise in the rule of construction in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)).

- Section 300.160 (participation in assessments) has been removed, and the section has been designated as "Reserved." Participation in assessments is the subject of a new notice of proposed rulemaking issued on December 15, 2005 (70 FR 74624) to amend the regulations governing programs under Title I of the ESEA and Part B of the IDEA regarding additional flexibility for States to measure the achievement of children with disabilities based on modified achievement standards.

- A new § 300.177 has been added to include a provision regarding “States’ sovereign immunity.” That provision, which has been added to incorporate the language in section 604 of the Act, makes clear that a State that accepts funds under Part B of the Act waives its immunity under the 11th amendment of the Constitution of the United States from suit in Federal court for a violation of Part B of the Act.

(5) A new § 300.300(d)(4) has been added to provide that if a parent of a child who is home schooled or placed in a private school by the parent at the parent’s expense, does not provide consent for an initial evaluation or a reevaluation, or the parent fails to respond to a request to provide consent, the public agency (A) may not use the consent override procedures (described elsewhere in § 300.300), and (B) is not required to consider the child eligible for services under the requirements relating to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities (§§ 300.132 through 300.144).

(6) A new § 300.300(d)(5) has been added to clarify that in order for a public agency to meet the reasonable efforts requirement to obtain informed parental consent for an initial evaluation, initial services, or a reevaluation, a public agency must document its attempts to obtain parental consent using the procedures in § 300.322(d).

Additional Procedures for Evaluating Children With Specific Learning Disabilities (SLD)

- Section 300.307 (Specific learning disabilities) has been revised, as follows:

(1) Proposed paragraph (a)(1) of § 300.307, which allowed a State to prohibit the use of a severe discrepancy between intellectual ability and achievement for determining if a child has an SLD, has been removed, and

(2) Section 300.309(b) has been changed to clarify (A) that, in order to ensure that underachievement in a child suspected of having an SLD is not due to lack of appropriate instruction in reading or math, the group must consider, as part of the evaluation described in §§ 300.304 through 300.306, data that demonstrate that prior to, or as a part of, the referral process, the child was provided appropriate instruction in regular education settings, delivered by qualified personnel, and (B) to replace (in paragraph (b)(1)) the term “high quality research-based instruction” with “appropriate instruction.”

(3) Section 300.309(c) has been changed to provide that the public agency must promptly request parental

(2) Proposed § 300.311(a)(6), regarding whether there are strengths or weaknesses or both in performance or achievement or both relative to intellectual development, has been removed.

- Section 300.322, regarding parent participation, has been revised to: (1) Include, in § 300.322(d), examples of the records a public agency must keep of its attempts to involve the parents in IEP meetings; (2) add a new § 300.322(e), which requires the public agency to take whatever action is necessary to ensure that the parent understands the proceedings of the IEP meeting, including arranging for an interpreter for parents with deafness or whose native language is other than English; and (3) redesignate paragraph (e) as paragraph (f) accordingly.

- Section 300.323(d) has been revised to require public agencies to ensure that each regular teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and any other service provider who is responsible for the implementation of a child’s IEP, is informed of his or her specific responsibilities related to implementing the child’s IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports that must be provided for the child in accordance with the child’s IEP. These are the same requirements in current § 300.342(b)(3)(i) and (b)(3)(ii).

- Section 300.323(e), regarding IEPs for children who transfer public agencies, has been revised to: (1) Divide

(1) A new § 300.502(b)(5) has been added to make clear that a parent is entitled to only one independent educational evaluation at public expense each time the public agency conducts an evaluation with which the parent disagrees.

(2) Section 300.502(c) has been changed to clarify that if a parent obtains an independent evaluation at public expense or shares with the public agency an evaluation obtained at private expense, the public agency must consider the evaluation, if it meets agency criteria, in any decision made with respect to the provision of FAPE to the child.

(1) Paragraph (a)(2) of § 300.504 has been changed to add that a copy of the procedural safeguards notice must be given upon receipt of the first due process complaint under § 300.507 in a school year, as well as upon receipt of the first State complaint under § 300.151 through 300.153.

- Section 300.510 (Resolution process) has been revised, as follows:

(1) Section 300.510(b)(1), regarding the resolution period, has been changed to state that a due process hearing “may occur” (in lieu of “must occur”) by the end of the resolution period, if the parties have not resolved the dispute that formed the basis for the due process complaint.

(2) A new § 300.510(b)(3) has been added to provide that, except where the parties have jointly agreed to waive the resolution process or to use mediation (notwithstanding § 300.510(b)(1) and (2)), the failure of a parent filing a due process complaint to participate in the resolution meeting will delay the timelines for the resolution process and due process hearing until the meeting is held.

(3) A new § 300.510(b)(4) has been added to provide that if an LEA is unable to obtain the participation of the parent in the resolution meeting after reasonable efforts have been made, and documented using the procedures in § 300.322(d), the LEA may, at the conclusion of the 30-day resolution period, request that a hearing officer dismiss the parent’s due process complaint.

(4) A new paragraph (b)(5) of § 300.510 has been added to provide that, if the LEA fails to hold the resolution meeting within 15 days of receiving notice of a parent’s due

(5) A new § 300.510(c) (Adjustments to the 30-day resolution period) has been added that specifies exceptions to the 30-day resolution period (e.g., (A) both parties agree in writing to waive the resolution meeting; (B) after either the mediation or resolution meeting starts but before the end of the 30-day period, the parties agree in writing that no agreement is possible; or (C) if both parties agree in writing to continue the mediation at the end of the 30-day resolution period, but later, the parent or public agency withdraws from the mediation process). Subsequent paragraphs have been renumbered accordingly.

(6) Paragraph (d)(2) of § 300.510 (proposed paragraph(c)(2)), regarding the enforceability of a written settlement agreement in any State court of competent jurisdiction or in a district court of the United States, has been expanded to add the SEA, if the State has other mechanisms or procedures that permit parties to seek enforcement of resolution agreements, pursuant to a new § 300.537.

- Section 300.513(a) (Decision of hearing officer) has been revised by (1) changing the paragraph title to read “Decision of hearing officer on the provision of FAPE,” and (2) clarifying that a hearing officer’s determination of whether a child received FAPE must be based on substantive grounds.

- Section 300.516(b), regarding the 90-day time limitation from the date of the decision of the hearing to file a civil action, has been revised to provide that the 90-day period begins from the date of the decision of the hearing officer or the decision of the State review official.

- Section 300.518 (Child’s status during proceedings) has been revised by adding a new paragraph (c), which provides that if a complaint involves an application for initial services under this part from a child who is transitioning from Part C of the Act to Part B and is no longer eligible for Part C services because the child has turned 3, the public agency is not required to provide the Part C services that the child had been receiving. If the child is found eligible for special education and related services under Part B and the parent consents to the initial provision of special education and related services under § 300.300(b), then the public agency must provide those special education and related services that are not in dispute between the parent and the public agency.

- Section 300.520(b), regarding a special rule about the transfer of parental rights at the age of majority, has been revised to more clearly state that a State must establish procedures for appointing the parent of a child with a disability, or if the parent is not available, another appropriate individual, to represent the educational interests of the child throughout the child’s eligibility under Part B of the Act if, under State law, a child who has reached the age of majority, but has not been determined to be incompetent, can be determined not to have the ability to provide informed consent with respect to the child’s educational program.

- Section 300.530(d)(5), regarding removals that constitute a change of placement under § 300.536, has been revised to remove the reference to the IEP Team determining the location in which services will be provided.

- A new § 300.530(e)(3), has been added to provide that, if the LEA, the parent, and members of the child’s IEP Team determine that the child’s behavior was the direct result of the LEA’s failure to implement the child’s IEP, the LEA must take immediate steps to remedy those deficiencies.

- Section 300.530(h), regarding notification, has been changed to specify that, on the date on which a decision is made to make a removal that constitutes a change in the placement of a child with a disability because of a violation of a code of student conduct, the LEA must notify the parents of that decision, and provide the parents the procedural safeguards notice described in § 300.504.

- Section 300.532 (Appeal) has been revised, as follows:

(1) Paragraph (a) of § 300.532, regarding the conditions in which the parent of a child with a disability or an LEA may request a hearing, has been

(4) Proposed § 300.532(c)(4), regarding the two-day timeframe for disclosing information to the opposing party prior to an expedited due process hearing, has been removed.

- Section 500.536(a)(2)(ii) (proposed § 300.536(b)(2)) has been revised to remove the requirement that a child's behavior must have been a manifestation of the child's disability before determining that a series of removals constitutes a change in placement under § 300.536. Paragraph (a)(2)(ii) has also been amended to reference the child's behavior in "previous" incidents that resulted in the series of removals.

- A new § 300.536(b) has been added to clarify that the public agency (subject to review through the due process and judicial proceedings) makes the determination, on a case-by-case basis, whether a pattern of removals constitutes a change in placement and that the determination is subject to review through due process and judicial determinations.

- A new § 300.537 (State enforcement mechanisms) has been added to clarify that notwithstanding § 300.506(b)(7) and § 300.510(c)(2), which provide for judicial enforcement of a written agreement reached as a result of a mediation or resolution meeting, nothing in this part would prevent the SEA from using other mechanisms to seek enforcement of that agreement, provided that use of those mechanisms is not mandatory and does not delay or deny a party the right to seek enforcement of the written agreement in a State court of competent jurisdiction or in a district court of the United States.

Subpart F—Monitoring, Enforcement, Confidentiality, and Program Information

- A new § 300.608(b), regarding State enforcement, has been added to specify that States are not restricted from utilizing any other authority available to them to monitor and enforce the requirements of Part B of the Act.

Confidentiality of Information

- Section 300.622 (Consent) has been restructured and revised to more accurately reflect the Department's policy regarding when parental consent is required for disclosures of personally identifiable information, as follows:

(1) Paragraph (a) of § 300.622 has been changed to provide that parental consent must be obtained before personally identifiable information is disclosed to parties other than officials of participating agencies, unless the information is contained in education records, and the disclosure is authorized without parental consent under the regulations for the Family Educational

Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA, 34 CFR part 99).

(2) A new § 300.622(b)(1) has been added to clarify that parental consent is not required before personally identifiable information is released to officials of participating agencies for purposes of meeting a requirement of Part B of the Act or these regulations.

(3) A new § 300.622(b)(2) has been added to provide that parental consent must be obtained before personally identifiable information is released to officials of participating agencies that provide or pay for transition services.

(4) A new paragraph (b)(3) has been added to require that, with respect to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities, parental consent must be obtained before any personally identifiable information is released between officials in the LEA where the private school is located and the LEA of the parent's residence.

(5) Proposed § 300.622(c), regarding the requirement to provide policies and procedures for use in the event that a parent refuses to consent, has been removed because it is covered elsewhere in these regulations.

Subpart G—Authorization, Allotment, Use of Funds, and Authorization of Appropriations

Allotments, Grants, and Use of Funds

- Section 300.701(a)(1)(ii)(A), regarding the applicable requirements of Part B of the Act that apply to freely associated States, has been revised by removing the five listed requirements because those requirements did not include all requirements that apply to freely associated States. This change clarifies that freely associated States must meet the applicable requirements that apply to States under Part B of the Act.

- Section 300.704(c)(3)(i), regarding the requirement to develop, annually review, and revise (if necessary) a State plan for the high cost fund, has been revised to add a new paragraph (F) that requires that if the State elects to reserve funds for supporting innovative and effective ways of cost sharing, it must describe in its State plan how these funds will be used.

- Section 300.706 (Allocation for State in which by-pass is implemented for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities) has been removed because it is no longer applicable. The section has been redesignated as "Reserved."

Secretary of the Interior

- Section 300.707 (Use of amounts by Secretary of the Interior) has been changed, as follows:

(1) The definition of Tribal governing body of a school has been replaced with the definition of tribal governing body from 25 U.S.C. 2021(19).

(2) Section 300.707(c), regarding an additional requirement under “Use of amounts by Secretary of the Interior,” has been revised to clarify that, with respect to all other children aged 3 to 21, inclusive, on reservations, the SEA of the State in which the reservation is located must ensure that all the requirements of Part B of the Act are met.

- Section 300.713 (Plan for coordination of services) has been revised to require (1) in § 300.713(a), the Secretary of the Interior to develop and implement a plan for the coordination of services for all Indian children with disabilities residing on reservations served by elementary schools and secondary schools for Indian children operated or funded by the Secretary of the Interior, and (2) in § 300.713(b), the plan to provide for the coordination of services benefiting these children from whatever source covered by the plan, including SEAs, and State, local, and tribal juvenile and adult correctional facilities.

Analysis of Comments and Changes

Introduction

In response to the invitation in the NPRM, more than 5,500 parties submitted comments on the proposed regulations. An analysis of the comments and of the changes in the regulations since publication of the NPRM immediately follows this introduction.

The perspectives of parents, individuals with disabilities, teachers, related services providers, State and local officials, members of Congress, and others were very important in helping us to identify where changes to the proposed regulations were necessary, and in formulating many of the changes. In light of the comments received, a number of significant changes are reflected in these final regulations.

We discuss substantive issues under the subpart and section to which they pertain. References to subparts in this analysis are to those contained in the final regulations. The analysis generally does not address—

(a) Minor changes, including technical changes made to the language published in the NPRM;

(b) Suggested changes the Secretary is not legally authorized to make under applicable statutory authority; and

(c) Comments that express concerns of a general nature about the Department or other matters that are not directly relevant to these regulations, such as requests for information about innovative instructional methods or matters that are within the purview of State and local decision-makers.

Subpart A—General

Definitions Used in This Part

Applicability of This Part to State and Local Agencies (§ 300.2)

Comment: None.

Discussion: Section § 300.2(c)(2) contains an incorrect reference to § 300.148(b). The correct reference should be to § 300.148.

Changes: We have removed the reference to § 300.148(b) and replaced it with a reference to § 300.148.

Assistive Technology Device (§ 300.5)

Comment: Some commenters opposed the exclusion of surgically implanted medical devices in the definition of assistive technology device. Another commenter recommended limiting the definition of assistive technology device to a device that is needed to achieve educational outcomes, rather than requiring local educational agencies (LEAs) to pay for any assistive technology device that increases, maintains, or improves any functional need of the child.

Discussion: The definition of assistive technology device in § 300.5 incorporates the definition in section 602(1)(B) of the Act. We do not believe the definition should be changed in the manner suggested by the commenters because the changes are inconsistent with the statutory definition. The definition in the Act specifically refers to any item, piece of equipment, or product system that is used to increase, maintain, or improve the functional capabilities of the child and specifically excludes a medical device that is surgically implanted or the replacement of such device. Accordingly, we continue to believe it is appropriate to exclude surgically implanted medical devices from this definition. In response to the second comment, § 300.105(a) requires each public agency to ensure that assistive technology devices (or assistive technology services, or both) are made available to a child with a disability if required as part of the child’s special education, related services, or supplementary aids and services. This provision ties the definition to a child’s educational needs, which public agencies must meet in order to ensure that a child with a disability receives a free appropriate public education (FAPE).

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested that the regulations clarify that an assistive technology device is not synonymous with an augmentative communication device. A few commenters recommended including recordings for the blind and dyslexic playback devices in the definition of assistive technology devices. Some commenters recommended including language in the regulations clarifying that medical devices used for breathing, nutrition, and other bodily functions are assistive technology devices.

Discussion: The definition of assistive technology device does not list specific devices, nor would it be practical or possible to include an exhaustive list of assistive technology devices. Whether an augmentative communication device, playback devices, or other devices could be considered an assistive technology device for a child depends on whether the device is used to increase, maintain, or improve the functional capabilities of a child with a disability, and whether the child’s individualized education program (IEP) Team determines that the child needs the device in order to receive a free appropriate public education (FAPE). However, medical devices that are surgically implanted, including those used for breathing, nutrition, and other bodily functions, are excluded from the definition of an assistive technology device in section 602(1)(B) of the Act. The exclusion applicable to a medical device that is surgically implanted includes both the implanted component of the device, as well as its external components.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters asked whether the definition of assistive technology device includes an internet-based instructional program, and what the relationship is between internet-based instructional programs and specially-designed instruction.

Discussion: An instructional program is not a device, and, therefore, would not meet the definition of an assistive technology device. Whether an internet-based instructional program is appropriate for a particular child is determined by the child’s IEP Team, which would determine whether the program is needed in order for the child to receive FAPE.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended including the proper functioning of hearing aids in the definition of assistive technology device.

Discussion: We believe that the provision requiring public agencies to ensure that hearing aids worn in school are functioning properly is more appropriately included in new § 300.113 (proposed § 300.105(b)). As noted in the Analysis of Comments and Changes section discussing subpart B, we have added a new § 300.113 to address the routine checking (i.e., making sure they are turned on and working) of hearing aids and external components of surgically implanted devices.

Changes: None.

Assistive Technology Service (§ 300.6)

Comment: One commenter requested clarifying “any service” in the definition of assistive technology service.

Discussion: We believe the definition is clear that an assistive technology service is any service that helps a child with a disability select an appropriate assistive technology device, obtain the device, or train the child to use the device.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that services necessary to support the use of playback devices for recordings for the blind and dyslexic should be added to the definition of assistive technology service.

Discussion: A service to support the use of recordings for the blind and dyslexic on playback devices could be considered an assistive technology service if it assists a child with a disability in the selection, acquisition, or use of the device. If so, and if the child’s IEP Team determines it is needed for the child to receive FAPE, the service would be provided. The definition of assistive technology service does not list specific services. We do not believe it is practical or possible to include an exhaustive list of assistive technology services, and therefore, decline to add the specific assistive technology service recommended by the commenter to the definition.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended evaluating all children with speech or hearing disabilities to determine if they can benefit from the Federal Communications Commission’s specialized telephone assistive services for people with disabilities.

Discussion: Evaluations under section 614 of the Act are for the purpose of determining whether a child has a disability and because of that disability needs special education and related services, and for determining the child’s special education and related services needs. It would be inappropriate under the Act to require evaluations for other purposes or to require an evaluation for telephone assistive services for all children with speech and hearing disabilities. However, if it was determined that learning to use telephone assisted services, was an important skill for a particular child (e.g., as part of a transition plan), it would be appropriate to conduct an evaluation of that particular child to determine if the child needed specialized instruction in order to use such services.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested that the definition of assistive technology service specifically exclude a medical device that is surgically implanted, the optimization of device functioning, maintenance of the device, and the replacement of the device.

Discussion: The definition of related services in § 300.34(b) specifically excludes a medical device that is surgically implanted, the optimization of device functioning, maintenance of the device, or the replacement of that device. In addition, the definition of assistive technology device in § 300.5 specifically excludes a medical device that is surgically implanted and the replacement of that device. We believe it is unnecessary to repeat these exclusions in the definition of assistive technology service.

Changes: None.

Charter School (§ 300.7)

Comment: Several commenters suggested that we include in the regulations the definitions of terms that are defined in other statutes. For example, one commenter requested including the definition of charter school in the regulations.

Discussion: Including the actual definitions of terms that are defined in statutes other than the Act is problematic because these definitions may change over time (i.e., through changes to statutes that establish the definitions). In order for these regulations to retain their accuracy over time, the U.S. Department of Education (Department) would need to amend the regulations each time an included definition that is defined in another statute changes. The Department believes that this could result in significant confusion.

However, we are including the current definition of charter school in section 5210(1) of the ESEA here for reference.

The term charter school means a public school that:

1. In accordance with a specific State statute authorizing the granting of charters to schools, is exempt from significant State or local rules that inhibit the flexible operation and management of public schools, but not from any rules relating to the other requirements of this paragraph [the paragraph that sets forth the Federal definition];

2. Is created by a developer as a public school, or is adapted by a developer from an existing public school, and is operated under public supervision and direction;

3. Operates in pursuit of a specific set of educational objectives determined by the school’s developer and agreed to by the authorized public chartering agency;

4. Provides a program of elementary or secondary education, or both;

5. Is nonsectarian in its programs, admissions policies, employment practices, and all other operations, and is not affiliated with a sectarian school or religious institution;

6. Does not charge tuition;

7. Complies with the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, and Part B of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act;

8. Is a school to which parents choose to send their children, and that admits students on the basis of a lottery, if more students apply for admission than can be accommodated;

9. Agrees to comply with the same Federal and State audit requirements as do other elementary schools and secondary schools in the State, unless such requirements are specifically waived for the purpose of this program [the Public Charter School Program];

10. Meets all applicable Federal, State, and local health and safety requirements;

11. Operates in accordance with State law; and

12. Has a written performance contract with the authorized public chartering agency in the State that includes a description of how student performance will be measured in charter schools pursuant to State assessments that are required of other schools and pursuant to any other assessments mutually agreeable to the authorized public chartering agency and the charter school.

Changes: None.

Child With a Disability (§ 300.8) General (§ 300.8(a))

Comment: Several commenters stated that many children with fetal alcohol syndrome (FAS) do not receive special education and related services and recommended adding a disability category for children with FAS to help solve this problem.

Discussion: We believe that the existing disability categories in section

602(3) of the Act and in these regulations are sufficient to include children with FAS who need special education and related services. Special education and related services are based on the identified needs of the child and not on the disability category in which the child is classified. We, therefore, do not believe that adding a separate disability category for children with FAS is necessary to ensure that children with FAS receive the special education and related services designed to meet their unique needs resulting from FAS.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters suggested that the definition of child with a disability be changed to “student with a disability” and that the word “student,” rather than “child,” be used throughout the regulations because students over the age of 18 are not children.

Discussion: Section 602(3) of the Act defines child with a disability, not student with a disability. Therefore, we do not believe it is appropriate to change the definition as requested by the commenters. The words “child” and “student” are used throughout the Act and we generally have used the word “child” or “children,” except when referring to services and activities for older students (e.g., transition services, postsecondary goals).

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters supported § 300.8(a)(2), which states that if a child needs only a related service and not special education, the child is not a child with a disability under the Act. Another commenter recommended a single standard for the provision of a related service as special education, rather than allowing States to determine whether a related service is special education.

Discussion: Section 300.8(a)(2)(i) states that if a child has one of the disabilities listed in § 300.8(a)(1), but only needs a related service, the child is not a child with a disability under the Act. However, § 300.8(a)(2)(ii) provides that, if a State considers a particular service that could be encompassed by the definition of related services also to be special education, then the child would be determined to be a child with a disability under the Act. We believe it is important that States have the flexibility to determine whether, consistent with the definition of the term special education in section 602(29) of the Act and new § 300.39 (proposed § 300.38), such a service should be regarded as special education and to identify a child who needs that service as a child with a disability. States are in the best position to determine whether a service that is included in the definition of related services should also be considered special education in that State.

Changes: None.

Comment: None.

Discussion: Section § 300.8(a)(2)(ii) contains an incorrect reference to § 300.38(a)(2). The correct reference should be to § 300.39(a)(2).

Changes: We have removed the reference to § 300.38(a)(2) and replaced it with a reference to § 300.39(a)(2).

Children Aged Three Through Nine Experiencing Developmental Delays (§ 300.8(b))

Comment: Several commenters expressed support for allowing LEAs to select a subset of the age range from three through nine for their definition of developmental delay. A few commenters recommended clarifying that States, not the LEAs, define the age range of children eligible under this category of developmental delay.

Discussion: Section 300.8(b) states that the use of the developmental delay category for a child with a disability aged three through nine, or any subset of that age range, must be made in accordance with § 300.111(b). Section 300.111(b) gives States the option of adopting a definition of developmental delay, but does not require an LEA to adopt and use the term. However, if an LEA uses the category of developmental delay, the LEA must conform to both the State’s definition of the term and the age range that has been adopted by the State. If a State does not adopt the category of developmental delay, an LEA may not use that category as the basis for establishing a child’s eligibility for special education and related services.

Based on the comments, it appears that § 300.8(b) has been misinterpreted as stating that LEAs are allowed to establish the age range for defining developmental delay independent of the State. We believe it is important to avoid such confusion and, therefore, will modify § 300.8(b) to clarify the provision.

Changes: For clarity, we have removed the phrase, “at the discretion of the State and LEA in accordance with § 300.111(b)” and replaced it with “subject to the conditions in § 300.111(b).”

Deafness (§ 300.8(c)(3))

Comment: One commenter stated that children who are hard of hearing are often denied special education and related services because the definition of deafness includes the phrase, “adversely affects a child’s educational performance,” which school district personnel interpret to mean that the child must be failing in school to receive special education and related services.

Discussion: As noted in the Analysis of Comments and Changes section discussing subpart B, we have clarified in § 300.101(c) that a child does not have to fail or be retained in a course or grade in order to be considered for special education and related services. However, in order to be a child with a disability under the Act, a child must have one or more of the impairments identified in section 602(3) of the Act and need special education and related services because of that impairment. Given the change in § 300.101(c), we do not believe clarification in § 300.8(c)(3) is necessary.

Changes: None.

Emotional Disturbance (§ 300.8(c)(4))

Comment: Numerous commenters requested defining or eliminating the term “socially maladjusted” in the definition of emotional disturbance stating that there is no accepted definition of the term, and no valid or reliable instruments or methods to identify children who are, or are not, “socially maladjusted.” Some commenters stated that children who need special education and related services have been denied these services, or have been inappropriately identified under other disability categories and received inappropriate services because the definition of emotional disturbance excludes children who are socially maladjusted. One commenter stated that using the term “socially maladjusted” contributes to the negative image of children with mental illness and does a disservice to children with mental illness and those who seek to understand mental illness.

One commenter stated that emotional disturbance is one of the most misused and misunderstood disability categories and is often improperly used to protect dangerous and aggressive children who violate the rights of others. The commenter stated that the definition of emotional disturbance is vague and offers few objective criteria to differentiate an emotional disability from ordinary development, and requires the exclusion of conditions in which the child has the ability to control his or her behavior, but chooses to violate social norms.

One commenter recommended adding autism to the list of factors in § 300.8(c)(4)(i)(A) that must be ruled out before making an eligibility determination based on emotional disturbance. The commenter stated that many children with autism are inappropriately placed in alternative educational programs designed for children with serious emotional and behavioral problems.

Discussion: Historically, it has been very difficult for the field to come to consensus on the definition of emotional disturbance, which has remained unchanged since 1977. On February 10, 1993, the Department published a "Notice of Inquiry" in the Federal Register (58 FR 7938) soliciting comments on the existing definition of serious emotional disturbance. The comments received in response to the notice of inquiry expressed a wide range of opinions and no consensus on the definition was reached. Given the lack of consensus and the fact that Congress did not make any changes that required changing the definition, the Department recommended that the definition of emotional disturbance remain unchanged. We reviewed the Act and the comments received in response to the NPRM and have come to the same conclusion. Therefore, we decline to make any changes to the definition of emotional disturbance.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter suggested that the regulations include a process to identify children who are at risk for having an emotional disturbance.

Discussion: We decline to include a process to identify children who are at risk for having an emotional disturbance. A child who is at risk for having any disability under the Act is not considered a child with a disability under § 300.8 and section 602(3) of the Act and, therefore, is not eligible for services under the Act.

Changes: None.

Mental Retardation (§ 300.8(c)(6))

Comment: One commenter suggested using the term "intellectual disability" in place of "mental retardation" because "intellectual disability" is a more acceptable term. The commenter also stated that the definition of mental retardation is outdated, and should, instead, address a child's functional limitations in specific life areas.

Discussion: Section 602(3)(A) of the Act refers to a "child with mental retardation," not a "child with intellectual disabilities," and we do not see a compelling reason to change the term. However, States are free to use a different term to refer to a child with mental retardation, as long as all children who would be eligible for special education and related services under the Federal definition of mental retardation receive FAPE.

We do not believe the definition of mental retardation needs to be changed because it is defined broadly enough in § 300.8(c)(6) to include a child's functional limitations in specific life areas, as requested by the commenter. There is nothing in the Act or these regulations that would prevent a State from including "functional limitations in specific life areas" in a State's definition of mental retardation, as long as the State's definition is consistent with these regulations.

Changes: None.

Multiple Disabilities (§ 300.8(c)(7))

Comment: One commenter asked why the category of multiple disabilities is included in the regulations when it is not in the Act.

Discussion: The definition of multiple disabilities has been in the regulations since 1977 and does not expand eligibility beyond what is provided for in the Act. The definition helps ensure that children with more than one disability are not counted more than once for the annual report of children served because States do not have to decide among two or more disability categories in which to count a child with multiple disabilities.

Changes: None.

Orthopedic Impairment (§ 300.8(c)(8))

Comment: One commenter requested that the examples of congenital anomalies in the definition of orthopedic impairment in current § 300.7(c)(8) be retained.

Discussion: The examples of congenital anomalies in current § 300.7(c)(8) are outdated and unnecessary to understand the meaning of orthopedic impairment. We, therefore, decline to include the examples in § 300.8(c)(8).

Changes: None.

Other Health Impairment (§ 300.8(c)(9))

Comment: We received a significant number of comments requesting that we include other examples of specific acute or chronic health conditions in the definition of other health impairment. A few commenters recommended including children with dysphagia because these children have a swallowing and feeding disorder that affects a child's vitality and alertness due to limitations in nutritional intake. Other commenters recommended including FAS, bipolar disorders, and organic neurological disorders. Numerous commenters requested including Tourette syndrome disorders in the definition of other health impairment because children with Tourette syndrome are frequently misclassified as emotionally disturbed. A number of commenters stated that Tourette syndrome is a neurological disorder and not an emotional disorder, yet children with Tourette syndrome continue to be viewed as having a behavioral or conduct disorder and, therefore, do not receive appropriate special education and related services.

Discussion: The list of acute or chronic health conditions in the definition of other health impairment is not exhaustive, but rather provides examples of problems that children have that could make them eligible for special education and related services under the category of other health impairment. We decline to include dysphagia, FAS, bipolar disorders, and other organic neurological disorders in the definition of other health impairment because these conditions are commonly understood to be health impairments. However, we do believe that Tourette syndrome is commonly misunderstood to be a behavioral or emotional condition, rather than a neurological condition. Therefore, including Tourette syndrome in the definition of other health impairment may help correct the misperception of Tourette syndrome as a behavioral or conduct disorder and prevent the misdiagnosis of their needs.

Changes: We have added Tourette syndrome as an example of an acute or chronic health problem in § 300.8(c)(9)(i).

Comment: A few commenters expressed concern about determining a child's eligibility for special education services under the category of other health impairment based on conditions that are not medically determined health problems, such as "central auditory processing disorders" or "sensory integration disorders." One commenter recommended that the regulations clarify that "chronic or acute health problems" refer to health problems that are universally recognized by the medical profession.

Discussion: We cannot make the change requested by the commenters. The determination of whether a child is eligible to receive special education and related services is made by a team of qualified professionals and the parent of the child, consistent with § 300.306(a)(1) and section 614(b)(4) of the Act. The team of qualified professionals and the parent of the child must base their decision on careful consideration of information from a variety of sources, consistent with § 300.306(c). There is nothing in the Act that requires the team of qualified professionals and the parent to consider only health problems that are universally recognized by the medical profession, as requested by the commenters. Likewise, there is nothing in the Act that would prevent a State from requiring a medical evaluation for eligibility under other health impairment, provided the medical evaluation is conducted at no cost to the parent.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the category of other health impairment is one of the most rapidly expanding eligibility categories because the definition is vague, confusing, and redundant. The commenter noted that the definition of other health impairment includes terms such as “alertness” and “vitality,” which are difficult to measure objectively.

Discussion: We believe that the definition of other health impairment is generally understood and that the group of qualified professionals and the parent responsible for determining whether a child is a child with a disability are able to use the criteria in the definition and appropriately identify children who need special education and related services. Therefore, we decline to change the definition.

Changes: None.

Specific Learning Disability (§ 300.8(c)(10))

Comment: One commenter recommended changing the definition of specific learning disability to refer to a child’s response to scientific, research-based intervention as part of the procedures for evaluating children with disabilities, consistent with § 300.307(a). A few commenters recommended aligning the definition of specific learning disability with the requirements for determining eligibility in § 300.309.

One commenter recommended using the word “disability,” instead of “disorder,” and referring to specific learning disabilities as a “disability in one or more of the basic psychological processes.” A few commenters stated that the terms “developmental aphasia” and “minimal brain dysfunction” are antiquated and should be removed from the definition. A few commenters questioned using “imperfect ability” in the definition because it implies that a child with minor problems in listening, thinking, speaking, reading, writing, spelling, or calculating math could be determined to have a specific learning disability.

Discussion: The definition of specific learning disability is consistent with the procedures for evaluating and determining the eligibility of children suspected of having a specific learning disability in §§ 300.307 through 300.311. We do not believe it is necessary to repeat these procedures in the definition of specific learning disability.

Section 602(30) of the Act refers to a “disorder” in one or more of the basic psychological processes and not to a “disability” in one or more of the basic psychological processes. We believe it would be inconsistent with the Act to change “disorder” to “disability,” as recommended by one commenter. We do not believe that the terms “developmental aphasia” and “minimal brain dysfunction” should be removed from the definition. Although the terms may not be as commonly used as “specific learning disability,” the terms continue to be used and we see no harm in retaining them in the definition. We do not agree that the phrase “imperfect ability” implies that a child has a minor problem and, therefore, decline to change this phrase in the definition of specific learning disability.

Changes: None.

Comment: We received several requests to revise the definition of specific learning disability to include specific disabilities or disorders that are often associated with specific learning disabilities, including Aspergers syndrome, FAS, auditory processing disorders, and nonverbal learning disabilities.

Discussion: Children with many types of disabilities or disorders may also have a specific learning disability. It is not practical or feasible to include all the different disabilities that are often associated with a specific learning disability. Therefore, we decline to add these specific disorders or disabilities to the definition of specific learning disability.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters suggested clarifying the word “cultural” in § 300.8(c)(10)(ii) to clarify that cultural disadvantage or language cannot be the basis for determining that a child has a disability.

Discussion: We believe the term “cultural” is generally understood and do not see a need for further clarification. We also do not believe that it is necessary to clarify that language cannot be the basis for determining whether a child has a specific learning disability. Section 300.306(b)(1)(iii), consistent with section 614(b)(5)(C) of the Act, clearly states that limited English proficiency cannot be the basis for determining a child to be a child with a disability under any of the disability categories in § 300.8.

Changes: None.

Consent (§ 300.9)

Comment: Numerous commenters noted that the regulations include the terms “consent,” “informed consent,” “agree,” and “agree in writing” and asked whether all the terms have the same meaning.

Discussion: These terms are used throughout the regulations and are consistent with their use in the Act. The definition of consent requires a parent to be fully informed of all information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought. The definition also requires a parent to agree in writing to an activity for which consent is sought. Therefore, whenever consent is used in these regulations, it means that the consent is both informed and in writing.

The meaning of the terms “agree” or “agreement” is not the same as consent. “Agree” or “agreement” refers to an understanding between the parent and the public agency about a particular question or issue, which may be in writing, depending on the context.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended adding a requirement to the definition of consent that a parent be fully informed of the reasons why a public agency selected one activity over another.

Discussion: We do not believe it is necessary to include the additional requirement recommended by the commenter. The definition of consent already requires that the parent be fully informed of all the information relevant to the activity for which consent is sought.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters requested that the Department address situations in which a child is receiving special education services and the child’s parent wants to discontinue services because they believe the child no longer needs special education services. A few commenters stated that public agencies should not be allowed to use the procedural safeguards to continue to provide special education and related services to a child whose parent withdraws consent for the continued provision of special education and related services.

Discussion: The Department intends to propose regulations to permit parents who previously consented to the initiation of special education services, to withdraw their consent for their child to receive, or continue to receive, special education services. Because this is a change from the Department’s longstanding policies and was not proposed in the NPRM, we will provide the public the opportunity to comment on this proposed change in a separate notice of proposed rulemaking.

Changes: None.

Core Academic Subjects (§ 300.10)

Comment: A few commenters suggested adding the definition of core academic subjects from the ESEA to the regulations and including any additional subjects that are considered core academic subjects for children in the State in which the child resides.

Discussion: The definition of core academic subjects in § 300.10, consistent with section 602(4) of the Act, is the same as the definition in section 9101 of the ESEA. We believe it is unnecessary to change the definition to include additional subjects that particular States consider to be core academic subjects. However, there is nothing in the Act or these regulations that would prevent a State from including additional subjects in its definition of “core academic subjects.”

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters requested clarifying the definition of core academic subjects for a secondary school student when the student is functioning significantly below the secondary level.

Discussion: The definition of core academic subjects does not vary for secondary students who are functioning significantly below grade level. The Act focuses on high academic standards and clear performance goals for children with disabilities that are consistent with the standards and expectations for all children. As required in § 300.320(a), each child’s IEP must include annual goals to enable the child to be involved in and make progress in the general education curriculum, and a statement of the special education and related services and supplementary aids and services to enable the child to be involved and make progress in the general education curriculum. It would, therefore, be inconsistent and contrary to the purposes of the Act for the definition of core academic subjects to be different for students who are functioning below grade level.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter asked that the core content area of “science” apply to social sciences, as well as natural sciences.

Discussion: We cannot change the regulations in the manner recommended by the commenter because the ESEA does not identify “social sciences” as a core academic subject. Neither does it identify “social studies” as a core academic subject. Instead, it identifies specific core academic areas: History, geography, economics, and civics and government. The Department’s nonregulatory guidance on “Highly Qualified Teachers, Improving Teacher Quality State Grants” (August 3, 2005) explains that if a State issues a composite social studies license, the State must determine in which of the four areas (history, geography, economics, and civics and government), if any, a teacher is qualified. (see question A–20 in the Department’s nonregulatory guidance available at <http://www.ed.gov/programs/teacherqual/legislation.html#guidance>).

Changes: None.

Day; Business Day; School Day (§ 300.11)

Comment: A few commenters stated that a partial day should be considered a school day only if there is a safety reason for a shortened day, such as a two hour delay due to snow, and that regularly scheduled half days should not be considered a school day for funding purposes. One commenter stated that many schools count the time on the bus, recess, lunch period, and passing periods as part of a school day for children with disabilities, and recommended that the regulations clarify that non-instructional time does not count against a child’s instructional day unless such times are counted against the instructional day of all children. One commenter recommended the definition of school day include days on which extended school year (ESY) services are provided to children with disabilities.

Discussion: The length of the school day and the number of school days do not affect the formula used to allocate Part B funds to States. School day, as defined in § 300.11(c)(1), is any day or partial day that children are in attendance at school for instructional purposes. If children attend school for only part of a school day and are released early (e.g., on the last day before summer vacation), that day would be considered to be a school day.

Section 300.11(c)(2) already defines school day as having the same meaning for all children, including children with and without disabilities. Therefore, it is unnecessary for the regulations to clarify that non-instructional time (e.g., recess, lunch) is not counted as instructional time for a child with a disability unless such times are counted as instructional time for all children. Consistent with this requirement, days on which ESY services are provided cannot be counted as a school day because ESY services are provided only to children with disabilities.

Changes: None.

Educational Service Agency (§ 300.12)

Comment: One commenter questioned the accuracy of the citation, 20 U.S.C. 1401(5), as the basis for including “intermediate educational unit” in the definition of educational service agency.

Discussion: The definition of educational service agency is based on the provisions in section 602(5) of the Act. The definition was added by the Amendments to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act in 1997, Pub. L. 105–17, to replace the definition of “intermediate educational unit” (IEU) in section 602(23) of the Act, as in effect prior to June 4, 1997. Educational service agency does not exclude entities that were considered IEUs under prior law. To avoid any confusion about the use of this term, the definition clarifies that educational service agency includes entities that meet the definition of IEU in section 602(23) of the Act as in effect prior to June 4, 1997. We believe the citation for IEU is consistent with the Act.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested that the regulations clarify that the reference to the definition of educational service agency in the definition of local educational agency or LEA in § 300.28 means that educational service agencies (ESAs) and Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) schools have full responsibility and rights as LEAs under all provisions of the Act, including § 300.226 (early intervening services).

Discussion: With respect to ESAs, we believe that the provisions in § 300.12 and § 300.28 clarify that ESAs have full responsibility and rights as LEAs, including the provisions in § 300.226 related to early intervening services. However, the commenter’s request regarding BIA schools is inconsistent with the Act. The definition of local educational agency in § 300.28 and section 602(19) of the Act, including the provision on BIA funded schools in section 602(19)(C) of the Act and in § 300.28(c), states that the term “LEA” includes an elementary school or secondary school funded by the BIA, “but only to the extent that the inclusion makes the school eligible for programs for which specific eligibility is not provided to the school in another provision of law and the school does not have a student population that is smaller than the student population of the LEA receiving assistance under the Act with the smallest student population.” Therefore, BIA schools do not have full responsibility and rights as LEAs under all provisions of the Act.

Changes: None.

Excess Costs (§ 300.16)

Comment: One commenter stated that an example on calculating excess costs would be a helpful addition to the regulations.

Discussion: We agree with the commenter and will include an example of calculating excess costs in Appendix A to Part 300—Excess Costs Calculation. In developing the example, we noted that while the requirements in § 300.202 exclude debt service and capital outlay in the calculation of excess costs, the definition of excess costs in § 300.16 does not mention this exclusion. We believe it is important to include this exclusion in the definition of excess costs and will add language in § 300.16 to make this clear and consistent with the requirements in § 300.202.

Changes: We have revised § 300.16(b) to clarify that the calculation of excess costs may not include capital outlay or debt service. We have also added Appendix A to Part 300—Excess Costs Calculation that provides an example and an explanation of how to calculate excess costs under the Act. A reference to Appendix A has been added in § 300.16(b).

Free Appropriate Public Education or FAPE (§ 300.17)

Comment: One commenter stated that the requirements in §§ 300.103 through 300.112 (Other FAPE Requirements) should be included in the definition of FAPE.

Discussion: The other FAPE requirements in §§ 300.103 through 300.112 are included in subpart B of these regulations, rather than in the definition of FAPE in subpart A, to be consistent with the order and structure of section 612 of the Act, which includes all the statutory requirements related to State eligibility. The order and structure of these regulations follow the general order and structure of the provisions in the Act in order to be helpful to parents, State and LEA personnel, and the public both in reading the regulations, and in finding the direct link between a given statutory requirement and the regulation related to that requirement.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters stated that the definition of FAPE should include special education services that are provided in conformity with a child's IEP in the least restrictive environment (LRE), consistent with the standards of the State educational agency (SEA).

Discussion: The definition of FAPE in § 300.17 accurately reflects the specific language in section 602(9) of the Act. We believe it is unnecessary to change the definition of FAPE in the manner recommended by the commenters because providing services in conformity with a child's IEP in the LRE is implicit in the definition of FAPE. Consistent with § 300.17(b), FAPE means that special education and related services must meet the standards of the SEA and the requirements in Part B of the Act, which include the LRE requirements in §§ 300.114 through 300.118. Additionally, § 300.17(d) provides that FAPE means that special education and related services are provided in conformity with an IEP that meets the requirements in section 614(d) of the Act. Consistent with section 614(d)(1)(i)(V) of the Act, the IEP must include a statement of the extent, if any, to which the child will not participate with nondisabled children in the regular education class.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended removing "including the requirements of this part" in § 300.17(b) because this phrase is not included in the Act, and makes every provision in Part B of the Act a component of FAPE.

Discussion: Section 300.17 is the same as current § 300.13, which has been in the regulations since 1977. We do not believe that § 300.17 makes every provision of this part applicable to FAPE.

Changes: None.

Highly Qualified Special Education Teachers (§ 300.18)

Comment: One commenter requested including the definition of "highly qualified teacher," as defined in the ESEA, in the regulations.

Discussion: The ESEA defines "highly qualified" with regard to any public elementary or secondary school teacher. For the reasons set forth earlier in this notice, we are not adding definitions from other statutes to these regulations. However, we will include the current definition here for reference.

The term "highly qualified"—

(A) When used with respect to any public elementary school or secondary school teacher teaching in a State, means that—

(i) The teacher has obtained full State certification as a teacher (including certification obtained through alternative routes to certification) or passed the State teacher licensing examination, and holds a license to teach in such State, except that when used with respect to any teacher teaching in a public charter school, the term means that the teacher meets the requirements set forth in the State's public charter school law; and

(ii) The teacher has not had certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis;

(B) When used with respect to—

(i) An elementary school teacher who is new to the profession, means that the teacher—

(I) Holds at least a bachelor's degree; and

(II) Has demonstrated, by passing a rigorous State test, subject knowledge and teaching skills in reading, writing, mathematics, and other areas of the basic elementary school curriculum (which may consist of passing a State-required certification or licensing test or tests in reading, writing, mathematics, and other areas of the basic elementary school curriculum); or

(ii) A middle or secondary school teacher who is new to the profession, means that the teacher holds at least a bachelor's degree and has demonstrated a high level of competency in each of the academic subjects in which the teacher teaches by—

(I) Passing a rigorous State academic subject test in each of the academic subjects in which the teacher teaches (which may consist of a passing level of performance on a State-required certification or licensing test or tests in each of the academic subjects in which the teacher teaches); or

(II) Successful completion, in each of the academic subjects in which the teacher teaches, of an academic major, a graduate degree, coursework equivalent to an undergraduate academic major, or advanced certification or credentialing; and

(C) When used with respect to an elementary, middle, or secondary school teacher who is not new to the profession, means that the teacher holds at least a bachelor's degree and—

(i) Has met the applicable standard in clause (i) or (ii) of subparagraph (B), which includes an option for a test; or

(ii) Demonstrates competence in all the academic subjects in which the teacher teaches based on a high objective uniform State standard of evaluation that—

(I) Is set by the State for both grade appropriate academic subject matter knowledge and teaching skills;

(II) Is aligned with challenging State academic content and student academic achievement standards and developed in consultation with core content specialists, teachers, principals, and school administrators;

(III) Provides objective, coherent information about the teacher's attainment of core content knowledge in the academic subjects in which a teacher teaches;

(IV) Is applied uniformly to all teachers in the same academic subject and the same grade level throughout the State;

(V) Takes into consideration, but not be based primarily on, the time the teacher has been teaching in the academic subject;

(VI) Is made available to the public upon request; and

(VII) May involve multiple, objective measures of teacher competency.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended defining the term "special education teacher." Other commenters recommended that States define highly qualified special education teachers and providers. One commenter stated that the regulations should define the role of the special education teacher as supplementing and supporting the regular education teacher who is responsible for teaching course content.

One commenter requested that the regulations clarify that a special education teacher who is certified as a regular education teacher with an endorsement in special education meets the requirements for a highly qualified special education teacher. Another commenter recommended changing the definition of a highly qualified special education teacher so that States cannot provide a single certification for all areas of special education. One commenter requested clarification regarding the highly qualified special education teacher standards for special education teachers with single State endorsements in the area of special education. A few commenters recommended clarifying that when a State determines that a teacher is fully certified in special education, this means that the teacher is knowledgeable and skilled in the special education area in which certification is received. One commenter recommended that teacher qualifications and standards be consistent from State to State.

Discussion: Section 300.18(b), consistent with section 602(10)(B) of the Act, provides that a highly qualified special education teacher must have full State special education certification (including certification obtained through alternative routes to certification) or have passed the State special education teacher licensing examination and hold a license to teach in the State; have not had special education certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis; and hold at least a bachelor's degree. Except to the extent addressed in § 300.18(c) and (d), special education teachers who teach core academic subjects must, in addition to meeting these requirements, demonstrate subject-matter competency in each of the core academic subjects in which the teacher teaches.

States are responsible for establishing certification and licensing standards for special education teachers. Each State uses its own standards and procedures to determine whether teachers who teach within that State meet its certification and licensing requirements. Teacher qualifications and standards are consistent from State to State to the extent that States work together to establish consistent criteria and reciprocity agreements. It is not the role of the Federal government to regulate teacher certification and licensure.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that LEAs must train special education teachers because most special education teachers are not highly qualified upon graduation from a college program. A few commenters recommended that the regulations encourage SEAs to require coursework for both special education and general education teachers in the areas of behavior management and classroom management. One commenter recommended that the requirements for special education teachers include competencies in reading instruction and in properly modifying and accommodating instruction. Another commenter supported training in special education and related services for general education teachers. One commenter expressed support for collaboration between special education and regular education teachers. Some commenters recommended requiring a highly qualified general education teacher teaching in a self-contained special education classroom to work in close collaboration with the special education teacher assigned to those children. Another commenter stated that the definition of a highly qualified special education teacher will be meaningless if the training for teachers is not consistent across States.

Discussion: Personnel training needs vary across States and it would be inappropriate for the regulations to require training on specific topics. Consistent with § 300.156 and section 612(a)(14) of the Act, each State is responsible for ensuring that teachers, related services personnel, paraprofessionals, and other personnel serving children with disabilities under Part B of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained and have the content knowledge and skills required to serve children with disabilities.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended that the regulations include standards for highly qualified special education paraprofessionals, similar to the requirements under the ESEA.

Discussion: Section § 300.156(b) specifically requires the qualifications for paraprofessionals to be consistent with any State-approved or State-recognized certification, licensing, registration, or other comparable requirements that apply to the professional discipline in which those personnel are providing special education or related services.

In addition, the ESEA requires that paraprofessionals, including special education paraprofessionals who assist in instruction in title I-funded programs, have at least an associate's degree, have completed at least two years of college, or meet a rigorous standard of quality and demonstrate, through a formal State or local assessment, knowledge of, and the ability to assist in instruction in reading, writing, and mathematics, reading readiness, writing readiness, or mathematics readiness, as appropriate. Paraprofessionals in title I schools do not need to meet these requirements if their role does not involve instructional support, such as special education paraprofessionals who solely provide personal care services. For more information on the ESEA requirements for paraprofessionals, see 34 CFR 200.58 and section 1119 of the ESEA, and the Department's nonregulatory guidance, Title I Paraprofessionals (March 1, 2004), which can be found on the Department's Web site at: <http://www.ed.gov/policy/elsec/guid/paraguidance.pdf>.

We believe these requirements are sufficient to ensure that children with disabilities receive services from paraprofessionals who are appropriately and adequately trained. Therefore, we decline to include additional standards for paraprofessionals.

Changes: None.

Comment: Numerous commenters requested clarification as to whether early childhood and preschool special education teachers must meet the highly qualified special education teacher standards. Several commenters stated that requiring early childhood and preschool special education teachers to meet the highly qualified special education teacher standards would exceed statutory authority and exacerbate the shortage of special education teachers. A few commenters supported allowing States to decide whether the highly qualified special education teacher requirements apply to preschool teachers.

Discussion: The highly qualified special education teacher requirements apply to all public elementary school and secondary school special education teachers, including early childhood or preschool teachers if a State includes the early childhood or preschool programs as part of its elementary school and secondary school system. If the early childhood or preschool program is not a part of a State's public elementary school and secondary school system, the highly qualified special education teacher requirements do not apply.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested clarification regarding the scope of the highly qualified special education teacher requirements for instructors who teach core academic subjects in specialized schools, such as schools for the blind, and recommended that there be different qualifications for instructors who provide orientation and mobility instruction or travel training for children who are blind or visually impaired.

One commenter requested adding travel instructors to the list of special educators who need to be highly qualified. Some commenters recommended adding language to include certified and licensed special education teachers of children with low incidence disabilities as highly qualified special education teachers. A few commenters requested that the requirements for teachers who teach children with visual impairments include competencies in teaching Braille, using assistive technology devices, and conducting assessments, rather than competencies in core subject areas. Some commenters requested more flexibility in setting the standards for teachers of children with visual impairments and teachers of children with other low incidence disabilities. One commenter requested clarification regarding the requirements for teachers of children with low incidence disabilities.

Discussion: Consistent with § 300.156 and section 612(a)(14) of the Act, it is the responsibility of each State to ensure that teachers and other personnel serving children with disabilities under Part B of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained and have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities, including teachers of children with visual impairments and teachers of children with other low incidence disabilities.

The highly qualified special education teacher requirements apply to all public school special education teachers. There are no separate or special provisions for special education teachers who teach in specialized schools, for teachers of children who are blind and visually impaired, or for teachers of children with other low incidence disabilities and we do not believe there should be because these children should receive the same high quality instruction from teachers who meet the same high standards as all other teachers and who have the subject matter knowledge and teaching skills necessary to assist these children to achieve to high academic standards.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested clarification on how the highly qualified special education teacher requirements impact teachers who teach children of different ages. A few commenters recommended adding a provision for special education teachers who teach at multiple age levels, similar to the special education teacher who teaches multiple subjects.

Discussion: The Act does not include any special requirements for special education teachers who teach at multiple age levels. Teachers who teach at multiple age levels must meet the same requirements as all other special education teachers to be considered highly qualified. The clear intent of the Act is to ensure that all children with disabilities have teachers with the subject matter knowledge and teaching skills necessary to assist children with disabilities achieve to high academic standards. Therefore, we do not believe there should be different requirements for teachers who teach at multiple age levels.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended including specific criteria defining a highly qualified special education literacy teacher.

Discussion: Under § 300.18(a), a special education literacy teacher who is responsible for teaching reading must meet the ESEA highly qualified teacher requirements including competency in reading, as well as the highly qualified special education teacher requirements. We do not believe that further regulation is needed as the Act leaves teacher certification and licensing requirements to States.

Changes: None.

Comment: Many commenters expressed concern that the highly qualified special education teacher standards will make it more difficult to recruit and retain special education teachers. Some commenters stated that most special education teachers will need to hold more than one license or certification to meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements and that the time and expense needed to obtain the additional licenses or certifications is unreasonable. One commenter stated that schools will have to hire two or three teachers for every one special education teacher, thereby increasing education costs.

One commenter expressed concern about losing special education teachers who teach multiple subjects in alternative education and homebound programs because they will not meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements. One commenter expressed concern that the requirements set a higher standard for teachers in self-contained classrooms. Another commenter stated that requiring special education teachers in secondary schools to be experts in all subjects is a burden that elementary teachers do not have.

Discussion: The Department understands the concerns of the commenters. However, the clear intention of the Act is to ensure that all children with disabilities have teachers with the subject-matter knowledge and teaching skills necessary to assist children with disabilities achieve to high academic standards.

To help States and districts meet these standards, section 651 of the Act authorizes State Personnel Development grants to help States reform and improve their systems for personnel preparation and professional development in early intervention, educational, and transition services in order to improve results for children with disabilities. In addition, section 662 of the Act authorizes funding for institutions of higher education, LEAs, and other eligible local entities to improve or develop new training programs for teachers and other personnel serving children with disabilities.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested further clarification regarding the requirements for secondary special education teachers to be highly qualified in the core subjects they teach, as well as certified in special education.

Discussion: Consistent with § 300.18(a) and (b) and section 602(10)(A) and (B) of the Act, secondary special education teachers who teach core academic subjects must meet the highly qualified teacher standards established in the ESEA (which includes competency in each core academic subject the teacher teaches) and the highly qualified special education teacher requirements in § 300.18(b) and section 602(10)(B) of the Act.

Consistent with § 300.18(c) and section 602(10)(C) of the Act, a secondary special education teacher who teaches core academic subjects exclusively to children assessed against alternate achievement standards can satisfy the highly qualified special education teacher requirements by meeting the requirements for a highly qualified elementary teacher under the ESEA, or in the case of instruction above the elementary level, have subject matter knowledge appropriate to the level of instruction being provided, as determined by the State, to effectively teach to those standards.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter expressed concern that the highly qualified teacher requirements will drive secondary teachers who teach children with emotional and behavioral disorders out of the field and requested that the requirements be changed to require special education certification in one core area, plus a reasonable amount of training in other areas. Another commenter recommended permitting special education teachers of core academic subjects at the elementary level to be highly qualified if they major in elementary education and have coursework in math, language arts, and science. One commenter recommended that any special education teacher certified in a State prior to 2004 be exempt from having to meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements.

Discussion: The definition of a highly qualified special education teacher in § 300.18 accurately reflects the requirements in section 602(10) of the Act. To change the regulations in the manner recommended by the commenters would be inconsistent with the Act and the Act's clear intent of ensuring that all children with disabilities have teachers with the subject matter knowledge and teaching skills necessary to assist children with disabilities achieve to high academic standards. Therefore, we decline to change the requirements in § 300.18.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that there is a double standard in the highly qualified teacher requirements because general education teachers are not required to be certified in special education even though they teach children with disabilities. Another commenter recommended requiring general education teachers who teach children with disabilities to meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements.

Discussion: We cannot make the changes suggested by the commenter because the Act does not require general education teachers who teach children with disabilities to be certified in special education. Further, the legislative history of the Act would not support these changes. Note 21 in the U.S. House of Representatives Conference Report No. 108-779 (Conf. Rpt.), p. 169, clarifies that general education teachers who are highly qualified in particular subjects and who teach children with disabilities in those subjects are not required to have full State certification as a special education teacher. For example, a reading specialist who is highly qualified in reading instruction, but who is not certified as a special education teacher, would not be prohibited from providing reading instruction to children with disabilities.

The Act focuses on ensuring that children with disabilities achieve to high academic standards and have access to the same curriculum as other children. In order to achieve this goal, teachers who teach core academic subjects to children with disabilities must be competent in the core academic areas in which they teach. This is true for general education teachers, as well as special education teachers.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters expressed concern that LEAs may reduce placement options for children with disabilities because of the shortage of highly qualified teachers. A few commenters recommended requiring each State to develop and implement policies to ensure that teachers meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements, while maintaining a full continuum of services and alternative placements to respond to the needs of children with disabilities.

Discussion: It would be inconsistent with the LRE requirements in section 612(a)(5) of the Act for a public agency to restrict the placement options for children with disabilities. Section 300.115, consistent with section 612(a)(5) of the Act, requires each public agency to ensure that a continuum of alternative placements is available to meet the needs of children with disabilities.

The additional requirements requested by the commenter are not necessary because States already must develop and implement policies to ensure that the State meets the LRE and personnel standards requirements in sections 612(a)(5) and (a)(14) of the Act, respectively.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that personnel working in charter schools should meet the same requirements as all other public school personnel. Several commenters expressed concern regarding the exemption of charter school teachers from the highly qualified special education teacher requirements. One commenter stated that while a special education teacher in a charter school does not have to be licensed or certified by the State if the State's charter school law does not require such licensure or certification, all other elements of the highly qualified special education teacher requirements should apply to charter school teachers, including demonstrated competency in core academic subject areas.

Discussion: The certification requirements for charter school teachers are established in a State's public charter school law, and may differ from the requirements for full State certification for teachers in other public schools. The Department does not have the authority to change State charter school laws to require charter school teachers to meet the same requirements as all other public school teachers.

In addition to the certification requirements established in a State's public charter school law, if any, section 602(10) of the Act requires charter school special education teachers to hold at least a bachelor's degree and, if they are teaching core academic subjects, demonstrate competency in the core academic areas they teach. We will add language in § 300.18(b) to clarify that special education teachers in public charter schools must meet the certification or licensing requirements, if any, established by a State's public charter school law.

Changes: We have added the words "if any" in § 300.18(b)(1)(i) to clarify that special education teachers in public charter schools must meet any certification or licensing requirements established by a State's public charter school law.

Comment: One commenter stated that the regulations use the terms "highly qualified" and "fully certified" in a manner that implies they are synonymous, and recommended that the regulations maintain the distinction between the two terms.

Discussion: Full State certification is determined under State law and policy and means that a teacher has fully met State requirements, including any requirements related to a teacher's years of teaching experience. For example, State requirements may vary for first-year teachers versus teachers who are not new to the profession. Full State certification also means that the teacher has not had certification or licensure requirements waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis.

The terms “highly qualified” and “fully certified” are synonymous when used to refer to special education teachers who are not teaching core academic subjects. For special education teachers teaching core academic subjects, however, both full special education certification or licensure and subject matter competency are required.

Changes: We have changed the heading to § 300.18(a) and the introductory material in § 300.18(a) and (b)(1) for clarity.

Comment: A few commenters recommended prohibiting States from creating new categories to replace emergency, temporary, or provisional licenses that lower the standards for full certification in special education.

Discussion: We do not believe it is necessary to add the additional language recommended by the commenters. Section 300.18(b)(1)(ii) and section 602(10)(B)(ii) of the Act are clear that a teacher cannot be considered a highly qualified special education teacher if the teacher has had special education certification or licensure waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis. This would include any new certification category that effectively allows special education certification or licensure to be waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters supported alternative route to certification programs for special education teachers. One commenter stated that these programs are necessary to increase the number of highly qualified teachers and will help schools on isolated tribal reservations recruit, train, and retain highly qualified teachers. However, numerous commenters expressed concerns and objections to alternative route to certification programs for special education teachers. Several commenters stated that allowing individuals making progress in an alternative route to certification program to be considered highly qualified and fully certified creates a lower standard, short-changes children, is not supported by any provision in the Act, and undermines the requirement for special education teachers to be fully certified. One commenter stated that this provision is illogical and punitive to higher education teacher training programs because it allows individuals in an alternative route to certification program to be considered highly qualified and fully certified during their training program, while at the same time individuals in regular teacher training programs that meet the same requirements as alternative route to certification programs are not considered highly qualified or fully certified. One commenter argued that an individual participating in an alternative route to certification program would need certification waived on an emergency, temporary, or provisional basis, which means the individual has not met the requirements in § 300.18(b)(1)(ii). Another commenter stated that three years is not enough time for a teacher enrolled in an alternative route to certification program to assume the functions of a teacher.

Discussion: While we understand the general objections to alternative route to certification programs expressed by the commenters, the Department believes that alternative route to certification programs provide an important option for individuals seeking to enter the teaching profession. The requirements in § 300.18(b)(2) were included in these regulations to provide consistency with the requirements in 34 CFR 200.56(a)(2)(ii)(A) and the ESEA, regarding alternative route to certification programs. To help ensure that individuals participating in alternative route to certification programs are well trained, there are certain requirements that must be met as well as restrictions on who can be considered to have obtained full State certification as a special education teacher while enrolled in an alternative route to certification program. An individual participating in an alternative route to certification program must (1) hold at least a bachelor's degree and have demonstrated subject-matter competency in the core academic subject(s) the individual will be teaching; (2) assume the functions of a teacher for not more than three years; and (3) demonstrate satisfactory progress toward full certification, as prescribed by the State. The individual also must receive, before and while teaching, high-quality professional development that is sustained, intensive, and classroom-focused and have intensive supervision that consists of structured guidance and regular ongoing support.

It was the Department's intent to allow an individual who wants to become a special education teacher, but does not plan to teach a core academic subject, to enroll in an alternative route to certification program and be considered highly qualified, provided that the individual holds at least a bachelor's degree. This requirement, however, was inadvertently omitted in the NPRM. Therefore, we will add appropriate references in § 300.18(b)(3) to clarify that an individual participating in an alternative route to certification program in special education who does not intend to teach a core academic subject, may be considered a highly qualified special education teacher if the individual holds at least a bachelor's degree and participates in an alternative route to certification program that meets the requirements in § 300.18(b)(2).

Changes: Appropriate citations have been added in § 300.18(b)(3) to clarify the requirements for individuals enrolled in alternative route to special education teacher certification programs.

Comment: A few commenters recommended more specificity in the requirements for teachers participating in alternative route to certification programs, rather than giving too much discretion to States to develop programs that do not lead to highly qualified personnel. However, one commenter recommended allowing States the flexibility to create their own guidelines for alternative route to certification programs.

Several commenters recommended clarifying the requirements for the teacher supervising an individual who is participating in an alternative route to certification program. One commenter recommended requiring supervision, guidance, and support by a professional with expertise in the area of special education in which the teacher desires to become certified.

Discussion: Consistent with § 300.18(b)(2)(ii), States are responsible for ensuring that the standards for alternative route to certification programs in § 300.18(b)(2)(i) are met. It is, therefore, up to each State to determine whether to require specific qualifications for the teachers responsible for supervising teachers participating in an alternative route to certification program.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested clarification regarding the roles and responsibilities of special education teachers who do not teach core academic subjects.

Discussion: Special education teachers who do not directly instruct children in any core academic subject or who provide only consultation to highly qualified teachers of core academic subjects do not need to demonstrate subject-matter competency in those subjects. These special educators could provide consultation services to other teachers, such as adapting curricula, using behavioral supports and interventions, or selecting appropriate accommodations for children with disabilities. They could also assist children with study skills or organizational skills and reinforce instruction that the child has already received from a highly qualified teacher in that core academic subject.

Changes: None.

Comment: Many commenters recommended including language in the regulations to clarify that special education teachers who do not teach core academic subjects and provide only consultative services must restrict their services to areas that supplement, not replace, the direct instruction provided by a highly qualified general education teacher. One commenter recommended that States develop criteria for teachers who provide consultation services. Another commenter stated that special education teachers should not work on a consultative basis.

Discussion: The definition of consultation services and whether a special education teacher provides consultation services are matters best left to the discretion of each State. While States may develop criteria to distinguish consultation versus instructional services, the Act and the ESEA are clear that teachers who provide direct instruction in a core academic subject, including special education teachers, must meet the highly qualified teacher requirements, which include demonstrated competency in each of the core academic subjects the teacher teaches.

Changes: None.

Requirements for Highly Qualified Special Education Teachers Teaching to Alternate Achievement Standards (§ 300.18(c))

Comment: One commenter recommended replacing “alternate achievement standards” with “alternate standards.” A few commenters requested including a definition of alternate achievement standards in the regulations.

Discussion: “Alternate achievement standards” is statutory language and, therefore, it would be inappropriate to change “alternate achievement standards” to “alternate standards.”

For the reasons set forth earlier in this notice, we are not adding definitions from other statutes to these regulations. However, we will include the current description of alternate achievement standards in 34 CFR 200.1(d) of the ESEA regulations here for reference.

For children under section 602(3) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act with the most significant cognitive disabilities who take an alternate assessment, a State may, through a documented and validated standards-setting process, define alternate academic achievement standards, provided those standards—

- (1) Are aligned with the State’s academic content standards;
- (2) Promote access to the general curriculum; and
- (3) Reflect professional judgment of the highest achievement standards possible.

Changes: None.

Comment: Several commenters expressed concern with allowing high school students with significant cognitive disabilities to be taught by a certified elementary school teacher. One commenter stated that high school students with disabilities should be prepared to lead productive adult lives, and not be treated as young children. Another commenter stated that these requirements foster low expectations for children with the most significant cognitive disabilities and will be used to justify providing children with instruction that is not age appropriate or that denies access to the general education curriculum. A few commenters stated that the requirements for special education teachers teaching to alternate achievement standards should be the same as the requirements for all special education teachers.

Some commenters recommended requiring teachers who teach to alternate achievement standards to have subject matter knowledge to provide instruction aligned to the academic content standards for the grade level in which the student is enrolled. One commenter recommended requiring any special education teacher teaching to alternate achievement standards to demonstrate knowledge of age-appropriate core curriculum content to ensure children with disabilities are taught a curriculum that is closely tied to the general education curriculum taught to other children of the same age.

Discussion: The regulations promulgated under section 1111(b)(1) of the ESEA permit States to use alternate achievement standards to evaluate the performance of a small group of children with the most significant cognitive disabilities who are not expected to meet grade-level standards even with the best instruction. An alternate achievement standard sets an expectation of performance that differs in complexity from a grade-level achievement standard. Section 602(10)(C)(ii) of the Act, therefore, allows special education teachers teaching exclusively children who are assessed against alternate achievement standards to meet the highly qualified teacher standards that apply to elementary school teachers. In the case of instruction above the elementary level, the teacher must have subject matter knowledge appropriate to the level of instruction being provided, as determined by the State, in order to effectively teach to those standards.

We do not agree that allowing middle and high school students with the most significant cognitive disabilities to be taught by teachers who meet the qualifications of a highly qualified elementary teacher fosters low expectations, encourages students to be treated like children, promotes instruction that is not age appropriate, or denies students access to the general curriculum. Although alternate achievement standards differ in complexity from grade-level standards, 34 CFR 200.1(d) requires that alternate achievement standards be aligned with the State’s content standards, promote access to the general curriculum, and reflect professional judgment of the highest achievement standards possible. In short, we believe that the requirements in § 300.18(c) will ensure that teachers teaching exclusively children who are assessed against alternate achievement standards will have the knowledge to provide instruction aligned to grade-level content standards so that students with the most significant cognitive disabilities are taught a curriculum that is closely tied to the general curriculum.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters requested clarification regarding the meaning of “subject matter knowledge appropriate to the level of instruction provided” in § 300.18(c)(2).

Discussion: Section 300.18(c)(2) requires that if a teacher (who is teaching exclusively to alternate achievement standards) is teaching students who need instruction above the elementary school level, the teacher must have subject matter knowledge appropriate to the level of instruction needed to effectively teach to those standards. The purpose of this requirement is to ensure that teachers exclusively teaching children who are assessed based on alternate academic achievement standards above the elementary level have sufficient subject matter knowledge to effectively instruct in each of the core academic subjects being taught, at the level of difficulty being taught. For example, if a high school student (determined by the IEP Team to be assessed against alternate achievement standards) has knowledge and skills in math at the 7th grade level, but in all other areas functions at the elementary level, the teacher would need to have knowledge in 7th grade math in order to effectively teach the student to meet the 7th grade math standards. No further clarification is necessary.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended that the regulations include requirements for teachers who provide instruction to children assessed against modified achievement standards. Several commenters stated that the requirements for teachers teaching children assessed against modified achievement standards should be the same for teachers teaching children assessed against alternate achievement standards.

Discussion: The Department has not issued final regulations addressing modified achievement standards and the specific criteria for determining which children with disabilities should be assessed based on modified achievement standards. As proposed, the modified achievement standards must be aligned with the State's academic content standards for the grade in which the student is enrolled and provide access to the grade-level curriculum. For this reason, we see no need for a further exception to the "highly qualified teacher" provisions at this time.

Changes: None.

Requirements for Highly Qualified Special Education Teachers Teaching Multiple Subjects (§ 300.18(d))

Comment: A few commenters stated that the requirements for teachers who teach two or more core academic subjects exclusively to children with disabilities are confusing. Some commenters requested additional guidance and flexibility for special education teachers teaching two or more core academic subjects. Other commenters recommended allowing special education teachers more time to become highly qualified in all the core academic subjects they teach.

Discussion: The requirements in § 300.18(d), consistent with section 602(10)(C) of the Act, provide flexibility for teachers who teach multiple core academic subjects exclusively to children with disabilities. Section 300.18(d)(2) and (3) allows teachers who are new and not new in the profession to demonstrate competence in all the core academic subjects in which the teacher teaches using a single, high objective uniform State standard of evaluation (HOUSSE) covering multiple subjects. In addition, § 300.18(d)(3) gives a new special education teacher who teaches multiple subjects, and who is highly qualified in mathematics, language arts, or science at the time of hire, two years after the date of employment to demonstrate competence in the other core academic subjects in which the teacher teaches. We do not believe that further clarification is necessary.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested clarification regarding the meaning of the following phrases in § 300.18(d): "multiple subjects," "in the same manner," and "all the core academic subjects."

Discussion: "Multiple subjects" refers to two or more core academic subjects. Section 300.18(d) allows teachers who are new or not new to the profession to demonstrate competence in "all the core subjects" in which the teacher teaches "in the same manner" as is required for an elementary, middle, or secondary school teacher under the ESEA. As used in this context, "in the same manner" means that special education teachers teaching multiple subjects can demonstrate competence in the core academic subjects they teach in the same way that is required for elementary, middle, or secondary school teachers in 34 CFR 200.56 of the ESEA regulations. "All the core subjects" refers to the core academic subjects, which include English, reading or language arts, mathematics, science, foreign languages, civics and government, economics, arts, history, and geography, consistent with § 300.10.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended ensuring that the requirements in § 300.18(d) apply to special education teachers who teach children with severe disabilities in more than one core subject area.

Discussion: The requirements in § 300.18(d) do not exclude teachers who teach children with severe disabilities in more than one core subject area. Consistent with § 300.18(d) and section 602(10)(D) of the Act, the requirements apply to special education teachers who teach two or more core academic subjects exclusively to children with disabilities, including, but not limited to, children with severe disabilities. We do not believe that further clarification is necessary.

Changes: None.

Comment: A significant number of commenters recommended adding language to the regulations to permit a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers, including a single HOUSSE that covers multiple subjects. Some commenters supported a single HOUSSE covering multiple subjects for special education teachers, as long as those adaptations of a State's HOUSSE for use with special education teachers do not establish lower standards for the content knowledge requirements for special education teachers.

Discussion: States have the option of developing a method by which teachers can demonstrate competency in each subject they teach on the basis of a HOUSSE. Likewise, we believe States should have the option of developing a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers.

States have flexibility in developing their HOUSSE evaluation as long as it meets each of the following criteria established in section 9101(23)(C)(ii) of the ESEA:

- Be set by the State for both grade-appropriate academic subject-matter knowledge and teaching skills;
- Be aligned with challenging State academic content and student academic achievement standards and developed in consultation with core content specialists, teachers, principals, and school administrators;
- Provide objective, coherent information about the teacher's attainment of core content knowledge in the academic subjects in which a teacher teaches;
- Be applied uniformly to all teachers in the same academic subject and teaching in the same grade level throughout the State;
- Take into consideration, but not be based primarily on, the time the teacher has been teaching in the academic subject; and
- Be made available to the public upon request.

The ESEA also permits States, when developing their HOUSSE procedures, to involve multiple, objective measures of teacher competency. Each evaluation should have a high, objective, uniform standard that the candidate is expected to meet or to exceed. These standards for evaluation must be applied to each candidate in the same way.

We believe it is appropriate and consistent with the Act to permit States to develop a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers to demonstrate subject matter competency and to use a single HOUSSE covering multiple subjects, provided that any adaptations to the HOUSSE do not establish a lower standard for the content knowledge requirements for special education teachers and meet all the requirements for a HOUSSE for regular education teachers established in section 9101(23)(C)(ii) of the ESEA.

Changes: We have added a new paragraph (e) to § 300.18 to allow States to develop a separate HOUSSE for special education teachers and to permit the use of a single HOUSSE covering multiple subjects. Subsequent paragraphs have been renumbered.

Comment: A few commenters stated that the HOUSSE should only be used to address the content requirements, not primary certification as a special educator.

Discussion: A HOUSSE is a method by which teachers can demonstrate competency in each subject they teach. A HOUSSE does not address the requirement for full State certification as a special education teacher.

Changes: None.

Comment: Several commenters recommended clarifying the requirements for a HOUSSE, particularly at the high school level. One commenter recommended clarifying the use of a separate HOUSSE for teachers of children with visual impairments.

Discussion: The requirements for a HOUSSE apply to public school elementary, middle, and high school special education teachers. Neither the Act nor the ESEA provides for different HOUSSE procedures at the high school level. Similarly, there are no requirements for separate HOUSSE procedures for teachers who teach children with visual impairments or any other specific type of disability. We do not believe it is necessary or appropriate to establish separate requirements for separate HOUSSE procedures for teachers who teach children with visual impairments or any other specific type of disability. All children with disabilities, regardless of their specific disability, should have teachers with the subject matter knowledge to assist them to achieve to high academic standards.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended that States work collaboratively to ensure there is State reciprocity of content area standards for special education teachers, including HOUSSE provisions.

Discussion: It is up to each State to determine when and on what basis to accept another State's determination that a particular teacher is highly qualified. Additionally, each State determines whether to consider a teacher from another State to be both fully certified and competent in each subject area.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested specific guidance on how to design a multi-subject HOUSSE for special education teachers.

Discussion: The Department's non-regulatory guidance on Improving Teacher Quality State Grants issued on August 3, 2005 (available at <http://www.ed.gov/programs/teacherqual/guidance.doc>.) provides the following guidance to States when developing their HOUSSE procedures (see question A-10):

- Do the HOUSSE procedures provide an "objective" way of determining whether teachers have adequate subject-matter knowledge in each core academic subject they teach?

- Is there a strong and compelling rationale for each part of the HOUSSE procedures?

- Do the procedures take into account, but not primarily rely on, previous teaching experience?

- Does the plan provide solid evidence that teachers have mastered the subject-matter content of each of the core academic subjects they are teaching? (Note: experience and association with content-focused groups or organizations do not necessarily translate into an objective measure of content knowledge.)

- Has the State consulted with core content specialists, teachers, principals, and school administrators?

- Does the State plan to widely distribute its HOUSSE procedures, and are they presented in a format understandable to all teachers?

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters asked whether the additional time allowed for teachers living in rural areas who teach multiple subjects applies to special education teachers. One commenter requested that teachers in rural areas have three extra years after the date of employment to meet the standards. Another commenter stated it will be difficult for these teachers to meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements even with an extended deadline.

Discussion: The Department's policy on flexibility for middle and high school teachers in rural schools applies to special education teachers. Under this policy, announced on March 15, 2004, States may permit LEAs eligible to participate in the Small Rural School Achievement (SRSA) program that employ teachers who teach multiple subjects and are highly qualified in at least one core academic subject, to have until the end of the 2006-07 school year for these teachers to be highly qualified in each subject that they teach. Newly-hired teachers in these covered LEAs have three years from the date of hire to become highly qualified in each core academic subject that they teach. More information about this policy is available in the Department's nonregulatory guidance, Improving Teacher Quality State Grants (August 3, 2005), which can be found on the Department's Web site at: <http://www.ed.gov/programs/teacherqual/guidance.doc>.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters requested a definition of "new" special education teacher and asked whether it applies to teachers hired after the date of enactment of the Act, December 3, 2004, or after the 2005-06 school year. One commenter asked whether a fully certified regular education teacher who enrolls in a special education teacher training program would be considered "new" to the profession when he or she completes the training program.

Discussion: Under the Act, mere completion of a special education teacher training program is not a sufficient predicate for being considered a highly qualified special education teacher. Section 602(10)(B) of the Act requires full State certification or licensure as a special education teacher, and this would apply to teachers who are already certified or licensed as a regular education teacher, as well as to other individuals.

On the question of when a person is "new to the profession," the Department's non-regulatory guidance on Improving Teacher Quality State Grants issued on August 3, 2005, clarifies that States have the authority to define which teachers are new and not new to the profession; however, those definitions must be reasonable. The guidance further states that the Department strongly believes that a teacher with less than one year of teaching experience is "new" to the profession (see Question A-6). (The guidance is available at <http://www.ed.gov/programs/teacherqual/guidance.doc>). This guidance is applicable to determinations of when a person is new or not new to the profession under section 602(10)(C) and (D)(ii) of the Act and § 300.18(c) and (d)(2).

Under section 602(10)(D)(iii) of the Act, and reflected in § 300.18(d)(3), there is additional flexibility for "a new special education teacher" who is teaching multiple subjects and is highly qualified in mathematics, language arts, or science, to demonstrate competence in the other core academic subjects in which the teacher teaches in the same manner as is required for an elementary, middle, or secondary school teacher who is not new to the profession, which may include a single, high objective uniform State standard of evaluation covering multiple subjects, not later than 2 years after the date of employment. The phrase "2 years after the date of employment" in section 602(10)(D)(iii) of the Act is interpreted to mean 2 years after employment as a special education teacher.

For purposes of this provision, we consider it appropriate to consider a fully certified regular education teacher who subsequently becomes fully certified or licensed as a special education teacher to be considered a "new special education teacher" when they are first hired as a special education teacher. We will add language to new § 300.18(g) (proposed § 300.18(f)) to make this clear.

Changes: We have restructured § 300.18(g) (proposed § 300.18(f)) and added a new paragraph (g)(2) to permit a fully certified regular education teacher who subsequently becomes fully certified or licensed as a special education teacher to be considered a new special education teacher when first hired as a special education teacher.

Comment: Some commenters recommended that the regulations clarify how co-teaching fits with the highly qualified special education teacher requirements. A few commenters stated that a special education teacher should be considered a highly qualified teacher if co-teaching with a highly qualified general education teacher. One commenter stated that co-teaching will encourage districts to work toward more inclusive settings for children with disabilities while also ensuring that teachers with appropriate qualifications are in the classroom. One commenter supported co-teaching as a method for special education teachers to learn core content knowledge and be supported by the general education teacher. One teacher recommended that a highly qualified general education teacher supervise teachers who do not meet the highly qualified special education teacher requirements.

Discussion: The term "co-teaching" has many different meanings depending on the context in which it is used. Whether and how co-teaching is implemented is a matter that is best left to State and local officials' discretion. Therefore, we decline to include language regarding co-teaching in these regulations. Regardless of whether co-teaching models are used, States and LEAs must ensure that teachers meet the highly qualified teacher requirements in 34 CFR 200.56 and section 9101(23) of the ESEA and the highly qualified special education teacher requirements in § 300.18 and section 602(10) of the Act, as well as the personnel requirements in § 300.156 and section 612(a)(14) of the Act.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended requiring schools to post the credentials of educational personnel in a place with public access, and to include in the procedural safeguards notice a parent's right to request the credentials of any teacher who supports the child in an educational environment. Another commenter stated that parents should have access to records documenting the type of supervision that is being provided when a teacher or other service provider is under the supervision of a highly qualified teacher. One commenter stated that the ESEA requires districts to provide parents with information about the personnel qualifications of their child's classroom teachers and asked whether this requirement applies to special education teachers.

Discussion: There is nothing in the Act that authorizes the Department to require schools to publicly post the credentials of educational personnel or to provide parents with information about the qualification of their child's teachers and other service providers. Section 615 of the Act describes the guaranteed procedural safeguards afforded to children with disabilities and their parents under the Act but does not address whether parents can request information about the qualifications of teachers and other service providers.

However, section 1111(h)(6) of the ESEA requires LEAs to inform parents about the quality of a school's teachers in title I schools. The ESEA requires that at the beginning of each school year, an LEA that accepts title I, part A funding must notify parents of children in title I schools that they can request information regarding their child's classroom teachers, including, at a minimum: (1) Whether the teacher has met the State requirements for licensure and certification for the grade levels and subject matters in which the teacher provides instruction; (2) whether the teacher is teaching under emergency or other provisional status through which State qualification or licensing criteria have been waived; (3) the college major and any other graduate certification or degree held by the teacher, and the field of discipline of the certification or degree; and (4) whether the child is provided services by paraprofessionals, and if so, their qualifications. In addition, each title I school must provide parents with timely notice that the parent's child has been assigned, or has been taught for four or more consecutive weeks by, a teacher who is not highly qualified. These requirements apply only to those special education teachers who teach core academic subjects in title I schools.

Changes: None.

Rule of Construction (New § 300.18(f) (Proposed § 300.18(e))

Comment: A number of commenters stated that the rule of construction in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)) and § 300.156(e) should use the same language. One commenter stated that in order to prevent confusion, the right of action limitations regarding highly qualified teachers in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)) and personnel qualifications in § 300.156(e) should use consistent language regarding individual and class actions, and clearly underscore that the limitations are applicable to both administrative and judicial actions. One commenter recommended reiterating the language from section 612(a)(14)(D) of the Act that nothing prevents a parent from filing a State complaint about staff qualifications. Another commenter expressed concern because new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)) and § 300.156(e) may be construed to prevent due process hearings when an LEA or SEA fails to provide a highly qualified teacher.

Discussion: We agree that the rule of construction in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)) and § 300.156(e) should be the same. We will change the regulations to clarify that a parent or student may not file a due process complaint on behalf of a student, or file a judicial action on behalf of a class of students for the failure of a particular SEA or LEA employee to be highly qualified; however, a parent may file a complaint about staff qualifications with the SEA. In addition to permitting a parent to file a complaint with the SEA, an organization or an individual may also file a complaint about staff qualifications with the SEA, consistent with the State complaint procedures in §§ 300.151 through 300.153.

Changes: We have added "or to prevent a parent from filing a complaint about staff qualifications with the SEA as provided for under this part" in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)).

Comment: Several commenters recommended that the regulations specify that the failure of an SEA or LEA to provide a child with a disability a highly qualified teacher can be a consideration in the determination of whether a child received FAPE, if the child is not learning the core content standards or not meeting IEP goals. However, a few commenters recommended that the regulations clarify that it is not a denial of FAPE if a special education teacher is not highly qualified.

Discussion: If the only reason a parent believes their child was denied FAPE is that the child did not have a highly qualified teacher, the parent would have no right of action under the Act on that basis. The rules of construction in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)) and § 300.156(e) do not allow a parent or student to file a due process complaint for failure of an LEA or SEA to provide a highly qualified teacher.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter expressed concern with the rule of construction in new § 300.18(f) (proposed § 300.18(e)) because there are no requirements to develop a specific enforcement system to ensure that teachers meet the highly qualified standard. A few commenters recommended changing the rule of construction so that States meet their supervisory responsibilities under the Act if LEAs in the State are sanctioned under the ESEA for not having highly qualified teachers.

Some commenters recommended clarifying that when the SEA or LEA employs an individual who is not highly qualified, States meet their responsibilities for general supervision under the Act through the notice and other sanction procedures identified under the ESEA.

One commenter stated that the regulations are silent with regard to SEA actions when meeting the general supervision requirements under the Act, and noted that unless the regulations are expanded to clarify that SEA enforcement procedures under compliance monitoring are limited to ESEA enforcement procedures, the highly qualified teacher requirements of an individual teacher may inappropriately become the target for a finding of noncompliance. This commenter further stated that the ESEA contains specific procedures for failure of a district to comply with the highly qualified teacher provisions, and if the SEA also exercises sanctioning authority under the Act, schools could be punished twice under two separate provisions of Federal law for the same infraction. The commenter recommended that to avoid double jeopardy the regulations should clarify that the ESEA enforcement procedures for a district's failure to hire a highly qualified teacher follow the provisions of the ESEA, not the Act.

Discussion: The implementation and enforcement of the highly qualified teacher standards under the ESEA and the Act complement each other. The Office of Elementary and Secondary Education (OESE) currently monitors the implementation of the highly qualified teacher standards for teachers of core academic subjects under the ESEA. This includes special education teachers who teach core academic subjects.

The Office of Special Education programs (OSEP) collects data about special education personnel qualifications and requires that SEAs establish and maintain qualifications to ensure that personnel essential to carrying out the purposes of Part B of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained. Those personnel must also have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities, consistent with § 300.156.

OESE and OSEP will share their data to ensure that the highly qualified teacher requirements under the ESEA and the Act are met. This sharing of information will also prevent schools from being punished twice for the same infraction.

Changes: None.

Teachers Hired by Private Elementary and Secondary Schools (New § 300.18(h)) (Proposed § 300.18(g))

Comment: Some commenters agreed with new § 300.18(h) (proposed § 300.18(g)), which states that the highly qualified special education teacher requirements do not apply to teachers hired by private elementary schools and secondary schools. However, many commenters disagreed, stating that children placed by an LEA in a private school are entitled to receive the same high quality instruction as special education children in public schools. A few commenters stated that LEAs will place children in private schools to avoid hiring highly qualified teachers. Some commenters stated that public funds should not be used for any school that is not held to the same high standards as public schools. Other commenters stated that children with the most significant disabilities who are placed in private schools are children with the most need for highly qualified teachers. A few commenters stated that this provision is contrary to the intent of the ESEA and the Act to support the educational achievement of children with disabilities. Other commenters stated that if instruction by a highly qualified teacher is a hallmark of FAPE, it should be an element of FAPE in any educational setting in which the child is enrolled by a public agency.

A few commenters recommended that States have the discretion to determine whether and to what extent the highly qualified teacher requirements apply to teachers who teach publicly-placed and parentally-placed children with disabilities. The commenters stated that the SEA is in the best position to weigh the needs of private school children for highly qualified teachers and to assess what effect these requirements would have on the shortage of special education teachers in the State. One commenter asked whether the highly qualified teacher requirements apply to providers in private residential treatment centers where children with disabilities are placed to receive FAPE.

Discussion: New § 300.18(h) (proposed § 300.18(g)) accurately reflects the Department's position that the highly qualified special education teacher requirements do not apply to teachers hired by private elementary schools and secondary schools. This includes teachers hired by private elementary schools and secondary schools who teach children with disabilities. Consistent with this position and in light of comments received regarding the requirements for private school teachers providing equitable services for parentally-placed private school children with disabilities under § 300.138, we will add language to new § 300.18(h) (proposed § 300.18(g)) to clarify that the highly qualified special education teacher requirements also do not apply to private school teachers who provide equitable services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities under § 300.138.

Changes: We have added language in new § 300.18(h) (proposed § 300.18(g)) to clarify that the highly qualified special education teacher requirements also do not apply to private school teachers who provide equitable services to parentally-placed private school children with disabilities under § 300.138.

Homeless Children (§ 300.19)

Comment: Several commenters requested adding the definition of homeless children in the regulations so that it is readily accessible to parents, advocates, and educators.

Discussion: The term homeless children is defined in the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act. For the reasons set forth earlier in this notice, we are not adding the definitions of other statutes to these regulations. However, we will include the current definition of homeless children in section 725 (42 U.S.C. 11434a) of the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance Act, as amended, 42 U.S.C. 11431 et seq. (McKinney-Vento Act) here for reference.

The term homeless children and youths—

(A) means individuals who lack a fixed, regular, and adequate nighttime residence (within the meaning of section 103(a)(1)); and

(B) includes—

(i) children and youths who are sharing the housing of other persons due to loss of housing, economic hardship, or a similar reason; are living in motels, hotels, trailer parks, or camping grounds due to the lack of alternative adequate accommodations; are living in emergency or transitional shelters; are abandoned in hospitals; or are awaiting foster care placement;

(ii) children and youths who have a primary nighttime residence that is a public or private place not designed for or ordinarily used as a regular sleeping accommodation for human beings (within the meaning of section 103(a)(2)(C));

(iii) children and youths who are living in cars, parks, public spaces, abandoned buildings, substandard housing, bus or train stations, or similar settings; and

(iv) migratory children (as such term is defined in section 1309 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965) who qualify as homeless for the purposes of this subtitle because the children are living in circumstances described in clauses (i) through (iii).

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that regulations are needed to address school selection and enrollment provisions under the McKinney-Vento Act. Another commenter recommended that the regulations include the McKinney-Vento Act's requirement that school stability for homeless children be maintained during periods of residential mobility and that homeless children enrolled in new schools have the ability to immediately attend classes and participate in school activities.

Discussion: We appreciate the commenters' concerns, but do not believe it is necessary to duplicate the requirements of the McKinney-Vento Act in these regulations. We believe that these issues, as well as other issues regarding children with disabilities who are homeless, would be more appropriately addressed in non-regulatory guidance, in which more detailed information and guidance can be provided on how to implement the requirements of the Act and the McKinney-Vento Act to best meet the needs of homeless children with disabilities. We will work with the Office of Elementary and Secondary Education to provide guidance and disseminate information to special education teachers and administrators regarding their responsibilities for serving children with disabilities who are homeless.

Changes: None.

Indian and Indian Tribe (§ 300.21)

Comment: One commenter expressed support for combining and moving the definition of Indian and Indian tribe from current § 300.264 to the definitions section of these regulations because the term is applicable in instances not related to BIA schools. However, another commenter stated that the definition was unnecessary because the purpose of the Act is to ensure that every child has FAPE.

Discussion: The definitions of Indian and Indian tribe are included in sections 602(12) and (13) of the Act, respectively, and are, therefore, included in subpart A of these regulations. Subpart A includes definitions for those terms and phrases about which we are frequently asked and which we believe will assist SEAs and LEAs in implementing the requirements of the Act. Including the definitions of Indian and Indian tribe in the definitions section does not in any way affect the provision of FAPE to all eligible children under the Act.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested omitting "State Indian tribes" that are not also federally-recognized tribes from the definition of Indian and Indian tribe stating that Federal recognition of an Indian tribe should be a predicate for the tribe's eligibility for Federal programs and services. One commenter expressed concern that including "State Indian tribes" in the definition could imply that the Secretary of the Interior is responsible for providing special education and related services or funding to all State Indian tribes.

Discussion: Section 602(13) of the Act and § 300.21(b) define Indian tribe as "any Federal or State Indian tribe" and do not exclude State Indian tribes that are not federally-recognized tribes. We will add a new paragraph (c) to § 300.21 clarifying that the definition of Indian and Indian tribe is not intended to indicate that the Secretary of Interior is required to provide services or funding to a State Indian tribe that is not listed in the Federal Register list of Indian entities recognized as eligible to receive services from the United States, published pursuant to Section 104 of the Federally Recognized Indian Tribe List Act of 1994, 25 U.S.C. 479a-1.

Changes: A new paragraph (c) has been added to § 300.21 to provide this clarification.

Comment: One commenter stated that it was unclear how many States have defined Indian tribes that are not defined by the Federal government and asked what the effect would be on the provision of services by including State Indian tribes in the definition. Another commenter stated that including State Indian tribes in the definition of Indian and Indian tribe implies that children of State-recognized tribes are considered differently than other children.

Discussion: As noted in the discussion responding to the previous comment, the list of Indian entities recognized as eligible to receive services from the United States is published in the Federal Register, pursuant to Section 104 of the Federally Recognized Indian Tribe List Act of 1994, 25 U.S.C. 479a-1. The Federal government does not maintain a list of other State Indian tribes. Including State Indian tribes that are not federally recognized in the definition does not affect who is responsible under the Act for the provision of services to children with disabilities who are members of State Indian tribes. Under section 611(h)(1) of the Act, the Secretary of the Interior is responsible for providing special education and related services to children age 5 through 21 with disabilities on reservations who are enrolled in elementary schools and secondary schools for Indian children operated or funded by the Secretary of the Interior. With respect to all other children aged 3 through 21 on reservations, the SEA of the State in which the reservation is located is responsible for ensuring that all the requirements of Part B of the Act are implemented.

Changes: None.

Individualized Family Service Plan (§ 300.24)

Comment: A few commenters recommended including the entire definition of individualized family service plan in the regulations so that parents and school personnel do not have to shift back and forth between documents.

Discussion: Adding the entire definition of individualized family service plan in section 636 of the Act, which includes information related to assessment and program development; periodic review; promptness after assessment; content of the plan; and parental consent, would unnecessarily add to the length of the regulations. However, the required content of the IFSP in section 636(d) of the Act is added here for reference.

The individualized family service plan shall be in writing and contain—

(1) A statement of the infant's or toddler's present levels of physical development, cognitive development, communication development, social or emotional development, and adaptive development, based on objective criteria;

(2) a statement of the family's resources, priorities, and concerns relating to enhancing the development of the family's infant or toddler with a disability;

(3) a statement of the measurable results or outcomes expected to be achieved for the infant or toddler and the family, including pre-literacy and language skills, as developmentally appropriate for the child, and the criteria, procedures, and timelines used to determine the degree to which progress toward achieving the results or outcomes is being made and whether modifications or revisions of the results or outcomes or services are necessary;

(4) a statement of specific early intervention services based on peer-reviewed research, to the extent practicable, necessary to meet the unique needs of the infant or toddler and the family, including the frequency, intensity, and method of delivering services;

(5) a statement of the natural environments in which early intervention services will appropriately be provided, including a justification of the extent, if any, to which the services will not be provided in a natural environment;

(6) the projected dates for initiation of services and the anticipated length, duration, and frequency of the services;

(7) the identification of the service coordinator from the profession most immediately relevant to the infant's or toddler's or family's needs (or who is otherwise qualified to carry out all applicable responsibilities under this part) who will be responsible for the implementation of the plan and coordination with other agencies and persons, including transition services; and

(8) the steps to be taken to support the transition of the toddler with a disability to preschool or other appropriate services.

Changes: None.

Infant or Toddler With a Disability (§ 300.25)

Comment: A few commenters recommended including the entire definition of infant or toddler with a disability in the regulations so that parents and school personnel do not have to shift back and forth between documents.

Discussion: We agree with the commenters and, therefore, will include the definition of infant or toddler with a disability from section 632(5) of the Act in these regulations for reference.

Changes: Section 300.25 has been revised to include the entire definition of infant or toddler with a disability from section 632(5) of the Act.

Institution of Higher Education (§ 300.26)

Comment: One commenter recommended including the definition of institution of higher education in these regulations.

Discussion: The term institution of higher education is defined in section 101 of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended, 20 U.S.C. 1021 et seq. (HEA). For the reasons set forth earlier in this notice, we are not adding definitions from other statutes to these regulations. However, we are including the current definition here for reference.

(a) Institution of higher education— For purposes of this Act, other than title IV, the term institution of higher education means an educational institution in any State that—

(1) Admits as regular students only persons having a certificate of graduation from a school providing secondary education, or the recognized equivalent of such a certificate;

(2) is legally authorized within such State to provide a program of education beyond secondary education;

(3) provides an educational program for which the institution awards a bachelor's degree or provides not less than a 2-year program that is acceptable for full credit toward such a degree;

(4) is a public or other nonprofit institution; and

(5) is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association, or if not so accredited, is an institution that has been granted preaccreditation status by such an agency or association that has been recognized by the Secretary for the granting of preaccreditation status, and the Secretary has determined that there is satisfactory assurance that the institution will meet the accreditation standards of such an agency or association within a reasonable time.

(b) Additional Institutions Included— For purposes of this Act, other than title IV, the term institution of higher education also includes—

(1) Any school that provides not less than a 1-year program of training to prepare students for gainful employment in a recognized occupation and that meets the provision of paragraphs (1), (2), (4), and (5) of subsection (a); and

(2) a public or nonprofit private educational institution in any State that, in lieu of the requirement in subsection (a)(1), admits as regular students persons who are beyond the age of compulsory school attendance in the State in which the institution is located.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested that we add language to the regulations that would allow Haskell and Sipi, postsecondary programs under the Haskell Indian Nations University and Southwestern Indian Polytechnic Institute Administrative Act of 1988, 25 U.S.C. 3731 et seq., to be included in the definition of institution of higher education.

Discussion: The Haskell and Sipi postsecondary programs under the Haskell Indian Nations University and Southwestern Indian Polytechnic Institute Administrative Act of 1988, 25 U.S.C. 3731 et seq. meet the statutory definition of institution of higher education in section 602(17) of the Act because they meet the definition of the term in section 101 of the HEA. The Act does not include specific institutions in the definition of institution of higher education, nor do we believe it is necessary to add specific institutions to the definition in § 300.26.

Changes: None.

Limited English Proficient (§ 300.27)

Comment: One commenter requested specific information about bilingual qualified personnel and qualified interpreters. Some commenters recommended including the definition of "limited English proficient" in the regulations.

Discussion: Each State is responsible for determining the qualifications of bilingual personnel and interpreters for children with limited English proficiency.

The term limited English proficient is defined in the ESEA. For the reasons set forth earlier in this notice, we are not adding the definitions from other statutes to these regulations. However, we will include the current definition in section 9101(25) of the ESEA here for reference.

The term limited English proficient when used with respect to an individual, means an individual—

(A) Who is aged 3 through 21;

(B) Who is enrolled or preparing to enroll in an elementary school or secondary school;

(C)(i) who was not born in the United States or whose native language is a language other than English;

(ii)(I) who is a Native American or Alaska Native, or a native resident of the outlying areas; and

(II) who comes from an environment where a language other than English has had a significant impact on the individual's level of English language proficiency; or

(iii) who is migratory, whose native language is a language other than English, and who comes from an environment where a language other than English is dominant; and

(D) whose difficulties in speaking, reading, writing, or understanding the English language may be sufficient to deny the individual—

(i) the ability to meet the State's proficient level of achievement on State assessments described in section 1111(b)(3);

(ii) the ability to successfully achieve in classrooms where the language of instruction is English; or

(iii) the opportunity to participate fully in society.

Changes: None.

Local Educational Agency (§ 300.28)

Comment: One commenter suggested revising § 300.28 to ensure that all responsibilities and rights attributed to an LEA apply to an ESA.

Discussion: We believe that the provisions in § 300.12 and § 300.28 are clear that ESAs have full responsibilities and rights as LEAs. We, therefore, decline to revise § 300.28.

Changes: None.

Comment: None.

Discussion: Through its review of charter schools' access to Federal funding, it has come to the Department's attention that additional guidance is needed regarding whether charter schools that are established as their own LEAs must be nonprofit entities in order to meet the definition of LEA in § 300.28. The definition of LEA in § 300.28(b)(2) specifically includes a public charter school that is established as an LEA under State law and that exercises administrative control or direction of, or performs a service function for, itself. For purposes of the Act, the definitions of charter school, elementary school, and secondary school in §§ 300.7, 300.13, and 300.36, respectively, require that a public elementary or secondary charter school be a nonprofit entity. Therefore, a public elementary or secondary charter school established as its own LEA under State law, also must be a nonprofit entity. Although these regulations do not specifically define nonprofit, the definition in 34 CFR § 77.1 applies to these regulations. In order to eliminate any confusion on this issue, we will revise the definition of LEA to reflect that a public elementary or secondary charter school that is established as its own LEA under State law must be a nonprofit entity.

Changes: For clarity, we have revised § 300.28(b)(2) by inserting the term "nonprofit" before "charter school that is established as an LEA under State law."

Comment: One commenter stated that § 300.28(c) is in error from a technical drafting perspective because it does not follow the statutory language in section 602(19)(C) of the Act. The commenter also suggested adding a definition of "BIA funded school," rather than adding a new definition of LEA related to BIA funded schools.

Discussion: We agree that § 300.28(c) does not accurately reflect the statutory language in section 602(19)(C) of the Act and, as written, could be interpreted as defining BIA funded schools. This was not our intent. Rather, the intent was to include "BIA funded schools" in the definition of LEA, consistent with section 602(19)(C) of the Act.

In order to correct the technical drafting error, we will change § 300.28(c) to accurately reflect section 602(19)(C) of the Act. We decline to add a definition of "BIA funded schools." The Act does not define this term and the Department does not believe that it is necessary to define the term.

Changes: In order to correct a technical drafting error, § 300.28(c) has been revised to be consistent with statutory language.

Native Language (§ 300.29)

Comment: A few commenters expressed support for retaining the definition of native language, stating that it is important to clarify that sign language is the native language of many children who are deaf. One commenter stated it is important to clarify that the language normally used by the child may be different than the language normally used by the parents. Another commenter stated that the definition of native language does not adequately cover individuals with unique language and communication techniques such as deafness or blindness or children with no written language.

Discussion: The definition of native language was expanded in the 1999 regulations to ensure that the full range of needs of children with disabilities whose native language is other than English is appropriately addressed. The definition clarifies that in all direct contact with the child (including an evaluation of the child), native language means the language normally used by the child and not that of the parents, if there is a difference between the two. The definition also clarifies that for individuals with deafness or blindness, or for individuals with no written language, the native language is the mode of communication that is normally used by the individual (such as sign language, Braille, or oral communication). We believe this language adequately addresses the commenters' concerns.

Changes: None.

Parent (§ 300.30)

Comment: Several commenters objected to the term "natural parent" in the definition of parent because "natural parent" presumes there are "unnatural parents." The commenters recommended using "birth parent" or "biological parent" throughout the regulations.

Discussion: We understand that many people find the term "natural parent" offensive. We will, therefore, use the term "biological parent" to refer to a non-adoptive parent.

Changes: We have replaced the term "natural parent" with "biological parent" in the definition of parent and throughout these regulations.

Comment: A significant number of commenters recommended retaining the language in current § 300.20(b), which states that a foster parent can act as a parent if the biological parent's authority to make educational decisions on the child's behalf have been extinguished under State law, and the foster parent has an ongoing, long-term parental relationship with the child; is willing to make the educational decisions required of parents under the Act; and has no interest that would conflict with the interest of the child.

A few commenters stated that current § 300.20(b) better protects children's interests and should not be removed. Another commenter stated that removing current § 300.20 will have unintended consequences for the many foster children who move frequently to new homes because there will be confusion as to who has parental rights under the Act. A few commenters stated that short-term foster parents may not have the knowledge of the child or the willingness to actively participate in the special education process, which will effectively leave the child without a parent.

One commenter stated that § 300.30 needs to be changed to protect biological and adoptive parents from arbitrary decisions by educational officials who lack the legal authority to make educational decisions for the child and to ensure that when no biological or adoptive parent is available, a person with a long-term relationship with, and commitment to, the child has decision-making authority.

Discussion: Congress changed the definition of parent in the Act. The definition of parent in these regulations reflects the revised statutory definition of parent in section 602(23) of the Act.

The Department understands the concerns expressed by the commenters, but believes that the changes requested would not be consistent with the intent of the statutory changes. In changing the definition of parent in the Act, Congress incorporated some of the wording from the current regulations and did not incorporate in the new definition of parent, the current foster parent language referenced by the commenters.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended allowing a foster parent who does not have a long-term relationship to be the parent, if a court, after notifying all interested parties, determines that it is in the best interest of the child.

Discussion: Section 300.30(b)(2) clearly states that if a person is specified in a judicial order or decree to act as the parent for purposes of § 300.30, that person would be considered the parent under Part B of the Act.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that § 300.30(a)(2) withdraws the rights of biological parents under the Act without due process of law.

Discussion: We do not agree with the commenter. If more than one person is attempting to act as a parent, § 300.30(b)(1) provides that the biological or adoptive parent is presumed to be the parent if that person is attempting to act as the parent under § 300.30, unless the biological or adoptive parent does not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child, or there is a judicial order or decree specifying some other person to act as a parent under Part B of the Act. We do not believe that provisions regarding lack of legal authority or judicial orders or decrees would apply unless there has already been a determination, through appropriate legal processes, that the biological parent should not make educational decisions for the child or that another person has been ordered to serve as the parent.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that § 300.30(a)(2) is unwieldy and difficult to implement because it requires extensive fact finding by the LEA to determine whether any contractual obligations would prohibit the foster parent from acting as a parent.

Discussion: The statutory language concerning the definition of parent was changed to permit foster parents to be considered a child's parent, unless State law prohibits a foster parent from serving as a parent. The language in the regulations also recognizes that similar restrictions may exist in State regulations or in contractual agreements between a State or local entity and a foster parent, and should be accorded similar deference. We believe it is essential for LEAs to have knowledge of State laws, regulations, and any contractual agreements between a State or local entity and a foster parent to ensure that the requirements in § 300.30(a)(2) are properly implemented. States and LEAs should develop procedures to make this information more readily and easily available so that LEAs do not have to engage in extensive fact finding each time a child with a foster parent enrolls in a school.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the regulations need to clarify that guardians ad litem do not meet the definition of a parent except for wards of the State where consent for the initial evaluation has been given by an individual appointed by the judge to represent the child in the educational decisions concerning the child.

Discussion: We agree that guardians with limited appointments that do not qualify them to act as a parent of the child generally, or do not authorize them to make educational decisions for the child, should not be considered to be a parent within the meaning of these regulations. What is important is the legal authority granted to individuals appointed by a court, and not the term used to identify them. Whether a person appointed as a guardian ad litem has the requisite authority to be considered a parent under this section depends on State law and the nature of the person's appointment. We will revise § 300.30(a)(3) to clarify that a guardian must be authorized to act as the child's parent generally or must be authorized to make educational decisions for the child in order to fall within the definition of parent.

Changes: We have added language in § 300.30(a)(3) to clarify when a guardian can be considered a parent under the Act.

Comment: One commenter requested adding a "temporary parent" appointed in accordance with sections 615(b)(2) or 639(a)(5) of the Act to the definition of parent.

Discussion: There is nothing in the Act that would prevent a temporary surrogate parent from having all the rights of a parent. Note 89 of the Conf. Rpt., p. 35810, provides that appropriate staff members of emergency shelters, transitional shelters, independent living programs, and street outreach programs would not be considered to be employees of agencies involved in the education or care of unaccompanied youth (and thus prohibited from serving as a surrogate parent), provided that such a role is temporary until a surrogate parent can be appointed who meets the requirements for a surrogate parent in § 300.519(d). This provision is included in § 300.519(f), regarding surrogate parents. Therefore, we do not believe it is necessary to add "temporary parent" to the definition of parent in § 300.30.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters stated that the definition of parent is confusing, especially in light of the definition of ward of the State in new § 300.45 (proposed § 300.44) and the LEA's obligation to appoint a surrogate parent. These commenters stated that § 300.30 should cross-reference the definition of ward of the State in new § 300.45 (proposed § 300.44) and state that the appointed surrogate parent for a child who is a ward of the State is the parent.

Discussion: Section 615(b)(2) of the Act does not require the automatic appointment of a surrogate parent for every child with a disability who is a ward of the State. States and LEAs must ensure that the rights of these children are protected and that a surrogate parent is appointed, if necessary, as provided in § 300.519(b)(1). If a child who is a ward of the State already has a person who meets the definition of parent in § 300.30, and that person is willing and able to assume the responsibilities of a parent under the Act, a surrogate parent might not be needed. Accordingly, we do not believe it is necessary to make the changes suggested by the commenters.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter expressed concern that public agencies will require biological or adoptive parents to affirmatively assert their rights or to take action in order to be presumed to be the parent. The commenter requested clarifying in § 300.30(b)(1) that biological or adoptive parents do not have to take affirmative steps in order for the presumption to apply.

Discussion: The biological or adoptive parent would be presumed to be the parent under these regulations, unless a question was raised about their legal authority. There is nothing in the Act that requires the biological or adoptive parent to affirmatively assert their rights to be presumed to be the parent. We continue to believe that § 300.30(b)(1) is clear and, therefore, will not make the changes requested by the commenters.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters recommended removing "when attempting to act as a parent under this part” in § 300.30(b)(1). A few commenters stated that there is no explanation of what it means for a biological parent to “attempt to act as a parent.” Another commenter stated that the regulations do not set any guidelines for determining how a public agency decides if a biological or adoptive parent is attempting to act as a parent.

One commenter stated “attempting to act” would require LEAs to make determinations about a biological parent’s decision-making authority and this should be left up to courts to determine. One commenter stated that the regulations permit multiple persons to act as a child’s parent and do not adequately set forth a process to determine who should be identified as the actual parent for decision-making purposes. The commenter further stated that the regulations do not set out a procedure or a timeframe by which public agency officials should determine if a biological parent has retained the right to make educational decisions for his or her child.

One commenter stated that the definition of parent gives school districts excessive power; for example a school could appoint a surrogate parent if the foster parent was excessively demanding. The commenter further stated that a clearer order of priority and selection mechanism with judicial oversight needs to be in place so that school districts cannot “parent shop” for the least assertive individual, and so that relatives, foster parents, social workers, and others involved with the child will know who has educational decision making authority.

One commenter questioned whether § 300.30(b) helps identify parents or confuses situations in which the person to be designated the parent is in dispute. Another commenter stated that the requirements in § 300.30(b) place the responsibility of determining who serves as the parent of a child in foster care directly on the shoulders of school administrators who are not child welfare experts. The commenter recommended that a foster parent automatically qualify as a parent when the rights of the child’s biological parents have been extinguished and the foster parent has a long-term relationship with the child, no conflict of interest, and is willing to make educational decisions.

Discussion: Section 300.30(b) was added to assist schools and public agencies in determining the appropriate person to serve as the parent under Part B of the Act in those difficult situations in which more than one individual is “attempting to act as a parent” and make educational decisions for a child.

It recognizes the priority of the biological or adoptive parent and the authority of the courts to make decisions, and does not leave these decisions to school administrators.

The phrase “attempting to act as a parent” is generally meant to refer to situations in which an individual attempts to assume the responsibilities of a parent under the Act. An individual may “attempt to act as a parent” under the Act in many situations; for example, if an individual provides consent for an evaluation or reevaluation, or attends an IEP Team meeting as the child’s parent. We do not believe it is necessary or possible to include in these regulations the numerous situations in which an individual may “attempt to act as a parent.”

Section 300.30(b)(1) provides that the biological or adoptive parent is presumed to be the parent if that person is attempting to act as the parent under § 300.30, unless the biological or adoptive parent does not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child, or there is a judicial order or decree specifying some other person to act as a parent under Part B of the Act. Section 300.30(b)(2) provides that if a person (or persons) is specified in a judicial order or decree to act as the parent for purposes of § 300.30, that person would be the parent under Part B of the Act. We do not believe that it is necessary for these regulations to establish procedures or a timeline for a public agency to determine whether a biological parent has retained the right to make educational decisions for a child. Such procedures and timelines will vary depending on how judicial orders or decrees are routinely handled in a State or locality, and are best left to State and local officials to determine.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended modifying § 300.30(b)(2) to clarify that a court has the discretion to decide who has the right to make educational decisions for a child. One commenter recommended clarifying that the judicial decree referred to in § 300.30(b)(2) relates specifically to divorce situations, rather than situations involving children who are wards of the State. Another commenter stated that § 300.30(b)(2) appears to be aimed at situations where the court has designated a parent, such as in a custody decree, and that it is not clear what the provision adds.

Discussion: Section 300.30(b)(2) specifically states that if a judicial decree or order identifies a person or persons to act as the parent of a child or to make educational decisions on behalf of a child, then that person would be determined to be the parent. It was intended to add clarity about who would be designated a parent when there are competing individuals under § 300.30(a)(1) through (4) who could be considered a parent for purposes of this part. It is not necessary to specify or limit this language to provide that the judicial decree or order applies to specific situations, such as divorce or custody cases. However, it should not authorize courts to appoint individuals other than those identified in § 300.30(a)(1) through (4) to act as parents under this part. Specific authority for court appointment of individuals to provide consent for initial evaluations in limited circumstances is in § 300.300(a)(2)(c). Authority for court appointment of a surrogate parent in certain situations is in § 300.519(c).

Changes: We have revised § 300.30(b)(2) to limit its application to individuals identified under § 300.30(a)(1) through (4) and have deleted the phrase “except that a public agency that provides education or care for the child may not act as the parent” as unnecessary.

Comment: One commenter recommended allowing foster parents to act as parents only when the birth parent’s rights have been extinguished or terminated. A few commenters requested that the regulations clarify the circumstances under which a foster parent can take over educational decision making. One commenter stated that allowing a foster parent to act as a parent would disrupt the special education process.

Discussion: Under § 300.30(a)(2), a foster parent can be considered a parent, unless State law, regulations, or contractual obligations with a State or local entity prohibit a foster parent from acting as a parent. However, in cases where a foster parent and a biological or adoptive parent attempt to act as the parent, § 300.30(b)(1) clarifies that the biological or adoptive parent is presumed to be the parent, unless the biological or adoptive parent does not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child. Section 300.30(b)(2) further clarifies that if a person or persons such as a foster parent or foster parents is specified in a judicial order or decree to act as the parent for purposes of § 300.30, that person would be the parent under Part B of the Act. We do not believe that further clarification is necessary.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended that “extinguished under State law” be defined to mean both temporary and permanent termination of parental rights to make educational decisions because this would allow courts to make more timely decisions regarding the role of a parent and not feel bound to wait for a full termination of parental rights.

Discussion: The phrase “extinguished under State law” is not used in the Act or these regulations. The phrase was used in the definition of parent in current § 300.20(b)(1). The comparable provision in these regulations is in § 300.30(b)(1), which refers to situations in which the “biological or adoptive parent does not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child.” We do not believe that either of these phrases affects the timeliness of decision making by courts regarding parental rights.

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters stated that “consistent with State law” should be included in § 300.30(b)(2) in order to honor local laws already in place to protect these children.

Discussion: We do not believe the change recommended by the commenters is necessary. Courts issue decrees and orders consistent with applicable laws.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that it would not be wise to completely exclude an agency involved in the education or care of the child from serving as a parent because situations in which an LEA acts as a parent are very rare and only occur under very unusual circumstances.

Discussion: The exclusion of an agency involved in the education or care of the child from serving as a parent is consistent with the statutory prohibition that applies to surrogate parents in sections 615(b)(2) and 639(a)(5) of the Act.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended that the regulations clarify the responsibilities of the LEA when a biological or adoptive parent and a foster parent attempt to act as the parent. Although the regulations state that the biological or adoptive parent must be presumed to be the parent unless the biological or adoptive parent has been divested of this authority by a court, the commenter stated that the regulations are not clear as to whether the LEA has the duty to notify the biological or adoptive parent, accommodate his or her schedule, or otherwise take steps to facilitate the biological or adoptive parent’s participation.

One commenter recommended clarifying the relative rights of a biological or adoptive parent and a foster parent when a child is in foster care and the foster parent is not prohibited by the State from acting as a parent.

Discussion: Section 300.30(b)(1) states that when more than one party is qualified under § 300.30(a) to act as the parent, the biological or adoptive parent is presumed to be the parent (unless a judicial decree or order identifies a specific person or persons to act as the parent of a child). The biological or adoptive parent has all the rights and responsibilities of a parent under the Act, and the LEA must provide notice to the parent, accommodate his or her schedule when arranging meetings, and involve the biological or adoptive parent in the education of the child with a disability. Thus, if a child is in foster care (and the foster parent is not prohibited by the State from acting as a parent) and the biological or adoptive parent is attempting to act as a parent, the biological or adoptive parent is presumed to be the parent unless the biological or adoptive parent does not have legal authority to make educational decisions for the child or a judicial decree or order identifies a specific person or persons to act as the parent of a child.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters stated that it is unclear when or under what circumstances a biological or adoptive parent ceases or surrenders their rights to a foster parent to make educational decisions for a child. One commenter stated that the regulations should define clearly the situations when this would occur and the level of proof that must be shown by the party seeking to make educational decisions on behalf of a child. The commenter stated that only under the most extreme and compelling circumstances should a court be able to appoint another individual to take the place of a biological or adoptive parent.

Discussion: It would be inappropriate and beyond the authority of the Department to regulate on the termination of parental rights to make educational decisions. It is the responsibility of a court to decide whether to appoint another person or persons to act as a parent of a child or to make educational decisions on behalf of a child.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter requested clarifying to whom LEAs must provide notice, or obtain consent in situations where there are disputes between biological or adoptive parents (e.g., when parents separate or divorce).

Discussion: In situations where the parents of a child are divorced, the parental rights established by the Act apply to both parents, unless a court order or State law specifies otherwise.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended clarifying in the regulations that a private agency that contracts with a public agency for the education or care of the child may not act as a parent.

Discussion: A private agency that contracts with a public agency for the education or care of the child, in essence, works for the public agency, and therefore, could not act as a parent under the Act. We do not believe it is necessary to regulate on this matter.

Changes: None.

Parent Training and Information Center (§ 300.31)

Comment: One commenter requested describing a parent training and information center (PTI) and a community parent resource center (CPRC) in the regulations, rather than referencing section 671 or 672 of the Act.

Discussion: We do not believe it is necessary to include these descriptions in the regulations. Section 671 of the Act describes the program requirements for a PTI and section 672 of the Act describes the program requirements for a CPRC. These sections describe the activities required of PTIs and CPRCs, as well as the application process for discretionary funding under Part D of the Act, and would unnecessarily add to the length of the regulations.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that, in order for a State or LEA to be considered for funding under the Act, the regulations should require partnerships with the PTIs and the CPRCs, as well as input from PTIs and CPRCs on assessing State and local needs, and developing and implementing a plan to address State and local needs.

Discussion: We disagree with the commenter. There is nothing in the Act that requires States or LEAs, as a condition of funding, to obtain input from PTIs and CPRCs in assessing needs or developing and implementing a plan to address State or local needs. States and LEAs are free to do so, but it is not a requirement for funding.

Changes: None.

Public Agency (§ 300.33)

Comment: One commenter stated that the term public agency is not in the Act and noted that no State has created a new type of public education agency beyond LEAs and SEAs. The commenter stated that including the definition of public agency in the regulations, therefore, raises concerns regarding the responsibility and authority for future special education services.

Discussion: The definition of public agency refers to all agencies responsible for various activities under the Act. The terms “LEA” or “SEA” are used when referring to a subset of public agencies. We disagree that the definition raises concerns about the responsibility and authority for future educational services because the term public agency is used only for those situations in which a particular regulation does not apply only to SEAs and LEAs.

During our internal review of the NPRM, we found several errors in the definition of public agency. Our intent was to use the same language in current § 300.22. We will, therefore, correct these errors to be consistent with current § 300.22. Additionally, we will clarify that a charter school must be a nonprofit charter school. As noted in the discussion regarding § 300.28(b)(2), we clarified that a charter school established as its own LEA under State law, must be a nonprofit charter school.

Changes: We have removed the phrase “otherwise included as” the second time it appears, and replaced it with “a school of an” in § 300.33. We have also changed “LEAs” to “LEA” and “ESAs” to “ESA” the third time these abbreviations appear in § 300.33.

Related Services (§ 300.34)

Related Services, General (§ 300.34(a))

Comment: One commenter requested defining related services as enabling a child with a disability to receive FAPE in the LRE.

Discussion: The definition of related services is consistent with section 601(26) of the Act, which does not refer to LRE. The Department believes that revising the regulations as requested would inappropriately expand the definition in the Act. Furthermore, the regulations in § 300.114(a)(2)(ii) already prevent placement of a child outside the regular education environment unless the child cannot be satisfactorily educated in the regular education environment with the use of supplementary aids and services. Therefore, we see no need to make the change suggested by the commenter.

Changes: None.

Comment: We received numerous requests to revise § 300.34 to add specific services in the definition of related services. A few commenters recommended including marriage and family therapy. One commenter recommended adding nutrition therapy and another commenter recommended adding recreation therapy. A significant number of commenters recommended adding art, music, and dance therapy. One commenter recommended adding services to ensure that medical devices, such as those used for breathing, nutrition, and other bodily functions, are working properly. One commenter requested adding programming and training for parents and staff as a related service.

A few commenters requested clarification on whether auditory training and aural habilitation are related services. One commenter asked whether hippotherapy should be included as a related service. Other commenters recommended adding language in the regulations stating that the list of related services is not exhaustive. A few commenters asked whether a service is prohibited if it is not listed in the definition of related services.

Discussion: Section 300.34(a) and section 602(26) of the Act state that related services include other supportive services that are required to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education. We believe this clearly conveys that the list of services in § 300.34 is not exhaustive and may include other developmental, corrective, or supportive services if they are required to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education. It would be impractical to list every service that could be a related service, and therefore, no additional language will be added to the regulations.

Consistent with §§ 300.320 through 300.328, each child’s IEP Team, which includes the child’s parent along with school officials, determines the instruction and services that are needed for an individual child to receive FAPE. In all cases concerning related services, the IEP Team’s determination about appropriate services must be reflected in the child’s IEP, and those listed services must be provided in accordance with the IEP at public expense and at no cost to the parents. Nothing in the Act or in the definition of related services requires the provision of a related service to a child unless the child’s IEP Team has determined that the related service is required in order for the child to benefit from special education and has included that service in the child’s IEP.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended adding behavior interventions to the list of related services, stating that while positive behavioral interventions and supports are often provided by one of the professionals listed in § 300.34(c), other types of specialists also often provide them.

Discussion: The list of related services in § 300.34 is consistent with section 602(26) of the Act and, as noted above, we do not believe it is necessary to add additional related services to this list. We agree with the commenter that there may be many professionals in a school district who are involved in the development of positive behavioral interventions. Including the development of positive behavioral interventions in the description of activities under psychological services (§ 300.34(b)(10)) and social work services in schools (§ 300.34(b)(14)) is not intended to imply that school psychologists and social workers are automatically qualified to perform these services or to prohibit other qualified personnel from providing these services, consistent with State requirements.

Changes: None.

Exception; Services That Apply to Children With Cochlear Implants (§ 300.34(b))

Comment: Many commenters opposed the exclusion of surgically implanted devices from the definition of related services. Many commenters stated that the Act does not exclude the maintenance or programming of surgically implanted devices from the definition of related services, and that the regulations should specifically state that related services includes the provision of mapping services for a child with a cochlear implant. A few commenters stated that the issue of mapping cochlear implants needs to be clarified so that schools and parents understand who is responsible for providing this service. One commenter requested that the regulations clearly specify that optimization of a cochlear implant is a medical service and define mapping as an audiological service.

Discussion: The term “mapping” refers to the optimization of a cochlear implant and is not included in the definition of related services. Specifically, “mapping” and “optimization” refer to adjusting the electrical stimulation levels provided by the cochlear implant that is necessary for long-term post-surgical follow-up of a cochlear implant. Although the cochlear implant must be properly mapped in order for the child to hear well in school, the mapping does not have to be done in school or during the school day in order for it to be effective. The exclusion of mapping from the definition of related services reflects the language in Senate Report (S. Rpt.) No. 108–185, p. 8, which states that the Senate committee did not intend that mapping a cochlear implant, or even the costs associated with mapping, such as transportation costs and insurance co-payments, be the responsibility of a school district. These services and costs are incidental to a particular course of treatment chosen by the child's parents to maximize the child's functioning, and are not necessary to ensure that the child is provided access to education, regardless of the child's disability, including maintaining health and safety while in school. We will add language in § 300.34(b) to clarify that mapping a cochlear implant is an example of device optimization and is not a related service under the Act.

Changes: We have added "(e.g., mapping)" following "functioning" in § 300.34(b) to clarify that mapping a surgically implanted device is not a related service under the Act.

Comment: A significant number of commenters stated that children with cochlear implants need instruction in listening and language skills to process spoken language, just as children with hearing loss who use hearing aids, and requested that the regulations clarify that excluding the optimization of device functioning from the definition of related services does not impact a child's access to related services such as speech and language therapy, assistive listening devices, appropriate classroom acoustics, auditory training, educational interpreters, cued speech transliterators, and specialized instruction.

One commenter requested that the regulations explicitly state whether a public agency is required to provide more speech and language services or audiology services to a child with a cochlear implant. Another commenter requested that the regulations clarify that optimization only refers to access to assistive technology, such as assistive listening devices (e.g., personal frequency modulation (FM) systems) and monitoring and troubleshooting of the device function that is required under proper functioning of hearing aids.

Discussion: Optimization generally refers to the mapping necessary to make the cochlear implant work properly and involves adjusting the electrical stimulation levels provided by the cochlear implant. The exclusion of mapping as a related service is not intended to deny a child with a disability assistive technology (e.g., FM system); proper classroom acoustical modifications; educational support services (e.g., educational interpreters); or routine checking to determine if the external component of a surgically implanted device is turned on and working. Neither does the exclusion of mapping as a related service preclude a child with a cochlear implant from receiving the related services (e.g., speech and language services) that are necessary for the child to benefit from special education services. As the commenters point out, a child with a cochlear implant may still require related services, such as speech and language therapy, to process spoken language just as other children with hearing loss who use hearing aids may need those services and are entitled to them under the Act if they are required for the child to benefit from special education. Each child's IEP Team, which includes the child's parent along with school officials, determines the related services, and the amount of services, that are required for the child to benefit from special education. It is important that the regulations clearly state that a child with a cochlear implant or other surgically implanted medical device is entitled to related services that are determined by the child's IEP Team to be necessary for the child to benefit from special education. Therefore, we will add language in § 300.34(b) to clarify that a child with a cochlear implant or other surgically implanted medical device is entitled to those related services that are required for the child to benefit from special education, as determined by the child's IEP Team.

Changes: We have reformatted § 300.34(b) and added a new paragraph (2) to clarify that a child with a cochlear implant or other surgically implanted device is entitled to the related services that are determined by the child's IEP Team to be required for the child to benefit from special education. We have also added the phrase "services that apply to children with surgically implanted devices, including cochlear implants" to the heading in § 300.34(b).

Comment: One commenter expressed concern that excluding the optimization of device functioning and maintenance of the device as related services will establish different standards for serving children with cochlear implants versus children who use hearing aids and other external amplification devices, and recommended clarifying that routine monitoring of cochlear implants and other surgically implanted devices to ensure that they are functioning in a safe and effective manner is permitted under the Act.

A few commenters stated that some schools are interpreting the exclusion of device optimization, functioning, and maintenance to mean that they do not have to help the child change a battery in the externally worn speech processor connected with the surgically implanted device, make certain that it is turned on, or help the child to learn to listen with the cochlear implant. One commenter stated that children with cochlear implants should have the same services as children who use a hearing aid when the battery needs changing or equipment breaks down.

One commenter stated that § 300.34(b) is confusing and should explicitly state that the exception of the optimization of device functioning, maintenance of the device, or replacement of the device is limited to surgically implanted devices. The commenter stated that the language could erroneously lead to an interpretation that this exception is applicable to all medical devices. One commenter expressed concern that this misinterpretation could put insulin pumps and other medical devices that are required for the health of the child in the same category as cochlear implants.

A few commenters stated that it is important to clarify that excluding the optimization of device functioning and the maintenance of the device should not be construed to exclude medical devices and services that children need to assist with breathing, nutrition, and other bodily functions while the child is involved with education and other school-related activities.

One commenter stated that a school nurse, aide, teacher's aide, or any other person who is qualified and trained should be allowed to monitor and maintain, as necessary, a surgically implanted device.

Discussion: A cochlear implant is an electronic device surgically implanted to stimulate nerve endings in the inner ear (cochlea) in order to receive and process sound and speech. The device has two parts, one that is surgically implanted and attached to the skull and, the second, an externally worn speech processor that attaches to a port in the implant. The internal device is intended to be permanent.

Optimization or "mapping" adjusts or fine tunes the electrical stimulation levels provided by the cochlear implant and is changed as a child learns to discriminate signals to a finer degree. Optimization services are generally provided at a specialized clinic. As we discussed previously regarding § 300.34, optimization services are not a covered service under the Act. However, a public agency still has a role in providing services and supports to help children with cochlear implants.

Particularly with younger children or children who have recently obtained implants, teachers and related services personnel frequently are the first to notice changes in the child's perception of sounds that the child may be missing. This may manifest as a lack of attention or understanding on the part of the child or frustration in communicating. The changes may indicate a need for remapping, and we would expect that school personnel would communicate with the child's parents about these issues. To the extent that adjustments to the devices are required, a specially trained professional would provide the remapping, which is not considered the responsibility of the public agency.

In many ways, there is no substantive difference between serving a child with a cochlear implant in a school setting and serving a child with a hearing aid. The externally worn speech processor connected with the surgically implanted device is similar to a hearing aid in that it must be turned on and properly functioning in order for the child to benefit from his or her education. Parents of children with cochlear implants and parents of children with hearing aids both frequently bring to school extra batteries, cords, and other parts for the hearing aids and externally worn speech processors connected with the surgically-implanted devices, especially for younger children. The child also may need to be positioned so that he or she can directly see the teacher at all times, or may need an FM amplification system such as an audio loop.

For services that are not necessary to provide access to education by maintaining the health or safety of the child while in school, the distinguishing factor between those services that are not covered under the Act, such as mapping, and those that are covered, such as verifying that a cochlear implant is functioning properly, in large measure, is the level of expertise required. The maintenance and monitoring of surgically implanted devices require the expertise of a licensed physician or an individual with specialized technical expertise beyond that typically available from school personnel. On the other hand, trained lay persons or nurses can routinely check an externally worn processor connected with a surgically implanted device to determine if the batteries are charged and the external processor is operating. (As discussed below, the Act does require public agencies to provide those services that are otherwise related services and are necessary to maintain a child's health or safety in school even if those services require specialized training.) Teachers and related services providers can be taught to first check the externally worn speech processor to make sure it is turned on, the volume and sensitivity settings are correct, and the cable is connected, in much the same manner as they are taught to make sure a hearing aid is properly functioning. To allow a child to sit in a classroom when the child's hearing aid or cochlear implant is not functioning is to effectively exclude the child from receiving an appropriate education. Therefore, we believe it is important to clarify that a public agency is responsible for the routine checking of the external components of a surgically implanted device in much the same manner as a public agency is responsible for the proper functioning of hearing aids.

The public agency also is responsible for providing services necessary to maintain the health and safety of a child while the child is in school, with breathing, nutrition, and other bodily functions (e.g., nursing services, suctioning a tracheotomy, urinary catheterization) if these services can be provided by someone who has been trained to provide the service and are not the type of services that can only be provided by a licensed physician. (Cedar Rapids Community School District v. Garret F., 526 U.S. 66 (1999)).

Changes: We have added new § 300.113 to cover the routine checking of hearing aids and external components of surgically implanted devices. The requirement for the routine checking of hearing aids has been removed from proposed § 300.105 and included in new § 300.113(a). The requirement for routine checking of an external component of a surgically implanted medical device has been added as new § 300.113(b). The requirements for assistive technology devices and services remain in § 300.105 and the heading has been changed to reflect this change. We have also included a reference to new § 300.113(b) in new § 300.34(b)(2).

Comment: A few commenters stated that specialized cochlear implant audiologists who are at implant centers or closely associated with them should program cochlear implants. One commenter stated that, typically, school audiologists and school personnel do not have the specialized experience to program cochlear implants.

Discussion: The personnel with the specific expertise or licensure required for the optimization (e.g., mapping) of surgically implanted devices are decisions to be made within each State based on applicable State statutes and licensing requirements. Since mapping is not covered under the Act, personnel standards for individuals who provide mapping services are beyond the scope of these regulations.

Changes: None.

Audiology (§ 300.34(c)(1))

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of audiology does not reflect current audiology practice in schools and recommended new language to include services for children with auditory-related disorders, provision of comprehensive audiologic habilitation and rehabilitation services; consultation and training of teachers and other school staff; and involvement in classroom acoustics.

Discussion: The definition of audiology is sufficiently broad to enable audiologists to be involved in the activities described by the commenter. We do not believe it is necessary to change the definition to add the specific functions recommended by the commenter.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters requested adding mapping services for a child with a cochlear implant to the definition of audiology.

Discussion: For the reasons discussed previously in this section, § 300.34(b) specifically excludes the optimization of a surgically implanted device from the definition of related services. This includes mapping of a cochlear implant.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of audiology appears to be limited to children who are deaf or hard of hearing, and recommended adding language to allow children without expressive speech to receive such services.

Discussion: The term audiology, as defined in § 300.34(c)(1), focuses on identifying and serving children who are deaf or hard of hearing. It is not necessary to add language in the regulations regarding children without expressive speech because the determining factor of whether audiology services are appropriate for a child is whether the child may be deaf or hard of hearing, not whether a child has expressive speech.

Changes: None.

Early Identification and Assessment of Disabilities (§ 300.34(c)(3))

Comment: Some commenters noted that "early identification and assessment of disabilities" was removed from the list of related services in § 300.34(a).

Discussion: "Early identification and assessment of disabilities" was inadvertently omitted from the list of related services in § 300.34(a).

Changes: "Early identification and assessment" will be added to the list of related services in § 300.34(a).

Interpreting Services (§ 300.34(c)(4))

Comment: One commenter recommended that the definition of interpreting services requires that such services be provided by a qualified interpreter who is able to effectively, accurately, and impartially use any specialized vocabulary, both receptively and expressively. A few commenters strongly recommended requiring interpreting services to be provided by qualified interpreters to ensure equivalent communication access and effective communication with, and for, children who are deaf or hard of hearing. The commenter stated that personnel standards for interpreters vary greatly across SEAs and LEAs, and requiring qualified interpreters would be consistent with the definition of other related services included in these regulations such as physical therapy and occupational therapy.

One commenter recommended defining the function of an interpreter as a person who facilitates communication between children who are deaf or hard of hearing, staff, and children, regardless of the job title.

Discussion: Section 300.156, consistent with section 612(a)(14) of the Act, clarifies that it is the responsibility of each State to establish personnel qualifications to ensure that personnel necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained and have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities. It is not necessary to add more specific functions of individuals providing interpreting services, as recommended by the commenters. States are appropriately given the flexibility to determine the qualifications and responsibilities of personnel, based on the needs of children with disabilities in the State.

Changes: None.

Comment: A few commenters recommended including American sign language and sign language systems in the definition of interpreting services.

Discussion: The definition of interpreting services is sufficiently broad to include American sign language and sign language systems, and therefore, will not be changed. We believe it is important to include sign language transliteration (e.g., translation systems such as Signed Exact English and Contact Signing), in addition to sign language interpretation of another language (e.g., American sign language) in the definition of interpreting services, and will add this language to § 300.34(c)(4)(i).

Changes: We have added language to § 300.34(c)(4)(i) to include sign language transliteration.

Comment: A few commenters recommended changing the definition of interpreting services to clarify that the need for interpreting services must be based on a child's disability and not degree of English proficiency.

Discussion: The definition of interpreting services clearly states that interpreting services are used with children who are deaf or hard of hearing. The nature and type of interpreting services required for children who are deaf or hard of hearing and also limited in English proficiency are to be determined by reference to the Department's regulations and policies regarding students with limited English proficiency. For example, the Department's regulations in 34 CFR part 100, implementing Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. 2000d, require that recipients of Federal financial assistance ensure meaningful access to their programs and activities by students who are limited English proficient, including those who are deaf or hard of hearing. The requirement to provide services to students who are limited English proficient and others is also governed by various Department policy memoranda including the September 27, 1991 memorandum, "Department of Education Policy Update on Schools' Obligations Toward National Origin Minority Students With Limited English Proficiency"; the December 3, 1985 guidance document, "The Office for Civil Rights' Title VI Language Minority Compliance Procedures"; and the May 1970 memorandum to school districts, "Identification of discrimination and Denial of Services on the Basis of National Origin," 35 FR 11595. These documents are available at <http://www.lep.gov>. We do not believe additional clarification is necessary.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of interpreting services appears to be limited to children who are deaf or hard of hearing, and recommended adding language to allow children without expressive speech to receive such services.

Discussion: Interpreting services, as defined in § 300.34(c)(4), clearly states that interpreting services are used with children who are deaf and hard of hearing. Therefore, a child who is not deaf or hard of hearing, but who is without expressive speech, would not be considered eligible to receive interpreting services as defined in § 300.34(c)(4). However, such a child could be considered eligible for speech-language pathology services, consistent with § 300.34(c)(15).

Changes: None.

Comment: Some commenters recommended including communication access real-time transcription (CART) services in the definition of interpreting services because these services are being used with increasing frequency in postsecondary education and employment settings, and familiarity and experience with CART services may better prepare children who are deaf or hard of hearing to transition to higher education and employment environments. A few commenters stated that the definition of interpreting services appears to limit interpreting services to the methods listed in § 300.34(c)(4), which exclude tactile and close vision interpreting for children who are deaf-blind.

Discussion: Although the definition of interpreting services is written broadly to include other types of interpreting services, we believe that it is important to include in the definition services in which oral communications are transcribed into real-time text. Therefore, we are adding language to § 300.34(c)(4) to refer to transcription services and include several examples of transcription systems used to provide such services.

We also believe that it is important that the definition of interpreting services include services for children who are deaf-blind. However, because there are many types of interpreting services for children who are deaf-blind, in addition to tactile and close vision interpreting services, we will add a more general statement to include interpreting services for children who are deaf-blind, rather than listing all the different methods that might be used for children who are deaf-blind.

Changes: We have restructured § 300.34(c)(4) and added "and transcription services such as communication real-time translation (CART), C-Print, and TypeWell" to the definition of interpreting services in paragraph (c)(4)(i). We have also added a new paragraph (c)(4)(ii) to include interpreting services for children who are deaf-blind.

Medical Services (§ 300.34(c)(5))

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of medical services is not in the Act and recommended that the definition be broader than the decision in Cedar Rapids Community School Dist. v. Garrett F., 526 U.S. 66 (1999), which the definition appears to follow.

Discussion: The list of related services in § 300.34(a) includes medical services for diagnostic and evaluation purposes, consistent with section 602(26) of the Act. The Department continues to believe that using language from the Act to define medical services is essential. Defining medical services more broadly, as recommended by the commenter, would not be consistent with the Act.

Changes: None.

Orientation and Mobility Services (§ 300.34(c)(7))

Comment: Several commenters supported including travel training in the definition of orientation and mobility services and recommended adding a reference to the definition of travel training in new § 300.39(b)(4) (proposed § 300.38(b)(4)). However, other commenters stated that travel training should appear as a distinct related service and should not be included in the definition of orientation and mobility services because children who are blind and visually impaired receive this type of instruction from certified orientation and mobility specialists. One commenter stated that the regulations should specify that travel training is for children with cognitive or other disabilities.

Discussion: We believe that including travel training in the definition of orientation and mobility services may be misinterpreted to mean that travel training is available only for children who are blind or visually impaired or that travel training is the same as orientation and mobility services. We will, therefore, remove travel training from § 300.34(c)(7). This change, however, does not diminish the services that are available to children who are blind or visually impaired.

Travel training is defined in new § 300.39(b)(4) (proposed § 300.38(b)(4)) for children with significant cognitive disabilities and any other children with disabilities who require this instruction, and, therefore, would be available for children who are blind or visually impaired, as determined by the child's IEP Team. Travel training is not the same as orientation and mobility services and is not intended to take the place of appropriate orientation and mobility services.

Changes: We have removed "travel training instruction" from § 300.34(c)(7)(ii) to avoid confusion with the definition of travel training in new § 300.39(b)(4) (proposed § 300.38(b)(4)), and to clarify that travel training is not the same as orientation and mobility services and cannot take the place of appropriate orientation and mobility services.

Comment: One commenter recommended that the regulations specify who is qualified to provide travel training instruction and stated that it is critical that skills such as street crossing be taught correctly.

Discussion: Section 300.156, consistent with section 612(a)(14) of the Act, requires each State to establish personnel qualifications to ensure that personnel necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act are appropriately and adequately prepared and trained and have the content knowledge and skills to serve children with disabilities. It is, therefore, the State's responsibility to determine the qualifications that are necessary to provide travel training instruction.

Changes: None.

Parent Counseling and Training (§ 300.34(c)(8))

Comment: A few commenters stated that the definition of parent counseling and training in § 300.34(c)(8) is not included in the definition of related services in section 602(26)(A) of the Act and, therefore, should not be included in the regulations.

Discussion: Paragraphs (i) and (ii) of § 300.34(c)(8), regarding assisting parents in understanding the special needs of their child, and providing parents with information about child development, respectively, are protected by section 607(b) of the Act, and cannot be removed. Section 300.34(c)(8)(iii), regarding helping parents acquire the skills to allow them to support the implementation of their child's IEP or IFSP, was added in the 1999 regulations to recognize the more active role of parents as participants in the education of their children. Although not included in the Act, we believe it is important to retain this provision in these regulations so that there is no question that parent counseling and training includes helping parents acquire skills that will help them support the implementation of their child's IEP or IFSP.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter recommended that the regulations describe the responsibility of LEAs to provide parent counseling and training.

Discussion: As with other related services, an LEA only is responsible for providing parent counseling and training if a child's IEP Team determines that it is necessary for the child to receive FAPE. To include this language in the definition of parent counseling and training, moreover, would be unnecessarily duplicative of § 300.17(d), which states that FAPE means special education and related services that are provided in conformity with an IEP that meets the requirements in §§ 300.320 through 300.324.

Changes: None.

Physical Therapy (§ 300.34(c)(9))

Comment: One commenter recommended the definition of physical therapy include related therapeutic services for children with degenerative diseases.

Discussion: We do not believe the suggested change is necessary because the definition of physical therapy is broadly defined and could include therapeutic services for children with degenerative diseases. It is the responsibility of the child's IEP Team to determine the special education and related services that are necessary for a child to receive FAPE. There is nothing in the Act that prohibits the provision of therapeutic services for children with degenerative diseases, if the IEP Team determines they are needed for an individual child and, thereby, includes the services in the child's IEP.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of physical therapy in § 300.34(c)(9) is circular and requested that a functional definition be provided.

Discussion: The definition of physical therapy has been in the regulations since 1977 and is commonly accepted by SEAs, LEAs, and other public agencies. We do not believe it is necessary to change the definition.

Changes: None.

Psychological Services (§ 300.34(c)(10))

Comment: One commenter recommended that the definition of psychological services include strategies to facilitate social-emotional learning.

Discussion: We do not believe the definition should be revised to add a specific reference to the strategies recommended by the commenter. The definition of psychological services is sufficiently broad to enable psychologists to be involved in strategies to facilitate social-emotional learning.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that unless the definition of psychological services includes research-based counseling, schools will argue that they are required to provide counseling services delivered by social workers because counseling is included in the definition of social work services in schools.

Discussion: We do not believe including research-based counseling in the definition of psychological services is necessary. Including counseling in the definition of social work services in schools in § 300.34(c)(14) is intended to indicate the types of personnel who assist in this activity and is not intended either to imply that school social workers are automatically qualified to perform counseling or to prohibit other qualified personnel from providing counseling, consistent with State requirements.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that other related services personnel, in addition to school psychologists, should be permitted to develop and deliver positive behavioral intervention strategies.

Discussion: There are many professionals who might also play a role in developing and delivering positive behavioral intervention strategies. The standards for personnel who assist in developing and delivering positive behavioral intervention strategies will vary depending on the requirements of the State. Including the development and delivery of positive behavioral intervention strategies in the definition of psychological services is not intended to imply that school psychologists are automatically qualified to perform these duties or to prohibit other qualified personnel from providing these services, consistent with State requirements.

Changes: None.

Recreation (§ 300.34(c)(11))

Comment: A few commenters requested modifying the definition of recreation to include therapeutic recreation services provided by a qualified recreational therapist, which include services that restore, remediate, or rehabilitate to improve functioning and independence, and reduce or eliminate the effects of illness or disability.

Discussion: We do not believe it is necessary to change the definition of recreation as recommended by the commenters because the definition is sufficiently broad to include the services mentioned by the commenters.

Changes: None.

School Health Services and School Nurse Services (Proposed School Nurse Services) (§ 300.34(c)(13))

Comment: Some commenters noted that while “school health services” is included in the list of related services in § 300.34(a), it is not defined, which will result in confusion about the relationship between “school health services” and “school nurse services.”

Some commenters stated that adding the definition of school nurse services and eliminating the definition of school health services must not narrow the range of related services available to children. One commenter recommended that the definition of school nurse services allow school nurse services to be provided by other qualified persons, as well as a qualified school nurse, because the majority of schools do not have a school nurse on staff. One commenter requested that the regulations clarify that schools can continue to use registered nurses or other personnel to provide school nurse services, consistent with State law. Another commenter stated that there is well-established case law upholding the obligation of an SEA and LEA to provide health-related services necessary for a child to benefit from special education.

Discussion: School health services was retained in the definition of related services in § 300.34(a). However, the definition of school health services was inadvertently removed in the NPRM. To correct this error, we will add school health services to the definition of school nurse services and clarify that school health services and school nurse services means health services that are designed to enable a child with a disability to receive FAPE. We will also add language to clarify that school nurse services are provided by a qualified school nurse and that school health services are provided by either a qualified school nurse or other qualified person. We recognize that most schools do not have a qualified school nurse on a full-time basis (i.e., a nurse that meets the State standards for a qualified school nurse), and that many schools rely on other qualified school personnel to provide school health services under the direction of a school nurse. Therefore, we believe it is important to retain the definition of school health services and school nurse services in these regulations.

With the changes made in § 300.34(c), it is not necessary for the reference to “school nurse services” in § 300.34(a) to include the phrase, “designed to enable a child with a disability to receive a free appropriate public education as described in the IEP of the child.” We will, therefore, remove this phrase in § 300.34(a).

Changes: Section 300.34(c)(13) has been revised to include a definition of school health services and school nurse services. Additional language has been added to clarify who provides school health services and school nurse services. We have also modified § 300.34(a) by deleting the redundant phrase, “designed to enable a child with a disability to receive a free appropriate public education as described in the IEP of the child.”

Comment: One commenter stated that adding school nurse services to the definition of related services makes it more burdensome for the delivery of services to children who are medically-fragile.

Discussion: It is unclear how adding school nurse services to the definition of related services affects services to children who are medically fragile. As defined in § 300.34(c)(13), school health services and school nurse services are designed to enable a child with a disability to receive FAPE as described in the child’s IEP. A child who is medically fragile and needs school health services or school nurse services in order to receive FAPE must be provided such services, as indicated in the child’s IEP.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of school nurse services should include services that enable a child with a disability to receive FAPE in the LRE. Another commenter stated that school nurses can be extremely supportive of children with disabilities receiving FAPE in the LRE and recommended changing the regulations to ensure that parents understand that the definition of related services includes school nurse services.

Discussion: The LRE requirements in §§ 300.114 through 300.120 provide, that to the maximum extent appropriate, children with disabilities are to be educated with children who are not disabled. It is not necessary to repeat this requirement in the definition of school health services and school nurse services.

We agree that school health services and school nurse services are important related services. Section 300.34(a) and section 602(26)(A) of the Act are clear that the definition of related services includes school health services and school nurse services. The IEP Team, of which the parent is an integral member, is responsible for determining the services that are necessary for the child to receive FAPE. We, therefore, do not believe that it is necessary to add a regulation requiring public agencies to ensure that parents understand that related services include school health services and school nurse services.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that including the phrase, “designed to enable a child with a disability to receive a free appropriate public education” in § 300.34(c)(13) in relation to school nurse services, is unnecessary and confusing.

Discussion: As stated in § 300.34(a), the purpose of related services is to assist a child with a disability to benefit from special education. We believe it is necessary to specify that school health services and school nurse services are related services only to the extent that the services allow a child to benefit from special education and enable a child with a disability to receive FAPE.

Changes: None.

Social Work Services in Schools (§ 300.34(c)(14))

Comment: One commenter recommended including strategies to facilitate social-emotional learning in the definition of social work services in schools. A few commenters stated that the role of the school social worker is evolving and recommended that the definition include the role of social workers as integral members of pre-referral teams that deliver interventions to decrease the number of referrals to special education. One commenter recommended that the definition include a reference to the social worker's role in addressing the relevant history and current functioning of an individual within his or her environmental context, rather than referring to social-developmental histories. Another commenter stated that social workers are trained to find resources in the home, school, and community and recommended including such language in the definition.

Discussion: The definition of social work services in schools is sufficiently broad to include the services described by the commenters and we do not believe the definition should be revised to add these more specific functions.

Changes: None.

Comment: One commenter stated that the definition of social work services in schools removes language from the 1983 regulations that states that social work services allow children with disabilities to maximize benefit from the learning program. The commenter stated that this is a higher standard than what is required in § 300.34(c)(14), which only requires that services enable a child to learn as effectively as possible, and, therefore, the 1983 definition should be retained, consistent with section 607(b) of the Act.
